

Memorial service planned for student killed in Iraq

A memorial service for NDSU student Sgt. Keith Lee Smette is scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday, Feb. 9, in the Memorial Union ballroom. Smette was one of two Army National Guard soldiers killed Jan. 24 when their convoy struck a roadside bomb north of Fallujah, Iraq.

The Rev. Bruce Krogstad of the University Lutheran Center will officiate the memorial service, and members of Smette's family have indicated they plan to attend. A scholarship honoring Smette will be established through the College of Human Development and Education, and the campus community is invited to participate.

Smette, 25, a senior university studies major from Makoti, N.D., and staff Sgt. Kenneth Hendrickson, 41, of Bismarck, were members of the Bismarck-based 957th Multi-Role Bridge Company. They were traveling with the 82nd Airborne Division.

"It is difficult for a campus to lose one of its own. Through this time of grieving and sadness, we can remember with pride Keith's ultimate sacrifice and his service to his country," said President Joseph A. Chapman. "Our deepest condolences go to Keith's parents, family and friends."

Gov. John Hoeven said all North Dakotans mourned the loss of the two soldiers. "These brave soldiers will be remembered for their courage and devotion to duty," Hoeven said. "As we grieve and pray for Kenneth and Keith, our thoughts and prayers continue to be with the men and women of our National Guard, Reserves and active duty military who have been called to serve and are still in harm's way."

George Wallman, vice president for student affairs, met with news reporters on Jan. 26. "Keith Smette died doing what he believed was an honorable thing in serving his country and serving us," Wallman said, noting that the Student Senate held a moment of silence honoring Smette during its Jan. 25 meeting. He said Smette is the first student killed in action during Wallman's years as vice president for student affairs.

As a freshman, Smette was a student in a class taught by Bradford Strand, chair and professor of health, nutrition and exercise sciences. Strand described him as an outgoing, friendly student. "I remember Keith as always having a smile on his face. He was one of those guys that is nice to have around," Strand said. "Keith would see me in the hall and say, 'Dr. Strand, how are you doing? It's good to see you.' He was a guy that you really liked and somebody you remember.

"In this class that I teach, there are 170 students. You don't remember everybody," Strand said. "But, I certainly remember Keith."

Smette withdrew from classes at NDSU in February 2003 as his unit was called to active duty, and he volunteered to go to Iraq. While in Iraq, he changed his studies from physical education in the College of Human Development and Education to university studies.

An estimated 100-120 NDSU students have been mobilized by Guard and Reserve units for service in Iraq. The deaths of Hendrickson and Smette bring the number of North Dakota Guard soldiers killed in combat in Iraq to three.

Safety and security presentation available online

The "Personal Safety and Security on the NDSU Campus" presentation made by Fargo police Sgt. Joel Vettel is available online through the NDSU police Web site. The presentation, available in both Power Point and pdf formats, is found at www.ndsu.edu/police/ndsu_personal_safety/index.htm.

According to NDSU police chief Tim Lee, approximately 430 people attended Vettel's recent campus presentations. "These presentations could be useful for new faculty and staff training purposes," Lee said. "People might find information they can use themselves, or when providing orientation or training."

For more information, contact Lee at 1-7835.

Libraries offer increased scientific databases access

NDSU Libraries now offers access to more than 50 databases published by Cambridge Scientific Abstracts (CSA) and its publishing partners.

CSA databases provide indexing and abstracting for millions of citations in the areas of life sciences, environmental and aquatic sciences, computer sciences, materials science and engineering, aerospace, social sciences and humanities.

Recent additions include the CSA technology research database which includes METADEX, civil engineering abstracts, engineered materials abstracts, and an aerospace and high technology database; biological sciences which includes the life sciences database; and pollution abstracts.

All CSA databases feature separate "Quick" and "Advanced" search options, easy to set search limits, thesaurus searches, links to full-text, document delivery, NDSU's library catalog and inter-library loan, saved search histories, search alerts, multi-lingual interfaces and context-sensitive help.

The CSA databases may be accessed through the "Cambridge Scientific Abstracts" link on the Libraries home page catalog. The databases are available from any on-campus location. Off-campus access is available through the "My Library Login" link on the Libraries home page or through the NDSU modem pool. For more information, or to schedule training, call 1-8886.

ITS offers new Web service

Information Technology Services plans to offer a new Web service in order to facilitate the development of Web sites at NDSU. The service will provide departments with a Web site template that meets state and federal accessibility standards. Departments may choose from a variety of graphics and fonts to create customized templates that maintain a consistent NDSU look.

To help ensure accessibility, ITS encourages content providers to use the program Macromedia Contribute to maintain sites that were created using the new template. Contribute can replace Dreamweaver as an easy-to-use, word processor-like software program. It is available through the software licensing program.

