

NDSU plans events to commemorate one-year anniversary of terrorist attacks

A memorial ringing of the campus chimes and origami peace cranes are among the campus events planned to commemorate the first anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States. Faculty, staff and students are invited to participate in all events, and "Walk Away with Hope," the campuswide theme for the day.

President Bush issued a formal proclamation Sept. 4 designating Sept. 11 as Patriot Day in honor of those who perished in the terrorist attacks.

A 90-page list of names of the victims of the attacks will be on display from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Memorial Union Alumni Lounge. Participants will have the opportunity to write victims' names on memorial ribbons and make origami peace cranes.

According to Kara Stack, assistant director for campus programs, the peace cranes are a symbol of peace and hope. Members of the Residence Hall Association will assist people in making their own peace crane. Attendees may either take their peace crane home with them or leave for a memorial mobile of the cranes for display in the Memorial Union.

Attendees also will have the opportunity to sign up with the American Red Cross as future blood donors. "Since the Red Cross can only handle so many blood donations at a time, we wanted to create a list of donors that can be called on in the future when they really have a need," Stack said. Monetary donations also will be accepted.

CNN coverage also will be shown all day on the large screen television in the Alumni Lounge.

The campus chimes will sound 30 times, once for each 100 victims, at 9:11 a.m. and 9:11 p.m., inviting anyone hearing the chimes to observe a voluntary moment of silence. Faculty and staff may pause during classes and meetings to allow for remembrance.

Student body president James Burgum was a key participant in planning the student-driven campus events. "Many students were attending class at NDSU the day when our nation was attacked and can remember vividly what they were doing and the emotions that they were feeling," Burgum said. "We felt that something needed to happen in remembrance of Sept. 11 here on campus. The theme that the planning team came up with is moving forward with hope. This theme puts into context the message we would like to send as students."

The campus events are being held in conjunction with communitywide events scheduled at various locations throughout the day. Complete information can be found online at www.sept11remembered.org. The schedule of events is updated frequently, and NDSU's events will be included on the Web site.

Campus events are sponsored by NDSU student leaders including Student Government, Residence Life, the Residence Hall Association, Greek Life, Multicultural Student Services, International Student Programs and the Memorial Union. Research 2 groundbreaking scheduled

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Research 2 building and the dedication of the Research 1 building are set for 2-3:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 16, in the NDSU Research and Technology Park, located at 18th Street and 17th Avenue North.

Research 2 will be a 75,000-square foot structure devoted primarily to nanoscale science and engineering research. It will contain cleanrooms, electronics fabrication tools and state-of-the-art synthesis and characterization equipment. There will be space for more than 125 researchers and support staff. When fully equipped, the project will be valued at $26 million to $28 million. Construction is expected to be completed in spring 2004.

Research 1 is a $6.2 million, two-floor facility with approximately 13 laboratories, concentrating largely on coatings and materials. The 40,000-square foot building currently houses about 80 staff and researchers and has a maximum capacity of 110 personnel.

"This will be an exciting day for the park, NDSU and the state," said Tony Grindberg, NDSU Research and Technology Park executive director. "The investment being made in the Center for Nanoscale Science and Engineering is going to produce dividends for many years to come. The infrastructure for research will help drive economic development in our state."

Parking is limited, so persons on campus are asked to use the shuttle bus to attend the event.

Family Therapy Center receives Otto Bremer grant

The Family Therapy Center, a division of the Marriage and Family Therapy Program at NDSU, has been awarded a three-year, $88,000 grant from the Otto Bremer Foundation.

The grant will be used primarily to help fund the clinic coordinator's salary over the next three years. Funds also have been ear-marked for improvements to the clinic and to continue the program's outreach to the community, especially lower income and minority families.

Located in the Alba Bales house, the clinic offers therapy services to individuals, couples and families in the community. Fees are based on a sliding scale. NDSU faculty and staff also are welcome to use the clinic's services, and will receive a $10 discount. Services are available to NDSU students free of charge.

