

Chapman issues statement on vandalism

In response to vandalism to banners and sidewalk messages during "Coming Out Week" at NDSU and the Minnesota State University Moorhead, President Joseph A. Chapman held a news conference Oct. 12 to voice his concerns.

Accompanied by Tadd Tobkin, student body president; Sarah Jacobson, University Senate presiding officer; and Allyn Kostecki, Staff Senate president, Chapman read the following statement to news reporters:

"We are making this statement in response to the vandalism of banners hung on campus and the graphically negative and threatening notices aimed at members of the Ten Percent Society chalked on campus sidewalks. These actions by a few individuals apparently reflect their disapproval of the Ten Percent Society and its efforts to educate our community about the issues and discrimination faced by individuals who are gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgendered. Ironically, these reprehensible actions demonstrate the need for such educational efforts.

"We are particularly disturbed by the implications of violence and hatred that are reflected in actions taken secretly and anonymously. Universities have long been recognized as a "marketplace of ideas." The very nature of the academic community is to explore multiple perspectives, ideas and viewpoints about all kinds of issues. We in the academy expect to disagree, and yet we hope to gain, through civil discourse about these differences, a deeper understanding of other perspectives. While we may not change our minds, we must bring to the discussion an expectation that we can learn and grow as a result of participation.

"The actions taken by these yet unknown individuals violate these basic principles of higher education, and we want to publicly state our strongest objection to them. To express views using tactics of fear and intimidation contradicts the principle of the free exchange of ideas. We want to show our concern and support for those who feel most vulnerable as a result of these actions. We place a high value on the protection and rights of others, and we want the campus community to know that a concerted effort is being made to find the responsible individuals. To help us in this effort, we are offering a $1,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest and conviction or other determination of responsibility of the individual or individuals involved in these actions."

Chapman also said additional security measures were planned for Homecoming activities Oct. 13-14 to assure the safety of all participants.

"We're taking steps to identify the individual or individuals involved in this. We are treating it very seriously. We're going to pursue it with all the rigor at our disposal," he said of the investigation. "I'm concerned about the safety of all of our faculty, staff, students and associates of the institution. (The vandalism and threats are) an affront to all of us."

Campus forum planned on higher ed roundtable report

A campus forum is planned to discuss the higher education roundtable report at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 25, in the Alumni Center Reimers Room. Chancellor Larry Isaak, State Sen. David Nething and President Joseph A. Chapman are scheduled to speak.

American Online executive to give talk at NDSU

George Vrandenburg, America Online Inc. senior vice president for global and strategic policy, is scheduled to present a public forum at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 25, in Festival Concert Hall. Vrandenburg's appearance is sponsored by NDSU and the Information Technology Council of North Dakota. He comes to the state at the invitation of U.S. Sen. Kent Conrad.

Vrandenburg, who joined America Online as general counsel in 1997, is a key voice in shaping the interactive policy debate in the United States and overseas. He works with governments and industry leaders to help craft a policy framework that will guide the online medium in a way that promotes the public interest.

"Welcoming Mr. Vrandenburg to North Dakota provides a rare opportunity for all of us to learn about the high tech issues facing our state from one of the world's leading authorities," said NDSU President Joseph A. Chapman. "The Internet continues to be a major factor in our changing business world and society. People like Mr. Vrandenburg will help shape its future and he can supply valuable information about that process."

Brian Wolf, Information Technology Council president, said, "North Dakota's future depends on our ability to keep pace with technology as it affects government, education and business development. The council is delighted to help bring Mr. Vrandenburg to NDSU so we can hear more about how the Internet can benefit our state."

Vrandenburg has been in the forefront on a number of issues including protecting consumer privacy online, winning industry support for a pledge of "zero tolerance" for crimes against children online, campaigning against junk e-mail, protecting intellectual property online and developing a framework for e-commerce and international trade.

He has testified before congress on e-commerce, copyright and privacy issues. He is a member of the boards of the Lawyers' Committee for Human Rights, the Internet Policy Institute, the Internet Content Rating Association (Europe) and the Northern Virginia Technology Council.

Vrandenburg previously was senior vice president and general counsel for CBS Inc. and executive vice president of Fox Inc. Prior to joining America Online, he was a senior partner of the Los Angeles office of Latham and Watkins and co-chair of its entertainment and media practice group. He earned his bachelor's degree from Oberlin College and his juris doctorate from Harvard Law School.