For more information, visit <http://its.ndsu.nodak.edu>.

Sponsored programs compliance reminder notice

NDSU is committed to complying with federal regulations and guidelines regarding the use of human subjects, animals and recombinant DNA, infectious agents and human blood, tissue and bodily fluids in research and teaching activities. Faculty, staff and students conducting projects in these areas are required to have the projects reviewed and approved by the applicable compliance committee prior to initiation.

Recently updated policies require documentation of training for all investigators, co-investigators, students and key personnel involved with projects in these areas.

Several training sessions are offered on campus each semester allowing investigators to fulfill the requirements. The spring semester training schedule is as follows:

- Animal Welfare and the IACUC—2 p.m. Tuesday, March 2, Memorial Union University Chamber; 2 p.m. Wednesday, March 3, Memorial Union Meadow Lark room
- Human Subjects and the IRB—3 p.m. Tuesday, March 2, Memorial Union University Chamber; 3 p.m. Wednesday, March 3, Memorial Union Meadow Lark room

The sessions are an introduction to the applicable federal regulations, ethical principles, institutional policies and procedures in each area. Individual departmental sessions also may be scheduled by contacting the committee directors in each area. More information and protocol forms are available at www.ndsu.edu/research/compliance.

The Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (IACUC) is responsible to oversee NDSU's animal program, facilities and procedures, and reviews the proposed use of live vertebrate animals in any research, teaching, testing or exhibition projects. For more information contact Pierre Freeman, IACUC director, at 1-8114, or Charles Stoltenow, IACUC chair and associate professor of animal and range sciences, at 1-7522.

The Institutional Review Board (IRB) is responsible to review all proposed research involving human participants to ensure that the rights and welfare of the participants are protected. For more information, contact Teri Grosz, IRB director, at 1-8908, or Bob Sylvester, IRB chair and associate professor of pharmacy practice, at 1-7773.

The Institutional Biosafety Committee (IBC) reviews protocols for the safe use of recombinant DNA, infectious agents and human blood, bodily fluids and tissues in research or teaching projects. An on-campus training session is currently not available. The educational requirement may be completed in an online training session available on the IBC Web site. For more information contact Freeman or David Berryhill, IBC chair and associate professor of animal range sciences, at 1-7694.

NSF, FIPSE, Research Foundation grants listed

Brian Slator, professor of computer science; Lisa Daniels, assistant professor in the School of Education; and Curt Hill of Valley City State University received a three-year National Science Foundation (NSF) grant for $263,000 for their project "Accelerating Computer Science Education" to study computer science education and learning using experimental curricular materials.

Alan White, dean of science and mathematics; Phillip McClean, professor of plant sciences; Slator; and Daniels received a $495,400, two-year grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE) for the project "Visualizing Molecular and Cellular Biology Processes. The project goal is the development of a dynamic dissemination procedure for education software, particularly the Virtual Cell (VCell), an interactive, multi-user 3-D environment designed for active learning of modern cell biology.

G. Padmanabhan, professor and director of civil engineering; Robert Pieri, professor of mechanical engineering; and Daniels received approximately $100,000 in NSF funding for their planning grant "A State University-Tribal Colleges Partnership to Initiate Systemic Changes to Increase STEM Content in K-12 Education." The one-year grant will be used to help connect pedagogy between NDSU's College of Engineering and Architecture and School of Education, and the North Dakota tribal colleges and reservation high schools.

Daniels; Dogan Comez, professor of mathematics; William Martin, associate professor of mathematics; Lisa Montplaisir, assistant professor of biological sciences; and Donald Schwert, professor of geology and director of the Center for Science and Mathematics Education, received a one-year, $10,000 grant from the NDSU Research Foundation to conduct a pilot study addressing a science and mathematics teacher education program.

NDSU Dance Team places sixth at national competition

The NDSU Dance Team received sixth place honors at the Universal Dance Association (UDA) Dance and Cheer National College Championships held Jan. 16-18 at Disney's Wide World of Sports in Orlando, Fla. The Bison competed in the Open Division.

The placement marks the highest finish for NDSU in a national competition. The team is coached by Verona Winkler.

Events

NDSU Athletics to sponsor annual Bison Valentine Victory Blood Drive

The 13th annual Bison Valentine Victory Blood Drive sponsored by NDSU and United Blood Services is scheduled for 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 10-Wednesday, Feb. 11, at the Bison Sports Arena. The goal for this year's blood drive is 400 units.

The 2003 NDSU blood drive attracted 208 volunteers, and 241 units of blood were collected for United Blood Services. There were 127 first-time donors last year. During the past 12 years, the average annual total has been 233 units.

United Blood Services provides blood and blood products for patients at 50 hospitals in North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

The purpose of the blood drive is to involve all athletics staff, student athletes and coaches from all sports. Each NDSU student athlete is encouraged to recruit at least one volunteer for the blood drive.