Counseling and disability services accreditation renewed

Counseling and Disability Services (CDS) has been re-accredited by the International Association of Counseling Services Inc.

Counseling and Disability Services provides a full range of confidential counseling services, including services for students with disabilities, personal growth classes, career counseling and limited psychiatric service for students. Consultation is available for faculty and staff as well. CDS provides a wide range of standardized testing including GED and ACT tests. More information about available services can be found at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/counseling/.

Agriculture and rural life bibliography developed

A new computer-searchable bibliography will make it much easier to find publications related to the history of North Dakota agriculture and rural life in the state. Compiled through a project co-chaired by Kathie Richardson, agriculture sciences librarian, and John Bye, university archivist, the bibliography includes books, periodicals, NDSU Extension Service publications and Experiment Station publications from 1860-1945.

"The bibliography will be used by scholars, researchers, students and people interested in the early agriculture and rural life of North Dakota," Richardson said, noting it includes more than 1,400 entries. "The searchable aspect to the bibliography makes it more useful. It is great fun."

The bibliography can be accessed at www.lib.ndsu.nodak.edu and by clicking on "ND Ag and Rural Bib." The bibliography includes the general subject areas of agriculture; immigration; rural and agrarian politics; rural education; rural, frontier and pioneer life; and water, climate and natural resources.

The project is part of a national preservation program for agricultural literature under the leadership of the United States Agricultural Information Network and the National Agricultural Library. The effort includes work done at Cornell University, as well as participation from land-grant universities in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Texas and Wisconsin.

"I spent about a quarter of my time over the past two years on this project," Richardson said, acknowledging the assistance of research assistant Elena Knickman. "I found the work very enjoyable because I hadn't dealt with the historical aspect of these publications before. It was very interesting."

Richardson said the North Dakota project looked at core historical literature like popular and trade journals, land-grant publications and state documents.

The bibliography was reviewed by experts, including H. Roald Lund, professor emeritus of plant sciences; Gary Goreham, associate professor and chair of sociology/anthropology; David Danbom, professor of history; and Barbara Handy-Marchello, University of North Dakota professor and chair of history.

In another phase of the project, selected publications from the list were preserved on archival quality microfilm by Preservation Resources, a Pennsylvania company. Master reels were sent to the national storage facility in Pennsylvania for preservation, "print master" copies went to the State Historical Society in Bismarck and service copies are available to users at the NDSU Libraries.

Supplying materials for microfilming were the NDSU Libraries, NDSU Institute for Regional Studies and University Archives, State Historical Society of North Dakota, North Dakota State Library, University of North Dakota, National Agricultural Library, Minot State University, Columbia University, Minnesota Historical Society, University of Minnesota, Ohio State University and the Wisconsin Historical Society. All items microfilmed as part of the North Dakota project are available for interlibrary loan from the NDSU Libraries.

The $58,000 project is funded with $26,000 from the National Endowment for the Humanities and in-kind services from the NDSU Libraries.

ND EPSCoR seeks research mentors

Faculty in the sciences, engineering and mathematics are invited to participate as research mentors in North Dakota Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (ND EPSCoR) Science Outreach and Recruitment programs.

The Science Bound program targets entering freshman who show an interest in the science, engineering and mathematics fields. Students work on original research projects with the mentor.

The Advanced Undergraduate Research Awards (AURA) program provides summer undergraduate research opportunities.

The Faculty Laboratory and Research Experience (FLARE) program encourages collaboration between faculty of the research universities, and faculty of the North Dakota comprehensive and liberal arts colleges, universities and tribal colleges.

Faculty can register their research topics on the ND EPSCoR Web page at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/epscor/science_outreach. The closing date to register as a mentor is Sept. 27.

Economics honor society chapter established at NDSU

The Department of Agribusiness and Applied Economics has been chartered to establish a chapter of Omicron Delta Epsilon, the international honor society in economics.

The society confers distinction for high scholastic achievement in economics to both students and faculty, and stimulates and promotes student interest in all aspects of economics. Its publication, "The American Economist," provides an outlet for undergraduate and graduate student papers. Membership includes undergraduate, graduate, faculty, alumni and honorary members.

