HISTORY
From 1972-1976 NDSU had a summer touring company called the Prairie Stage. Dr. Fred Walsh, Theatre Chairman, at this time, explained the concept of the Prairie Stage in his unpublished autobiography: “That moment when for the first time I saw the Prairie Stage tent erected and fully equipped with stage, rows of platforms for the seating area supporting approximately 200 colorful contoured seats, all awaiting the arrival of an audience, was a proud one.” “Why do something like the Prairie Stage which is a lot harder work than teaching a few summer school classes? Well, first of all---and this is so very important---for the pure joy of doing it. Secondly, it gave our student actors that much more experience. Thirdly, it fulfilled two of the three functions of a land-grant institution, teaching and service.” “After five seasons, I brought the tent show to a halt. Costs had risen to such a level that to have continued we would have been as the saying goes, ‘sending good money after bad.’ We would have lost money even playing to capacity crowds.”

SCOPE & CONTENT

The records consist of background information about the creation of the Prairie Stage, information about each of the five summer seasons (1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976), the Fall 1976 Tour and the attempted revival in 1990-1991.