"The involvement of our student athletes in this community service is a way for them to support a worthy cause. As donors they recognize that they can make a difference in the lives of many," said Lynn Dorn, project coordinator and director of women's athletics.

For more information, call 1-7807. Appointments are encouraged, but walk-ins are welcome.

"Romance for Dummies" brown bag seminar scheduled

NDSU Family Therapy Center couple and family therapy interns Lindsey Breker and Angela Ostrom will present the brown bag seminar "Romance for Dummies" scheduled for noon Wednesday, Feb. 11, in the Memorial Union Prairie Rose Room.

Breker and Ostrom will discuss the "do's and don'ts" of romance, and provide tips on reading a person's "love language."

For more information, call 1-5225.

Black History Month celebration events planned

A concert by the Deb Jenkins Band, two brown bag seminars, and two "World I View" programs will highlight NDSU's Black History Month celebration during February and March.

Also included is a program exploring African-American roots of rock music, a showing of the film "The Fighting Temptations" and the unedited showing of the mini-series "Roots."

All events will be held on the NDSU campus and most are free and open to the public unless otherwise noted.

The schedule of events, subject to change, is:

The six-part mini-series "Roots" is scheduled for 3 p.m. Feb. 3, 5, 10, 12, 17 and 19 in the Memorial Union Century Theater. One part will be shown each day. Based on author Alex Haley's family history, "Roots" is a saga of African-American life, and begins with the abduction of Kunta Kinte and his sale into American slavery.

Wednesday, Feb. 4

The brown bag seminar "Why We Still Need Affirmative Action" is scheduled for noon in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room. A panel of professionals will present a brief history and define the purposes of affirmative action, equal opportunity and related government programs. The panel also will present arguments for the programs' continuation. The event is sponsored by the YMCA of NDSU.

A showing of the musical comedy film, "The Fighting Temptations," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Century Theater. The film tells the story of advertising executive Darrin Fox and his attempts to form a successful gospel choir in order to collect an inheritance. The screening is sponsored by Campus Attractions.

Friday, Feb. 6

"The Fighting Temptations" is scheduled for 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in the Century Theater.

Saturday, Feb. 7

"The Fighting Temptations" is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Century Theater.

Wednesday, Feb. 11

"True Colors," a film documentary detailing an experiment designed to teach students about racial inequality, is scheduled for 3 p.m. in the Century Theater. Members of the TOCAR anti-racism team are scheduled to host the event and lead an audience discussion following the film.

Thursday, Feb. 12

Charles Musiba, assistant professor of sociology, is scheduled to present the World I View program "People of East Africa" at 11 a.m. in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room.

Friday, Feb. 13

The Deb Jenkins Band is scheduled to perform from 7-9:30 p.m. in the Memorial Union Dakota Ballroom. The concert is free and open to the public.

Wednesday, Feb. 18

The brown bag seminar "African-American Women Share Recipes for Success in Work and Life" is scheduled for noon in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room. A panel of African-American women will share their opinions on personal success, relating stories of turning points in their lives and offering advice. The event is sponsored by the YMCA of NDSU.

Thursday, Feb. 26

The "World I View" series continues with a concert by the African rock band Badimo, scheduled for 11 a.m. in the Memorial Union Peace Garden Room.

"The African-American Roots of Rock and Roll: How the Music and Lyrics We Love Came to Be," a presentation by students in the Poetry of Rock class, is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Memorial Union Prairie Room. The program will explore the African-American origins of rock music, and includes listening sessions to early recordings and an examination of the poetry of blues and early rock lyrics.

Friday, March 5

The Black Student Organization has scheduled its annual fund-raiser "Soul Food Sampler" for 11 a.m.-1 p.m. in the NDSU Alumni Center. Advance tickets will be available in the Multicultural Student Services office, 302 Ceres Hall, and from organization members.

Black History Month sponsors include NDSU's Black Student Organization, Campus Attractions, the Department of English, International Programs, Multicultural Student Services, 3M, the TOCAR anti-racism team, the Office of TRIO Programs and the YMCA of NDSU.

For information, call Multicultural Student Services at 1-1029.

Isern to present Tri-College History Lecture

The 2004 Tri-College History Lecture, "My So-Called Life on the Plains: Confessions of the Last Picture Show Generation," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 7, in the Alumni Center Reimers Room. The lecture will be presented by Tom Isern, professor of history.

Isern's lecture is an exploration of the Great Plains during the late 20th century. Isern, a specialist in the history and folklore of the plains, is the author or co-author of six books. He also writes the popular weekly newspaper column, "Plains Folk."

The lecture is sponsored by the history departments at NDSU, Concordia College and Minnesota State University Moorhead. The academic community and the public are invited to attend.