Undergraduate membership is open to students who make economics one of their major interests, primarily evidenced by pursuing either a major or a minor in economics or a related field. Minimum undergraduate requirements are 12 semester hours of economics with 3.0 minimum grade point average. Interested students and faculty should contact Stan Herren, the local chapter representative, at 1-7698.

Tri-College Nursing Consortium seeks national accreditation

The Tri-College University Nursing Consortium is conducting a self-study in preparation for its upcoming accreditation visit by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education scheduled for Nov. 6-8.

The commission, formed in 1996, is fully approved by the U.S. Department of Education to review baccalaureate and graduate nursing programs. Accreditation by the commission will replace accreditation by the National League for Nursing that is currently used by the Tri-College Consortium.

The self-study process requires that all interested parties be given an opportunity to provide input. Anyone wishing to participate should submit comments on the quality and curriculum to Mark Jenkins, Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education, One Dupont Circle NW Suite 530, Washington, D.C., 20035-1120.

For more information, contact Jane Giedt, TCU Nursing Consortium director, at 236-4699 or giedt@mnstate.edu.

Workshop held for tribal college faculty, reservation high school teachers

Workshop participants experiment in the civil engineering lab

A planning workshop for tribal college math and science faculty and North Dakota reservation high school teachers was held Aug. 1-3 on the NDSU campus.

Participants developed lesson plans for a series of one-day academies developed for reservation high school students scheduled for summer 2003. Topics discussed included GPS/GIS, wind energy, laws of motion, acids and bases, creative problem solving, and batteries and mirrors.

The workshop is part of a five-year collaborative project between NDSU and the five tribally controlled colleges developed to attract American Indian high school students to science, mathematics and engineering fields. The project, funded by the Office of Naval Research, recently finished its third year.

The workshop coordinator was Wei Lin, assistant professor of civil engineering. Other contributors were G. Padmanabhan, professor and chair of civil engineering; Robert Pieri, professor of mechanical engineering; and Floyd Patterson, associate professor of electrical and computer engineering.

For more information contact Padmanabhan at 1-7043.

Author Blackorby dies

Edward Blackorby, author of the North Dakota Institute for Regional Studies publication, "Prairie Populist: The Life and Times of Usher Burdick," died Aug. 28 in Minneapolis. He was 91. Memorial services were held Sept. 6 and Sept. 9 in Eau Claire, Wis.

Best known for his book "Prairie Rebel: The Public Life of William Lemke," Blackorby also wrote for a number of publications, including North Dakota History, Journal of American History, the Dictionary of American Biography and Essays on Western History.

Blackorby earned his bachelor's degree at Mayville State University and his master's degree and doctorate at the University of North Dakota. He spent 51 years teaching, the last 20 years as a professor of history at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. He also taught at Dickinson State University and UND, and was a teacher and administrator in North Dakota public schools.

Blackorby is survived by one son and one grandson. He was preceded in death by his wife, Jewel. Cards and memorials may be sent to the family at 8102 Highwood Drive, Bloomington, Minn., 55438.

Theeler named North Dakota NCAA Woman of the Year

May graduate Jill Theeler was selected as North Dakota NCAA Woman of the Year. The All-American sprinter was among award winners representing 49 states and the District of Columbia.

The award honors outstanding female student-athletes who have excelled in academics, athletics and community leadership, and have completed their collegiate athletics eligibility.

The Mitchell, S.D., native maintained a 4.0 grade point average as an undergraduate, while earning 19 All-American honors during her track career. She currently is attending classes at Ohio University working toward a master's degree in sports administration.

She recently was named NCAA Division II Female Scholar-Athlete of the Year by the NCAA Division II Commissioners Association, and was earlier honored with the North Central Conference's Stan Marshall Award. She was selected as the 2002-03 Verizon College Women's Cross Country/Track Academic All-American of the Year. She is a three-time Verizon College Academic All-American, a three-time member of the United States Track Coaches Association All-Academic team and a three-time member of the NCC Academic At-Large first team.

