Approximately 50 North Dakota creamerymen will wind up a five-day period of discussions, lectures, and contests at the NDAC, with visits to local dairies this afternoon.

During the annual dairy industry week, the dairymen have been addressed by Dr. N. E. Fabricus of Ames, Iowa; Carl Lee, consulting dairy engineer, Milwaukee; C. E. Parsons, Swift and Company of Chicago; and W. G. Gilbertson, N. D. state department of health, Bismarck.

Also taking part in the instruction were NDAC staff members Darline Knowles, human nutritionist; Dr. Paul E. Johnson, assistant animal nutritionist; Dr. J. O. Foss, veterinarian; Dr. Chris Jensen, dairy husbandry department; Donald L. Murray, extension dairyman; and Prof. J. R. Dice, chairman of the dairy husbandry department.

Dr. H. L. Walster, dean of agriculture and director of the NDAC experiment station, was the principal speaker at the banquet held last evening at Ceres hall.

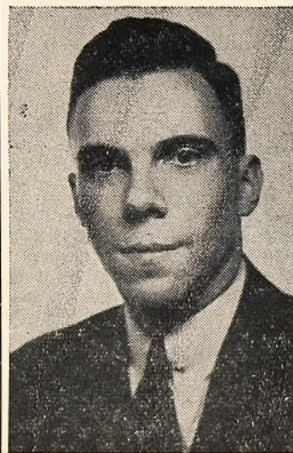

Included in the program were lectures and discussions on milk production and marketing, the role of milk in human nutrition, cheese making and laboratory practice, milk plant operation, study of cow testing records, feeding and management of dairy cattle for national defense and a butter judging contest.

Probably the most maligned group of organizations on college campuses throughout the United States are the social fraternities.

Critics of all kinds point to the paddle-swinging, cigar-smoking jitterbug as the average fraternity man. Fraternities, in general, have done little to combat this kind of publicity, following the doctrine that "right will triumph" rather than "fight fire with fire."

Feeling that, in times of stress such as our country is now experiencing, unity in the college student body is essential, the NDAC interfraternity council has undertaken a project to bring about closer cooperation between the fraternities themselves and to better the understanding between fraternity and non-fraternity men. This project has taken the form of the first annual Fraternity week which begins Thursday.

As their part of this effort, the council has brought in one of the nation's fraternity authorities, Dr. Fred Turner, dean of men at the University of Illinois.

All that the Greeks ask in return for this service is an open-minded attitude on the part of students in general.

They should try to realize that the social organizations which are usually termed "undemocratic" are really training grounds for democracy in its purest form. Men who are in close contact with 30 or 40 other men of all types for the four most formative years of their lives are bound to become tolerant and will continue to practice this tolerancy throughout their lives. If democracy is based on tolerant understanding of the practices of other men, where will it be found more frequently than among the members of any fraternity?

Let's all try to remember that, as Harry Schuck, instructor in commerce and chairman of the interfraternity councilors group at the University of Wisconsin says,

Phantasmagoria

By BILL SNYDER

After President Eversull announced that the college would run on a regular schedule throughout the summer, it made me feel glad that I am going to get out of here this term.

HORRIBLE MEMORIES

You see, I don't like to go to school in the summertime because I did it once and those horrible memories linger on and on. It wasn't the studying that got me down—it was the heat.

The rooms of the buildings got so hot they were just like ovens. In fact they were so much like ovens that instead of giving us final exams, the teacher just went around and stuck forks into us to see if we were done. That experience caused me to be called "half-baked" ever since.

In the room where we met we had a picture of Washington crossing the ice-infested Delaware. One day it got so hot in that room that instead of listening to the lecture, I sat and watched the ice melt. It got so hot in there that five minutes after you went in your sweat sweat.

IN THE SHADE

After sitting and cooking in that room every day for three weeks, our instructor decided to take us outside under some nice shady tree and lull us to sleep. I enjoyed this immensely because out there it was easier to whistle at the girls that walked by.

Incidentally, if this draft keeps up very long, all the girls will be whistling at the boys just like the inmates of Ceres do now. (About all the puckering they do is whistling.)

CONTEST

This column is sponsoring a contest for slogans on America's victory effort. All you have to do to enter is think up a nice slogan—something like, "Buy a defense stamp, and lick the other side", mail or bring it to the Spectrum office on or before midnight Tuesday, Jan. 20, 1942.

For the best slogan submitted we will give two five by seven enlargements of any picture taken of you by Dan Olson at the Charity or Military ball. These pictures will be on portrait grade paper and will be suitable for framing.

It isn't necessary to attend the ball or to have your picture taken by Dan, but if you attend the ball why don't you have Dan snap a picture or two of you and your escort right in the midst of your fun? You'll be pleased with the results and his fee is small enough so you won't notice it.

So when you're at the Charity, get the kid to 'mug' you and you'll have a nice shiny new negative in case you hit the first prize in our little contest.

RULES:

Here are the rules in case you want to enter:

- 1. Enter as many slogans as you like, but none will be returned.
2. The decision of the judges is final.
3. This contest is open to everyone except members of the Spectrum staff.
4. Contest closes midnight Jan. 20, 1942.

So get out your thinking caps and get busy, kids. Shoot in those slogans. The more you send in the better your chance of winning. Good luck!

