

United Way campaign to wrap up

NDSU's annual campaign to support the United Way of Cass-Clay ends on Thursday, Oct. 31, according to Char Goodyear, campus campaign coordinator and Office of the Vice President for University Relations administrative assistant.

"If you haven't already submitted your pledge form to your department representative, there is still time to do so," Goodyear said. "Giving a donation to United Way is a special opportunity to share with our neighbors and help better our community. I encourage everyone to consider that as they think about making a contribution."

As of Oct. 23, NDSU's campaign stood at more than $30,000 in pledges, with 11 of 20 departments reporting. The dollar figure represents 43 percent of the campus goal.

Contributors are reminded that a donation of $1 per week provides 11 hours of help to a visually impaired senior; $2 per week provides food for 700 meals; $5 per week sends two disadvantaged youth to camps for one week; and $10 per week helps a family relocate to a new home after theirs was destroyed by a disaster.

The United Way of Cass-Clay supports 52 programs through 36 member agencies.

"Thank you to everyone who has contributed, and those who are considering making a donation," Goodyear said. "Your dollars do make a difference in Fargo-Moorhead and Cass and Clay Counties."

For information, contact Goodyear at 1-1068.

WRRRI fellowship applications sought

The North Dakota Water Resources Research Institute (WRRRI) is accepting applications for its 2003 graduate research fellowship program.

Graduate students from NDSU and the University of North Dakota who currently are conducting or are planning research in water resources areas may apply for the fellowships. Fellowships vary in length from a three-month summer program to one year, with average monthly stipends of $1,400. Fellowship funds must be applied between March 2003 and February 2004.

Projects proposed for fellowship support should relate to water resources research issues in the state or region. Regional, state or local collaborations and co-funding proposals are encouraged.

Applications are due to N.D. WRRRI director G. Padmanabhan, chair, director and professor of civil engineering, by Friday, Nov. 15. Award announcements are scheduled for early January 2003.

For program background and application guidelines, visit the institute's Web site at www.ce.nodak.edu/wrrri, or contact Padmanabhan at 1-7043 or G.Padmanabhan@ndsu.nodak.edu.

Applications are due by Nov. 15, and should be sent to G. Padmanabhan, Director, N.D. Water Resources Research Institute, NDSU, CIE 201A, Department of Civil Engineering and Construction, P.O. Box 5285, Fargo, N.D. 58105.

Anti-gay group says it will picket at Harvest Bowl

Members of a Topeka, Kan., church say they will come to Grand Forks and Fargo Nov. 1–3 to picket at several locations including the Fargodome during the Harvest Bowl when NDSU hosts the University of Northern Colorado. The group, led by Rev. Fred Phelps of the Westboro Baptist Church, has received national attention for protests against homosexuality, including picketing at the funeral of Mathew Shepard, a University of Wyoming student who was murdered because he was gay.

In a news release, the group condemned NDSU and the University of Northern Colorado for sponsoring campus Safe Zone programs, which offer training to faculty and staff volunteers to help students who want to discuss gay issues.

“I would like everyone to understand that North Dakota State University is a campus which embraces diversity and where everyone has a right to live, work and study in peace and dignity regardless of sexual orientation,” said NDSU President Joseph A. Chapman.

Sandra Holbrook, NDSU director of Equal Opportunity, urges Harvest Bowl attendees to ignore the protesters. “They want attention. Other campuses have found that an effective way of responding to their message is to refuse to make eye contact and walk on by the group,” she said.

Campus and Fargo police have been in contact with law enforcement agencies in jurisdictions where the Westboro Baptist church has staged similar protests.

“They are an experienced protest group,” said NDSU Police Chief Tim Lee. “Their attorney finds out in advance what the local rules are and then they follow the rules. In a letter to Fargo Police Chief Magnus and myself, they wrote that their message will not be well received by some, but they promised to conduct themselves in a peaceful and law-abiding manner. I hope Harvest Bowl attendees will not allow themselves to be provoked by this group’s message.”

The Fargodome will enforce policies that govern literature distribution on Fargodome property. The protesters have indicated that their group would consist of nine adults and one child.

New course on ‘functional foods’ announced

The Department of Cereal Sciences is set to offer a new course, Functional Foods: The Relationship Between Food Ingredients and Health, beginning spring semester.

The two-credit course is designed for senior level and graduate students interested in foods and their chemical components, and how foods may contribute to health. It is not intended to be a course in nutrition.

The course will examine the effects of the estimated 10,000 “functional food” ingredients, or nutraceuticals, on biochemical and physiological body functions and how they may promote health and prevent disease.

The course syllabus is available online at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/ndsu/dgordon/syllabus.doc.

For more information, contact course instructor Dennis Gordon, professor of plant sciences, at dennis.gordon@ndsu.nodak.edu.

Architecture students propose an arboretum for NDSU

Third-year architecture students recently presented design ideas for an arboretum and ecological enrichment center near NDSU’s horticulture research plots.

The proposed center was designed to demonstrate innovative ecological developments, especially in relation to the use of the region’s wood products, by explaining the structural and aesthetic qualities of indigenous wood species. It also is intended to serve as a research and education facility, and would allow visitors to examine the relationship between nature and shelter.

The proposal also addresses human activity needs, contextual response to and from the exterior and the interior, and the structural integrity of the use of wood form.

Fargo architect Mark Farmhouse critiqued the final presentation. The design project is the culmination of an eight-week studio course taught by Mohamed Elnahas, assistant professor of architecture.

People

Ruley receives Optimist Club award

Head women’s basketball coach Amy Ruley has received the Fargo Optimist Club’s 2002 Friend of the Youth Award. The honor recognizes her work with youth in the Fargo-Moorhead community.