More than 340 student-athletes were nominated for the award. State winners were selected by a committee comprised of representatives from member schools.

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics will announce the 10 finalists for the national title later this month. The winner will be announced at the NCAA Woman of the Year dinner scheduled for Nov. 2 in Indianapolis.

Events

Arts and humanities summit scheduled

The first NDUS Arts and Humanities Summit is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 6-Tuesday, Oct. 8, at the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks.

North Dakota native Clay Jenkinson will portray a historical figure and offer a North Dakota perspective on arts and humanities educational programming. Senior scholars from the Carnegie Foundation and the Association of American Colleges and Universities will discuss trends and projects from a national perspective.

Musical and dramatic performances by NDUS faculty, students and others are scheduled. Also scheduled are discussions of history, literature, poetry, philosophy, theatre and art, and displays of literary pieces and works of art.

More information and registration instructions can be found online at www.conted.und.edu/A&Hsummit/index.html.

NDSU to host second 'virtual conference'

The Second Virtual Conference on Genomics and Bioinformatics is scheduled for Sept. 24-26 in the NDSU Memorial Union's Century Theater. The conference is expected to draw participants from around the world through the Internet and Internet2.

Genomics is the study of all the genes as a dynamic system and results in massive amounts of data. Bioinformatics provides new ways of extracting knowledge from the large database that is doubling in size every 12 to 14 months.

"The topic is extremely interesting and impacts nearly everybody," said Ed Deckard, professor of plant sciences, noting a large NDSU team is responsible for organizing the conference. "Also, the way the conference is presented virtually through the Internet and Internet2 is one of a kind. It's really neat that it starts here at NDSU."

Leading experts from private and public institutions have been invited to speak at the conference. Most of them will present from the Century Theater, but others will speak from some of the 17 Access Grid nodes that will be included in the conference across the country and internationally.

Invited speakers include Gabriella Ryan Adams, Informax Inc.; Robert Berwick, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Jeff W. Bizzaro, director of Bioinformatics.Org; Dan Brock, Institute of Bioethics, National Institutes of Health; Dennis Fernandez, Fernandez and Associates LLP; David Galbraith, Department of Plant Sciences, University of Arizona; Pandjassarame Kanguane, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore; Toni Kazic, University of Missouri, Columbia; Todd Martinsky, executive vice president, Principal TeleChem International; Gail McLean, program director, USDA Bioinformatics Program; Benjamin F. Matthews, USDA-ARS Soybean Genomics and Improvement Laboratory; Mark Miller, bioinformatics project coordinator, San Diego Supercomputer Center; Paul Pavlidis, Gene Expression Informatics Group, Columbia University; Xuejin Peng, Department of Statistics and Pharmacology, University of Kentucky; Katherine Peterson, NIH/NEI; Stephanie Ruby, Department of Molecular Genetics and Microbiology, University of New Mexico; Paul Shapshak, director, Dementia/HIV Laboratory, University of Miami Medical School; Deanne Taylor, Serono Reproductive Biology; Masaru Tomita, Institute for Advanced Biosciences, Keio University; and Brian Ward, Sigma Aldrich.

"The conference has excellent scientists and business people from around the world making presentations. That forms the backbone for some real learning opportunities," Deckard said. "In addition, we've built in time for small group discussions and for opportunities where people can rub elbows with the speakers and talk about specific things relevant to them."

Last year's two-day conference had 175 participants at NDSU and an estimated 2,000 total participants representing 27 states and 41 countries. The upcoming conference has been expanded to three days, and Deckard expects the number of participants to increase.

The conference program is at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/virtual-genomics/program.htm. There is no registration fee, however, online registration is required and is available at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/virtualgenomics/registration.htm. For more information, contact Deckard at 1-8139 or edward.deckard@ndsu.nodak.edu.

