

Planning and design center approved

The State Board of Higher Education has approved the creation of a "Community Planning and Design Center" at NDSU. The approval came at the board's Jan. 18 meeting.

The center, which will serve as an outreach arm of the Department of Architecture and Landscape Architecture, has a mission to enhance design quality in state communities and to enhance community pride, encourage economic development and improve the quality of life.

"The center provides a mechanism to coordinate and showcase the expertise and creativity of our faculty and students," explained Gary Smith, dean of engineering and architecture. "The center will enable communities and non-profit organizations across the region to gain some planning assistance in a cost effective manner."

According to Paul Gleye, professor and chair of architecture and landscape architecture, NDSU students have assisted with projects for several years, but the efforts were limited by the constraints of a class.

"The center establishes a formal way by which we can offer our students' expertise to North Dakota communities to help them and other non-profit organizations envision the future. It also offers our students an opportunity to gain practical experience working on real projects," Gleye said. "The hope is that the establishment of the center will allow us to expand this effort beyond what we can do in a normal class, to potentially allowing us to hire students during the summer months to work on specific projects for communities."

Gleye said no state funding was requested to establish the center, but he said the department intends to work through the NDSU Development Foundation to approach potential corporate donors and other supporters.

"We hope to assist communities across North Dakota. One of the biggest contributions we can make is to help people to re-establish pride in their place by helping them to envision the future through architecture and landscape architecture that makes for a better community. This is especially applicable to small towns that do not have the budget to hire professionals to assist them," Gleye said.

The center's first project is already about to get underway. Next week, landscape architecture students are expected to begin designing an entrance gateway for the campus of Valley City State University.

Consortium receives Dakota Medical Foundation grant

The North Dakota Higher Education Consortium for Substance Abuse Prevention has received a $7,600 grant from the Dakota Medical Foundation to support a forum on college substance abuse prevention for higher education senior administrators.

The consortium is a non-profit organization serving college students across the state. Programs include initiatives to impact public policy and strengthen community partnerships so that student safety and success are not jeopardized by the use of alcohol or other substances in campus communities. cont.

The forum will focus on what administrators can do to create a campus environment that effectively addresses alcohol and drug misuse. Discussion topics include the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism report on college drinking; legal issues; administrators' perspectives; and a consortium update on college drinking.

Based in Fargo, the foundation focuses its efforts on improving access to medical and dental care. Since its inception in 1995, the foundation has invested nearly $27 million in more than 275 non-profit organizations to help improve health and access to healthcare.

For information about the foundation, visit www.dakmed.org. For more information about the consortium or the forum, go to www.ndhec.und.edu.

General Counsel to track legislative bills

The Office of the General Counsel will again track the progress of legislative bills that may be of interest to NDSU faculty, staff and students. The 60th Legislative Assembly of North Dakota began Jan. 3.

The periodic report on bill status can be found at www.ndsu.nodak.edu/general_counsel/legislation.htm.

"We are following a number of bills related to higher education," explained Rick Johnson, university general counsel. "I encourage NDSU personnel and students to look at the report if they are interested."

Johnson said that the North Dakota legislative Web site, which is updated daily, is www.legis.nd.gov/. To view a bill or resolution, visit www.legis.nd.gov/assembly/60-2007/leginfo/bills-res-jour/index.html.

NDSU welcomes first James Rosenquist artist in residence

The first James Rosenquist Artist in Residence at NDSU was introduced to the community and representatives of local arts groups at a presentation and reception Jan. 18. The Department of Visual Arts introduced Hedi Schwöbel, Ludwigsburg, Germany, who will work spring semester interacting with students, holding public lectures and opening her studio to visitors.

"NDSU is delighted to welcome Hedi Schwöbel to our community," said President Joseph A. Chapman. "This exciting project is designed to build art appreciation at the university and in the community. I am thrilled about the opportunities our students will have, as they learn from an outstanding artist."

Schwöbel's artwork is inspired by her perception of the times and the society in which she lives. "I am looking forward to incorporating the North Dakota winter into my site-specific work," said Schwöbel.

She has been utilizing fragile materials such as handmade paper, translucent paper, silicone, gelatin or aluminum foil in her work.

Schwöbel will share all of this in her studio at NDSU downtown, culminating the semester with an exhibit and the donation of a piece of her work to the James Rosenquist Artist Residency Collection.

"We are looking forward to providing students, art educators and the community with an opportunity to learn unique artistic methods and view exceptional new artwork," said Thomas Riley, dean of arts, humanities and social sciences.

Schwöbel studied at the University of Heidelberg and the University of Education in Ludwigsburg, receiving an art teacher's degree. She served an apprenticeship as a ceramist in Munich for three years. From 1986-93, she studied sculpture at the Academy of Fine Arts, Stuttgart, Germany. Schwöbel's awards include a two-month residency at Sculpture Space, Utica, N.Y., and a six-month grant for the Cité Internationale in Paris from the German Government of Baden-Wurtemberg.