He is a member of the UCLA Center for Communication Policy's board of governors and a visiting scholar of the Annenberg School of Communications, University of Southern California.

University Senate discusses roundtable report

The University Senate on Sept. 9 began discussions on the major planning themes outlined in President Joseph A. Chapman's State of the University Address and "A North Dakota University System for the 21st Century," a report of the roundtable for the North Dakota Legislative Council Interim Committee on Higher Education.

Chapman's themes, presented during his Sept. 7 address, are "It's About People," "Students Are Paramount," "Leveraging Support," "Programs" and "Status." The roundtable report, prepared May 25, is a document intended to address the expectations of the university system in meeting the state's needs in the coming century.

"President Chapman has said he wants to engage as many university stakeholders as possible in this planning process," said Sarah Jacobson, associate professor of business administration and University Senate presiding officer. "All of the constituencies of administration, faculty, staff and students come together in the University Senate, so it makes a great opportunity for dialogue between those different groups on how President Chapman's themes may play out in terms of goals for the university."

The senators will continue discussions during meetings in November and December. Jacobson said there may then be a further process of evaluating and prioritizing the information through the Group Decision Center.

Meantime, a campus forum is planned to discuss the roundtable report at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 25, in the Alumni Center Reimers Room. Chancellor Larry Isaak, State Sen. David Nething and Chapman are scheduled to speak at the meeting.

"We're hoping the input and shared dialogue around the issues may contribute to the planning process in a substantive way," Jacobson said.

In other action, the University Senate approved a number of NDSU Policy Manual changes offered by the Policy Coordination Committee and approved recommendations that previously had been forwarded by the Ad Hoc Committee on Corporate Sponsorship.

Flu shot clinic update

Because of a shortage of flu shot vaccines and a delay in receiving them, NDSU has not scheduled a flu shot clinic. If the university is able to provide clinics, they will be scheduled in December, which will still allow people to be protected when the worst part of the flu season hits in January and February.

Those in high risk groups should get their flu shots from their physician and not wait for a campus clinic. This includes everyone over age 65; people with chronic medical problems including pulmonary, cardiac, metabolic or renal diseases; people with suppressed immune systems; women in their second or third trimester of pregnancy; and household members of persons at high risk for influenza complications.

Anyone with questions regarding vaccinations should contact Lyn Pletta, benefits coordinator, at 1-8965.

Dining Services alerts campus to need for shared leave

Delores Knaus, an employee of Memorial Union Dining Services, has been diagnosed with a medical condition and will soon have exhausted her annual leave and sick leave. She is eligible for the Shared Leave Program, and university employees are asked to help if possible.

NDSU Policy Manual Section 147 states that an individual may donate a portion of his or her annual leave under these guidelines:

- If you choose to donate annual leave, you must donate it in full hour increments and you must retain a leave balance of at least 40 hours for your own use.
- If you choose to donate sick leave, you can donate up to 5 percent of your accrued leave hours in full-hour increments.

Anyone who would like to donate hours should contact Kristina Otte at 1-8122. If necessary, leave voice mail stating your name and building. Forms will be forwarded to you.

NDSU flood recovery featured in 'Student Affairs Today'

NDSU's recovery efforts from the June flood were recently featured in a front page article of "Student Affairs Today," a national newsletter for higher education professionals.

The article, which focused on managing a crisis, detailed NDSU's "people first" approach to the situation, which included holding regular meetings to update faculty and staff, posting updates on the Web and making sure employees' own homes were taken care of before asking them to help with the campus cleanup.

In the article, George Wallman, vice president of student affairs, spoke about overcoming the absence of phone and computer lines for two weeks, setting up a call campaign to assure new students campus would be ready by fall and recovering quickly enough to continue with orientation only a week after the flood.

Wallman credited President Chapman's leadership for the smooth recovery process. "He knew we had to deal with this as quickly as possible, so he made decisions left and right to relieve pressure from the staff," he said.

Intensive English Language Program scheduled for spring semester

The Intensive English Language Program (IELP) is scheduled for spring semester, Jan. 8 to May 4, 2001. The course is designed to develop skills for academic study and general use of the English language in the United States.