Ruley has spoken to the Optimist Club’s youth leadership groups annually, but the award also encompasses her work throughout the community. The organization serves several thousand youth each year.

Ruley is beginning her 24th year at NDSU. She has compiled a 555-144 career record, and has led the Bison to five NCAA Division II national championships. She has directed the team to 22 straight winning seasons.

NDSU to host Fulbright scholar

NDSU has been selected to host Fulbright visiting scholar Ghassan El-Khayat, professor of food science at the University of Damascus, Damascus, Syria. El-Khayat is one of approximately 800 outstanding foreign faculty and professionals the Fulbright program will bring to the United States to teach and conduct research.

El-Khayat, whose research includes protein content and amino acid composition of some Syrian durum wheat varieties, will conduct amino acid analysis of various durum wheat cultivars during his stay at NDSU. His visit is expected to last approximately four months, beginning May 2003.

Sam K.C. Chang, professor of cereal science, will serve as El-Khayat’s faculty host. “His visit will be a wonderful opportunity to promote mutual understanding of the nutritional quality of the wheat produced in Syria and in North Dakota,” Chang said. “It will also provide an opportunity for Professor El-Khayat to understand the culture of an American university and people’s lives in North Dakota.”

Established in 1946 under legislation introduced by the late Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the program was designed to increase mutual understanding between the United States and other countries through the exchange of persons, knowledge and skills. Fulbright award recipients are selected based on academic or professional achievement and leadership skills.

ROTC unit wins 'Ranger Challenge'

The NDSU Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) unit took home top honors during the regional "Ranger Challenge" held Oct. 19-20 at Camp Ripley, located near Randall, Minn. This is the second year in a row the NDSU unit won the competition.

"It's a great feeling," Lt. Col. Gregory Remus, commander of Army ROTC and professor of military science, said of the unit winning the competition. "The individuals involved have been training on and off for three years. The team came together about two months ago, training for two hours per day, five days per week. They went head-to-head with nine other teams and came out on top."

The nine-member team competed in six areas: Army physical fitness test, including push-ups, sit-ups and two-mile run; land navigation; building and using a rope bridge; grenade assault course; M-16 rifle assembly and disassembly; and the 10-kilo-meter ruck run. The NDSU unit won the ruck run, physical fitness test and M-16 assembly and disassembly sections. It placed second in the rope bridge and land navigation competitions.

NDSU's unit served as host for the event. Other competing units included students from the University of North Dakota; St. John's University; St. Cloud State University; St. Benedict's College; the University of Minnesota; Minnesota State University, Mankato; and South Dakota State University.

"It's the premier competition of ROTC that brings together the best cadets the programs have to offer," said senior Cadet Lt. Col. Chad Gosney, the battalion commander who oversaw the unit's host responsibilities. "It was an honor for me to host them and be a guide for them through the weekend. It took a lot of coordination, working with different schools from a wide area and getting everyone on the same page. It was a bit of challenge, but, at the same time, it was a real honor."

ROTC programs are offered by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps at more than 1,000 colleges and universities across the United States to train qualified young men and women to become officers upon graduation. At NDSU, Army and Air Force ROTC programs are offered. In addition to academic courses, ROTC candidates focus on developing leadership skills, participating in military labs, drills, military science presentations and other training activities.

Olfert gives clinic at arts and humanities summit

Warren Olfert, assistant professor of music, presented "Jazz and the American Wind Band: A Compatible Union of Two Incompatible Partners," at the NDUS Arts and Humanities Summit held recently in Grand Forks.

Olfert's clinic addressed the integration of jazz into American wind band music over the past 15 years.

Olfert is responsible for NDSU's Gold Star Marching Band and Concert Band. He has presented workshops on music education, conducting and band history at various national conventions.

Hypnosis workshop held at Plains Art Museum

Kimble Bromley, associate professor of art, presented "Creativity Enhancement Workshop Using Hypnosis," Oct. 12 at the Plains Art Museum in Fargo. The event was sponsored by Moorhead Community Education.

Bromley is certified in hypnotherapy by the National Guild of Hypnotists. He designed the creativity enhancement workshop to assist students with creativity through the use of hypnosis.

Rao named president of mathematical association

M.B. Rao, professor of statistics, has been named president of the Mathematical Association of America, North Central Section, comprised of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The association's objective is to foster mathematics teaching in institutions of higher education. The association meets twice annually.

Arizona music professors to give recital, master classes

Walter Cosand and Joseph Wytko, professors of music at Arizona State University, are scheduled to present master classes and a recital Monday, Oct. 28, in Reineke Fine Arts Center.

The piano master class with Cosand is scheduled for 2 p.m. in Beckwith Recital Hall. Cosand has bachelor's and master's degrees in music from the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y. He is the winner of an Eastman Concerto Competition and an international piano recording competition. Cosand has performed throughout the United States, Canada, Russia, Korea and Europe. He was a member of the Papago Chamber Ensemble and Ensemble 21, and is involved with the orchestra, iChamber.

The saxophone master class with Wytko is scheduled for 2 p.m. in Reineke Fine Arts Center room 122. A recipient of the prestigious Solo Recitalist Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts, Wytko is currently professor of saxophone at Arizona State University. He also works as an artist/clinician with the Slemmer Company, and as a saxophonist with the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra. He has performed several solo recitals in the United States and Europe, and has appeared as a soloist in several symphony orchestras. He also performs with the Wytko Saxophone Quartet. Wytko has a bachelor's degree in music from West Virginia University, Morgantown, and master's and doctorate degrees in performance from Northwestern University.

Cosand and Wytko are scheduled to present a recital featuring pieces by Schumann, Weaver, Malecki and Swerts at 7:30 p.m. in Beckwith Recital Hall.