The James Rosenquist Artist in Residence Program for Visual Arts at NDSU honors James Rosenquist. Born in Grand Forks, N.D., Rosenquist is considered one of the greatest living artists of the Pop Art movement of North America. His work and career are internationally known. Rosenquist was awarded an honorary doctorate from NDSU in May 2005.

PEOPLE

Winfrey named Memorial Union director

Steve Winfrey was named the director of the Memorial Union, effective Jan. 1.

Winfrey is responsible for the overall administration and management of the Memorial Union, leadership and supervision of student organizations, leadership development, programs and activities, Greek Life and operations and services.

Winfrey said his mission is "to provide the most comprehensive learning environment for students to be successful."

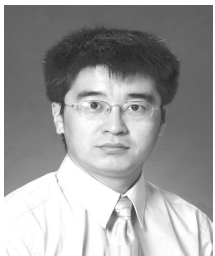

Winfrey has a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's degree in counseling and college student personnel from Creighton University, Omaha, Neb. He previously served as the associate director of Student Activities at the Memorial Union. While at NDSU, he has developed and initiated 11 leadership programs and introduced the Learning Organizations system to Memorial Union staff.

Stack, Green named to Memorial Union posts

Kara Stack was appointed interim associate director of Student Activities for the Memorial Union, effective Jan. 8. Stack will oversee supervision of SAO, the graduate assistants, SAO budget, LeaderQuest and the Gallery program.

Nathan Green has accepted the position of coordinator of Marketing and Graphic Services beginning Jan. 22. He comes to NDSU with proven experience in graphics design and will oversee the graphics area and Memorial Union Web site.

Cao honored

Cao

Xinyu (Jason) Cao recently received the Charley V. Wootan Memorial Award from the Council of University Transportation Centers. Cao is an associate research fellow with the Small Urban and Rural Transit Center (SURTC), a part of the Upper Great Plains Transportation Institute.

Cao received the award at the annual Council of University Transportation Centers Awards Banquet in Washington, D.C., on Saturday, Jan. 20. The honor also includes a $2,000 cash award. The banquet was held during the national meeting of the Transportation Research Board.

The national award recognizes a student in transportation for an outstanding doctoral dissertation in policy and planning. Before joining SURTC in July, Cao completed his doctorate in civil engineering with an emphasis on transportation planning at the University of California-Davis. In addition, he has received a University of California Transportation Center Dissertation Fellowship. His dissertation, "The Causal Relationship Between the Built Environment and Personal Travel Choice: Evidence from Northern California," examines the causes behind travel choices made by individuals living in areas with various land-use characteristics.

At NDSU, Cao is investigating transit-oriented development and solutions in small urban and rural transit.

Olfert named guest conductor at clinic

Warren Olfert, associate professor of music, was the guest conductor at Western Kentucky University as part of an honors band clinic, Jan. 18-20, in Bowling Green, Ky.

Olfert was one of three guest conductors selected for the annual clinic that involves 700 high school students who are required to audition in order to participate. In addition to acting as conductor, Olfert presented a clinic for regional band directors.

At the clinic, Olfert worked with students to prepare Ron Nelson's "Lauds (Praise High Day)," Robert Spittal's "Pacem," Bela Bartok's "Jocuri Poporale Romanesti" and Johann Strauss' "Radetzky March."

Grazul-Bilska to speak at animal sciences meeting

Anna Grazul-Bilska, associate professor of animal and range sciences, is scheduled to speak at a symposium for the American Society of Animal Sciences on March 20, in Des Moines, Iowa.

Grazul-Bilska is a leader in the area of oocyte quality in livestock. The symposium will focus on the identification of the biological markers important in animal reproduction. Grazul-Bilska will discuss recent advances in the understanding of oocyte quality.

Li receives grant

The MNLA Foundation recently announced $13,400 in grants to the Landscape Plant Development Center to support research and education. The MNLA Foundation is a sister organization of the Minnesota Nursery and Landscape Association (MNLA).

Deying Li, assistant professor of plant sciences, received the award that will be used for the development of a regional research-based education program for water management, water resources and water-use technology in landscape horticulture. The award presentation came at the Minnesota Green Expo held Jan. 3-5.

"The MNLA Foundation is committed to the long-term improvement of the environment and our industry's future by supporting research and students at area colleges and universities," said John Mickman, chair of the MNLA Foundation board of trustees.

The MNLA Foundation raises funds for research and education through voluntary contributions from members including garden centers; landscape contractors and designers; tree and flower growers; irrigation contractors; and lawn, tree and garden services.

Danbom, Strom present at conference

David Danbom, professor of history, delivered the opening keynote address at the International Conference of the Inter War Rural History Research Group, held at Royal Holloway College of the University of London, Jan. 4-6.

Danbom's address focused on the major forces shaping American agriculture and rural life between the world wars. He argued that those forces included the altered international financial position of the United States, which discouraged agricultural exports, mechanization of agricultural production and the increasing tendency of Americans to romanticize farmers and rural life.