The IELP is open to any high school graduate interested in studying advanced English. The program assists international undergraduate and graduate students who are conditionally admitted to NDSU meet the English proficiency requirement. Prospective international teaching assistants who have not obtained a 600 on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) are required to attend the program. The IELP also is available for foreign scholars and other visitors on campus and in the community who wish to improve their English skills.

The IELP is a self-supporting program offered through the Division of Continuing Education. Tuition, which includes books and health insurance, is $2,590 for the spring program. Classes meet 12 hours per week with additional time for tutoring and practice in the language laboratory. The IELP also is offered during the summer for five weeks and fall semester for 15 weeks.

For more information, contact the Office of International Programs, 338 Ceres Hall, at 1-7895, or ndsui_international@ndsu.nodak.edu or visit www.ndsu.nodak.edu/International.

Iowa governor shares ideas with agriculture students

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack told NDSU agriculture students Oct. 10 that family farmers have "the most difficult job in America today," but he expects better times in the future for the nation's producers. Vilsack was elected in 1998.

Speaking as a guest lecturer to the econometrics graduate course taught by Won Koo, professor of agribusiness and applied economics, and a group of freshman agriculture majors, Vilsack said, "Extraordinary things will happen in your lifetime. I expect profits to return to agriculture."

He said the students in the audience will see a time when there are 10-14 billion people on the earth. "They will all need to be fed," Vilsack said, noting he expects expanded genetic plant research. "We'll need to grow more on less land. We'll need to supply food that is more nutritious and tailor crops to specific processing needs."

To enhance agriculture, Vilsack said additional value-added efforts are needed, as are increased exports. He said new manufacturing uses for commodities must be developed, and he urged a larger private land conservation program.

NDSU Libraries to offer electronic Elsevier journals

NDSU Libraries has switched formats for journals published by Elsevier Science from paper to electronic format.

Elsevier, one of the world's foremost scholarly publishers, calls the electronic journal package "ScienceDirect," and it allows full text access to all 92 titles NDSU previously subscribed in print format. The format is enhanced by an automatic table-of-contents service, hyperlinked references and access to other full text journals. In addition, the system also serves as an abstracting and indexing database covering important journals in all fields of science.

NDSU Libraries has scheduled a seminar to cover the features of the research resource from 2-3:30 p.m. Oct. 23. It will consist of an overview, live demonstration, help in setting up personal ScienceDirect accounts and other features. To register, or for more information, call Char Myhre, educational services librarian, at 1-9746.

Ambrosio presents research at international conference

Thomas Ambrosio, assistant professor of political science, presented a portion of his research agenda at an international conference Oct. 10 at the University of South Dakota, Vermillion.

The conference, called "A Century of Killing: Genocide and Ethnic Cleansing in the 20th Century," was co-sponsored by USD's W.O. Faber Center for Civic Leadership, Department of Political Science and the Federal Republic of Germany. More than 30 American and international scholars presented papers on contemporary and historical cases of ethnic cleansing and genocide, as well as international legal responses to such atrocities.

Ambrosio's paper, "Congressional Perceptions of Ethnic Cleansing," examined the rhetoric of genocide and ethnic cleansing in light of ethnic lobbies and congressional policies.

Kapplinger exhibits 'Sentinel Sounds'

The Northwest Art Center at Minot State University currently is exhibiting "Sentinel Sounds: An Exhibition of Prints and Drawings" by Kent Kapplinger, assistant professor of art.

The exhibit will be displayed in Minot through Nov. 22. It will be exhibited at the Lake Region Heritage Center in Devils Lake, N.D., from March 7 to April 4, 2001. The exhibit was displayed at The Arts Center in Jamestown, N.D., in June 2001.

Kapplinger is director of the Printmaking Education and Research Studio (PEARS) program at NDSU. He has taught numerous workshops in printmaking and has received fellowships from the Woodstock School of Art in New York and Vinalhaven Press in Maine.

An advocate for environmental awareness, Kapplinger said he uses his art to amplify nature's sentinel voices. He said his artwork defines a personal search for balance, order and regeneration through the medium of printmaking and drawing, and that his works reveal layered aspects of his personal life and society at large.

Kapplinger's work has been exhibited in Africa, England, Japan, Norway, Slovenia and Spain. His works can be found in several collections, including the U.S. Art in Embassies Program in Washington, D.C., and The Print Consortium in Kansas City, Mo.