Ag Fall Round-Up planned

The annual agriculture Fall Round-Up is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 19, in the Bison Sports Arena. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. All current and retired agriculture teaching, research and extension faculty and staff and their families are invited.

NDSU's Carnivore Caterers will prepare the meal. A variety of entertainment for both adults and children, including the NDSU Brass Ensemble and Weird Science demonstrations by Don Carey, are planned. Door prizes also will be available.

The event is sponsored by the College of Agriculture, Food Systems and Natural Resources and is coordinated by the faculty development committee. Tickets are $3 each and must be purchased by Tuesday, Sept. 17. Tickets are available in all agriculture department offices and in 315 Morrill Hall.

NDSU events for State Employee Recognition Week planned

The following campus events are planned for State Employee Recognition Week Sept. 15-20.

- Sunday, Sept. 15—Golf scramble, 1 p.m., Prairiewood golf course, $12.
- Monday, Sept. 16-Thursday, Sept. 19—Thunder Road offers $1 discount for all state employees with identification. Includes miniature golf and go-carts.
- Tuesday, Sept. 17—Popcorn sale, noon-4 p.m., Memorial Union. Cost is 50 cents per bag with proceeds donated to the United Way of Cass-Clay. Family Fun Night picnic, 4:30 p.m., Playmakers Pavilion, Fargo.
- Wednesday, Sept. 17—Color Day. Wear a color indicating years of service: 1-10 years wears red, 11-20 years wears white and 21 years or more wears blue.
- Thursday, Sept. 19—Hat and Tie Day. Wear your favorite hat or tie.
- Friday, Sept. 20—Casual Day. Wear state employee apparel. Free ice cream 2-3 p.m., Memorial Union east patio.

Library offers BIOSIS seminars

NDSU Libraries has scheduled two seminars on BIOSIS, a biological sciences database, for 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20, in room 110 of the Main Library.

BIOSIS, the electronic version of Biological Abstracts, is a life sciences research database providing information on a wide range of bioscience topics and offering abstracts of articles in more than 5,000 international journals. Subjects include agriculture, biochemistry, biotechnology, botany, ecology, microbiology, neuroscience, proteomics, pharmacology, public health, toxicology and zoology.

Each 90-minute session is led by a BIOSIS representative and consists of an overview, live demonstration, search tips and other features. There is no cost for the seminars.

For more information, contact subject librarians or the Reference Desk at 1-8886.

Smuin Ballet performances scheduled

The San Francisco-based Smuin Ballets are scheduled to return to NDSU with performances of "The Best of Smuin" scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4, and 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 5, in Festival Concert Hall.

The performances contain various pieces including founder Michael Smuin's tribute to the events of Sept. 11., and 10 pieces set to the music of the Beatles.

The company was founded in 1994 by choreographer Smuin, former director of the San Francisco Ballet. Smuin, the winner of several Emmy awards and a Tony award, has been active in film, on Broadway and in ballet for nearly 20 years.

Tickets are $28 for adults, $20 for seniors and $10 for students. Tickets are available at Marshall Fields, Discontent, through charge-by-phone at 235-7171 or by calling the Division of Fine Arts box office at 1-7932.

LCT offers free preview nights for faculty, staff

NDSU faculty and staff are invited to attend preview performances of Little Country Theatre productions free of charge. To reserve tickets, call the box office at 1-9442. All performances are held in Askanase Auditorium.

The preview nights include "The Glass Menagerie," scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24; "A Midsummer Night's Dream," scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 27; and "subUrbia," scheduled for 9 p.m. Tuesday, April 29.

Library offers government information seminar

NDSU Libraries has scheduled a one-day training class on U.S. Government Printing Office Access services for 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 1, in the architecture computer cluster. There is no charge for the class or materials.

A representative of the office will provide an in-depth review of all facets of the GPO Access services, including the Federal Register, Code of Federal Regulations, Congressional Record, congressional bills and public laws.

Anyone wishing to attend must register before Sept. 17. For more information or to register, contact Kathryn Thomas at 1-8863 or Kathryn.Thomas@ndsu.nodak.