Claire Strom, associate professor of history and editor of Agricultural History, also participated in the conference. She, along with colleagues from England and the Netherlands, spoke at the closing plenary that discussed the broad international issues raised by the conference and future directions of research. She also met with representatives of the British Agricultural History Society to discuss the possibility of a joint conference in 2010.

The international conference brought together scholars from the United States, Australia, the United Kingdom, Israel, France, Germany, Finland, Sweden, Holland, the Netherlands and Canada.

EVENTS

Pearson scheduled to present 'Infinite Divisions'

"Infinite Divisions: Mexican-American Women's Voices in the Northern plains," a Cosgrove seminar presented by the English department, is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 24, in the library reading room.

Carol Pearson, associate professor of modern languages, is scheduled to discuss the process by which the work of these contemporary writers has constructed abundant and varied possibilities for Chicana subjects. Pearson will address how the writers illuminate the oral histories of women from the Fargo-Moorhead Mexican-American communities.

Videoconferencing brown bag scheduled

"Innovative Ideas for Videoconferencing," a brown bag seminar sponsored by the Interactive Video Network, is scheduled for 11:55 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 25, in EML 171.

The session will address innovative ideas on using videoconferencing for a live class or a videoconference class. The presentation will include information about Internet2. Judith Graves, digital projects coordinator, will demonstrate resources from the Library of Congress. The program will conclude with ideas on how the campus also can be a resource of programs for others.

Registration is required by Wednesday, Jan. 24. You can register by contacting Tammy Cummings, NDSU IVN coordinator, at tammy.cummings@ndsu.edu.

NDSU LunchBytes Series to continue for spring semester

The LunchByte series, presented by Information Technology Services, is scheduled to continue one Monday each month throughout the spring semester. There will be a series of informal demonstrations covering a wide variety of different technology related topics.

"New and Improved! PRS at NDSU," is scheduled for 12:10 p.m. Monday, Jan. 29, in the Memorial Union Prairie Rose Room. The series addresses NDSU's process of switching the personal response system from the older infrared technology to new radio frequency technology.

The session will cover the benefits and changes in the PRS system. Jeff Gerst, ITS director, will share his classroom experiences using PRS. Participants also will have an opportunity to use new radio frequency transmitters in a live PRS session.

NDSU music presents annual jazz festival

The NDSU music department is scheduled to present the annual High School Invitational Jazz Festival Feb. 2-3.

The festival features jazz clinicians Sammy K playing drums, Monty Cole playing clarinet and saxophone and Larry McWilliams playing trumpet. Eight high schools from North Dakota and Minnesota are scheduled to participate in the festival.

Kyle Mack and Matthew Patnode, associate professors of music, will direct the NDSU jazz ensemble and featured jazz clinicians in a concert at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 3, in Festival Concert Hall. The concert is free and open to the public.

For more information, contact Mack at 1-7872 or kyle.mack@ndsu.edu.

Anxiety screening week offered by counseling center

The NDSU Counseling Center will offer free anxiety screenings for NDSU students Feb. 5-9.

Screenings are available at the center at 212 Ceres Hall between 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Appointments are suggested, but not required. The free program will include an educational video, an anonymous written self-test, a meeting with a mental health professional, free informational materials on anxiety disorders, a referral for further evaluation and treatment if indicated. Online screening is also available at www.ndsu.edu/counseling.

For more information or to make an appointment, contact the NDSU Counseling Center at 1-7671 or visit the Web site.

LCT to present 'Follies: The Concert'

NDSU's Little Country Theater alumni are returning to the stage to join current students to perform Stephen Sondheim's "Follies: The Concert," directed by Donald Larew, professor of theatre arts.

"Follies: The Concert," takes place in the early 1970s. The Weismann Theatre in New York is ready to be demolished, and a reunion of the Weismann showgirls takes place. As the evening progresses, the performers relive many past experiences.

"Follies: The Concert," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 15-Saturday, Feb. 17, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 18, in Festival Concert Hall.

Tickets are available at the NDSU fine arts box office. Tickets are $15 for adults; $10 for senior citizens, NDSU alumni, faculty, staff and non-NDSU students; and $5 for NDSU students. To reserve tickets, call 1-7969.

Kilbourne to present Women's Week address

Internationally acclaimed media critic, author and filmmaker Jean Kilbourne is scheduled to present the keynote address for the 25th anniversary of NDSU Women's Week. Her speech, "Deadly Persuasion: Advertising and Addiction," is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20, in the Memorial Union Ballroom. A reception and book-signing opportunity will follow.

Kilbourne is well known for her work in the "Killing Us Softly" series, exploring the impact of advertising on women's self-images and on the prevalence of violence against women. Her book, "Can't Buy My Love: How Advertising Changes the Way We Think and Feel," won the Distinguished Publication Award from the Association for Women in Psychology.

Note that Kilbourne's address will take place the week prior to Women's Week, Feb. 26-March 2. For more information about Women's Week, go to the President's Diversity Council Web page and click on news or events at www.ndsu.edu/diversity.