History faculty present at conference

Several members of the history department participated in the Northern Great Plains History Conference Sept. 28-30, in Mankato, Minn.

David Danbom, professor of history, presented the paper "The Single Man Problem in Fargo During the Great Depression," which explored the poor treatment of single, working-class men in the provision of employment and relief in Fargo during the Depression. The paper was drawn from his on-going research on Fargo in the 1930s.

Jim Norris, assistant professor of history, presented a paper entitled "Necessity and Advantage: Migrant Workers and Sugar Beet Producers in the Red River Valley, 1942-1954," which traced the efforts of the American Crystal Sugar Co. to attract migrant laborers to the valley for beet work. It is part of his research on Latino migrants to this region.

In addition, Gerald Anderson, associate professor of history, and Claire Strom, assistant professor of history, provided commentary in sessions, and Larry Peterson, chair and professor of history, chaired a session at the conference.

Mahalingam to present paper at international CAAD conference

A paper by Ganapathy Mahalingam, assistant professor of architecture and landscape architecture, based on his current research in computer-aided architectural design, was accepted for presentation at the CAAD Futures 2001 conference. The event is planned for July 2001 at the Eindhoven Institute of Technology, Netherlands.

The bi-annual conference is held to promote the advancement of computer-aided architectural design in the service of professionals concerned with the quality of the built environment. Mahalingam's paper, titled "POCHE: Polyhedral Objects Controlled by Heteromorphic Effectors," focuses on computational techniques to model the bidirectional response of architectural forms to interior and exterior environments and also to interior and exterior performance criteria. The research builds on the earlier work of Mahalingam in the area of auditorium design systems and extends that research in new directions.

Events

Gallery to exhibit 'rock art'

The Memorial Union Gallery is scheduled to exhibit "Linda Olson: Rock Art and Prints" Oct. 23-Nov. 16. A reception is planned for 4-6 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 14, with an artist talk and slide presentation set for noon Wednesday, Oct. 15, in the Memorial Union Century Theater.

Olson, an assistant professor of art at Minot State University, has recorded the rock art of American Indians in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and elsewhere since 1988. She has exhibited her work throughout North Dakota and across the United States and in Norway.

For more information on the exhibit, call the Gallery at 1-7900.

Pedagogical luncheon planned on active learning

Teaching faculty and staff are invited to a pedagogical luncheon scheduled from 12:30-1:50 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 26, in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room. Betty Patterson, assistant professor of pharmacy, will present "Active Learning: Where I Have Been and Where I Am Going."

Patterson will discuss active learning activities, including a problem-based-learning (PBL) example, she used last year. She has planned two group activities during the luncheon, addressing specific issues of problems with group rules and problems with peer evaluations. She will share comments from the AACP summer institute on PBL and her plans for the coming year based on her experiences, course evaluations and feedback on PBL.

Anyone interested in attending the session, should register by contacting Mary Stoa at 1-8671 or Mary_Stoa@ndsu.nodak.edu by Monday, Oct. 23. Indicate your meal choice from hot beef sandwich or vegetable burger. This event is sponsored by the Faculty Institute for Excellence in Learning (FIEL) with a grant from the Bush Foundation to promote active learning in classrooms. For more details, contact Sudhir Mehta, professor of mechanical engineering, at 1-7871.

Cosgrove to present English seminar

Bill Cosgrove, professor of English, is scheduled to present "Stories, Voices and Theories of Midwestern Modern Regionalism, or Twain, Huck and Holden Made Me Do It" at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 18, in Minard 209.

Cosgrove will examine the declining commercial interest in the short story format and argue the merits of using stories and voices of the Midwest as subjects of serious and quality fiction. While some critics have dismissed the use of unexceptional, small-town lives, Cosgrove points to Los Hudson and Tom McGrath, who spoke out against such criticism and argued local color details have never gone out of style in American fiction.

Focusing on Ron Block's "The Dirty Shame Hotel and Other Stories" and "Mark Twain Made Me Do It and Other Plains Adventures," by Bryan Jones, Cosgrove also will discuss examples of what he calls contemporary Midwestern regionalism.

The seminar is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Cosgrove at 1-7147 or bill_cosgrove@ndsu.nodak.edu or Anjali Pandey at 1-7148 or anjali_pandey@ndsu.nodak.edu.