Herd In Acid Test Against Three Foes

Tonight's clash with South Dakota university is the first contest scheduled for the Bison on their current road trip which will find them facing three conference foes in four days. After the Coyote game tonight, the Herd moves to Sioux City, Iowa, for a game tomorrow with Morningside and on Monday night meet Iowa State Teachers college on the Panther court in Cedar Falls.

IMPORTANT CLASHES

These three contests are of the greatest importance to Coach Bob Lowe and his NDAC hard-court performers as they will show whether or not the Herd has the ability to retain its North Central conference title. Sports writers throughout the loop have placed the Bison in the favorite's position again this season but so far the Herd has met only one league opponent—Omaha—and was not too impressive in a 46-29 victory.

South Dakota has six lettermen back this season and Coach "Rube" Hoy's quintet should have a great deal to say about the outcome of the NCI race. Tonight's game will be the opening conference tussle for the Coyotes who have dropped their four pre-loop games. The last South Dakota loss was suffered at the hands of Yankton college, the Greyhounds dumping the Red-shirts, 41-37.

SOLBERG STARS

Ole Solberg, big 6' 3" forward has been the leading scorer in each of the four games played by the Coyotes. The South Dakota star has totaled 52 points and will present the best scoring threat to the Herd's defense.

Other probable starters for the Hoymen are Elroy Lamaster, Don Smith, Don Forney and Dud Taplett.

Morningside already has a 34-22 victory over Iowa State Teachers to the credit of the Maroons and the boys from Sioux City will be out to halt the Herd's drive to the title tomorrow night. The Maroons are always tough on their home floor and well might be the club to hand the Bison their initial conference defeat. Coach Glenn Rogers quint will floor a veteran squad listing six lettermen and a fine crop of sophomores.

PEDS TAKE BUNNIES

Monday's foe of the Herd—ISTC—has won one game and lost one game in NCI engagements so far this season. After losing to the Maroons in the league opener, the Panthers came back to take a 38-37 hair-raiser from South Dakota State's Jackrabbits. The small Panther floor will favor the Peds to some extent but the scoring power and defensive strength of the Herd should prove too strong for the Teachers.

WOMEN'S SPORTS

By FLORENCE POTTER

Delight Whempner and Polly Carter were elected president and secretary-treasurer of the Riflery club to succeed Ruth Kellesvig and Rachael Elznic.

Ninety-five girls reported for practice at the first meeting with new members expected to bring the total to over 100. The rifle ranges are open from 6 to 11:30 p. m. every Thursday.

Riflery is in charge of Major Hart assisted by Sergeant White. Three student assistants—Graydon Fredrikson, Payne Lynse and Glen Waller—give instructions.

After three lessons, competitive shooting eliminates all who score less than 70. Those surviving the competition are divided into four classes—experts, sharpshooters, marksmen and novices—and prizes are given to the highest scorer in each group at the end of the season.

Postal matches with colleges in Louisiana, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Kentucky, Connecticut and New York will be conducted. Four shoulder-to-shoulder matches with the Business Women's club of Fargo have been arranged.

Thirty girls reported for the first basketball practice of the season. Practice is scheduled for 5 p. m. today and every Tuesday and Thursday for the rest of the term.

Bison Beat Omaha For First NCI Win

Pulling ahead midway through the third period after a close first half, NDAC's Bison quintet took the measure of Omaha's Indians, 46-29, for the Herd's initial NCI victory.

Arnold Johnson of the Bison and Jerry Dutcher, Cardinal forward, were the top scoring performers for the evening as they each collected 12 points. Little Cliff Nygard was not far behind these two as he added 10 tallies to the NDAC cause with three field goals and four gift shots.

The Herd started out with three quick baskets but soon lost the advantage gained and the Indians were within one counter at 16-15 as the first half ended. As the third quarter opened, Omaha went ahead at 17-16 but the Cardinal's lead was short lived and from then on it was the Herd's contest.

Return Games With Cobbers, Dragons Set

NDAC's quintet will momentarily take timeout from the rigors of conference competition after their road trip to play return games with the two colleges across the river.

Wednesday night the Bison meet MSTC in the fieldhouse and will be gunning for Coach Ed Hammer's five in retaliation for the 54-52 upset scored by the Dragons in the opening game of the season. The Lowemen are sure that the score as recorded in that first clash between the two clubs was a mistake and will be out to erase the former outcome.

On Jan. 24, Concordia college will attempt to take the second clash between the Cobbers and the Bison on the Concordia home floor. Since the Herd triumph over the Cobbers earlier, Coach "Jake" Christiansen's team has triumphed over St. John's university in a Minnesota college conference match and hope to even the NDAC series at one game apiece.

Stay In College, Bales Advises At Women's Convo

"There are millions of men brave enough to face the mouth of cannon. For every one man on the war front 100 are needed on the home front," stated Alba Bales, dean of the school of home economics and chairman of the special convocation for women students in the Little Country theater, Wednesday.

Miss Bales encouraged all students to stay in college and finish their courses to help win this war. She explained that there will be a tremendous task facing the college graduate following the war.

Plans are being made for women to take courses in manual arts including mechanical drawing and drafting. Students were advised to stay in their chosen field if at all possible.

Geneva Johnson, instructor in home economics, impressed the group with the possibility of women taking over much of the nation's farm work. Further suggestions included the conservation of materials, the use of materials on hand and the intensive growing and canning of garden products.