LaDuke to speak at NDSU

Winona LaDuke, running mate of Green Party presidential candidate Ralph Nader, is scheduled to speak at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 30, in the Memorial Union Century Theater. Her visit is sponsored by the NDSU Multicultural Studies department and NDSU Student Government.

The event is free and open to the public.

ITS and computer science to sponsor United Way silent auction

Information Technology Services and the computer science department are sponsoring a silent auction on behalf of United Way of Cass-Clay. The event is scheduled for 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Friday, Oct. 27, in IACC 204. Last year, the auction raised $594.75.

Faculty, staff and students at NDSU may donate items to the auction. The items don't have to be new or purchased; they might be craft items or services you can provide. To donate items go to <http://wow.cc.ndsu.nodak.edu/users/unitedway/> and complete a short form. A list of donated items also will be posted at this site.

Since baked goods have proven popular in the past, rather than auctioning them, they will be available for purchase. Used books also will be for sale.

Brown bag seminars to focus on upcoming election

Valerie O'Regan and Steve Stambough, both assistant professors of political science, are scheduled to present "Election 2001! What's Going to Happen and What Does it Mean?" at noon Wednesday, Oct. 25, in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room.

O'Regan and Stambough will discuss how the coming election will shape the political agenda for the future. They will examine the likely outcomes of the election, if North Dakota's Congressional delegation will change, the possibility of North Dakota's first female governor and other topics.

The seminar is being co-sponsored by the YMCA of NDSU and the Women's Studies department.

Heidi Heitkamp, Democratic candidate for North Dakota governor, and Aaron Krauter, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, are scheduled to present "Keep our Kids in North Dakota," at noon Friday, Oct. 27, in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room.

Both seminars are free and open to the public. For more information, contact the YMCA of NDSU at 235-8772.

NDSU/MeritCare respiratory care all-class reunion held

The first NDSU/MeritCare respiratory care all-class reunion was held Sept. 29-30. Activities included a banquet at the NDSU Alumni Center with a keynote address by Terry Fleck, who presented "Attitude Virus." Alumni profiles also were part of the event, as were inductions into the Lambda Beta Honor Society.

The reunion also included a tailgate party and attending the Bison/Sioux football game.

Tri-College Women United plan fall networking dinner

The Tri-College Women United Committee has scheduled its annual Fall Networking Dinner at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 26, in Concordia College's Knutson Center Centrum. TCWU sponsors two networking dinners each year in conjunction with a presentation and discussion focusing on issues related to women and academia.

The topic of the dinner and discussion is "Sex and Power: The Cycles of Violence." Carmen Collins, from the Rape and Abuse Crisis Center, will present a brief talk on sexual harassment, "What It Is," followed by a short dramatic piece, "The Heart Within the Harlot," by Concordia theater student Laura Wilhelm. Following the presentations, they will be joined by panelists Mike Pehler, security director at Minnesota State University Moorhead, and Patty Corwin, senior lecturer of sociology at NDSU and former police officer, for a question and answer session and group discussion.

The event is open to the public. Reservations and payment must be made by Friday, Oct. 20, for the dinner, which costs $5 for Tri-College students and $10 for others. The presentation and discussion at 6:30 p.m. is free and open to the public. For dinner reservations, call Lindsay Brown at 1-9731.

Stress management seminar planned

NDSU Continuing Education is sponsoring "Strategies for Stress: Learn How to Build and Maintain Your Own Wheel of Wellness" from 9 a.m.-noon Saturday, Oct. 28, in Loftsgard 380.

The session is designed to provide participants with an opportunity to explore a personalized, holistic approach to living a balanced lifestyle that promotes physical, emotional, mental and spiritual well-being.

It will be presented by Ann Dolence, of The Leisure Connection, Fargo. Dolence has 17 years of experience as a recreation therapist. She promotes simple techniques that can be implemented daily to make life less stressful. She will teach participants how stress affects the body's defense mechanism and its resistance to illness and share online resources that support a healthy and balanced well being. Participants also will complete a personal wheel of wellness to use as an assessment tool, and develop a one-month calendar for healthy balance between work, rest and leisure.

The cost of the seminar is $30. To register, go to www.ndsu.edu/conted, or call 1-7015 for registration materials. Participants are asked to register by Oct. 20.
