100 Agricultural students To

Future Teams To Compete
In Intercollegiate

Merlin Toussaint will manage the 48th annual students live stock judging contest Thursday, in which approximately 100 agricultural students will participate. The contest is sponsored by the Saddle and Siroloin club and was won last year by Toussaint.

The contest consists of placing 10 rings of livestock picked by the judges from the college herds and flock. The same afternoon each individual gives oral reasons to faculty members acting as judges. Each placing has a value of 50 points and each set of reasons 50, if perfect, making the highest possible score 750.

To Uncover Judges

The purpose of the contest, according to Prof. E. J. Thompson, head of the animal husbandry department, is to uncover material for teams to compete in the national intercollegiate contest and to stimulate interest in the judging work.

Assisting Toussaint will be Robert Williams, Alvin Strong, and Noble Sanders, calculating individual placings; Richard Hamilton, Maurice Benidt, Ralph Bullock, Kent Helland, and Woodrow Wieland, group leaders.

Faculty To Join

Judges of the various classes are: E. J. Thompson, sheep; Al Severson, hogs; James Gannaway, beef; Victor Sander, horses; and J. R. Dice, dairy.

The contest will begin at 7:30 a. m. Thursday and continue through most of the afternoon. All students in the school of agriculture competing in the event or assisting in the arrangements will be excused from classes, according to P. J. Olson, assistant dean.

Jeanne Verne Contest Winner

Jeanne Verne, H. E. jr., having submitted the winning fashion sketch in the Bison Brevities costume designing contest, will head the committee in charge of dancing costumes, it was announced by Miss Ann Brown of the art department, and faculty advisory committee members.

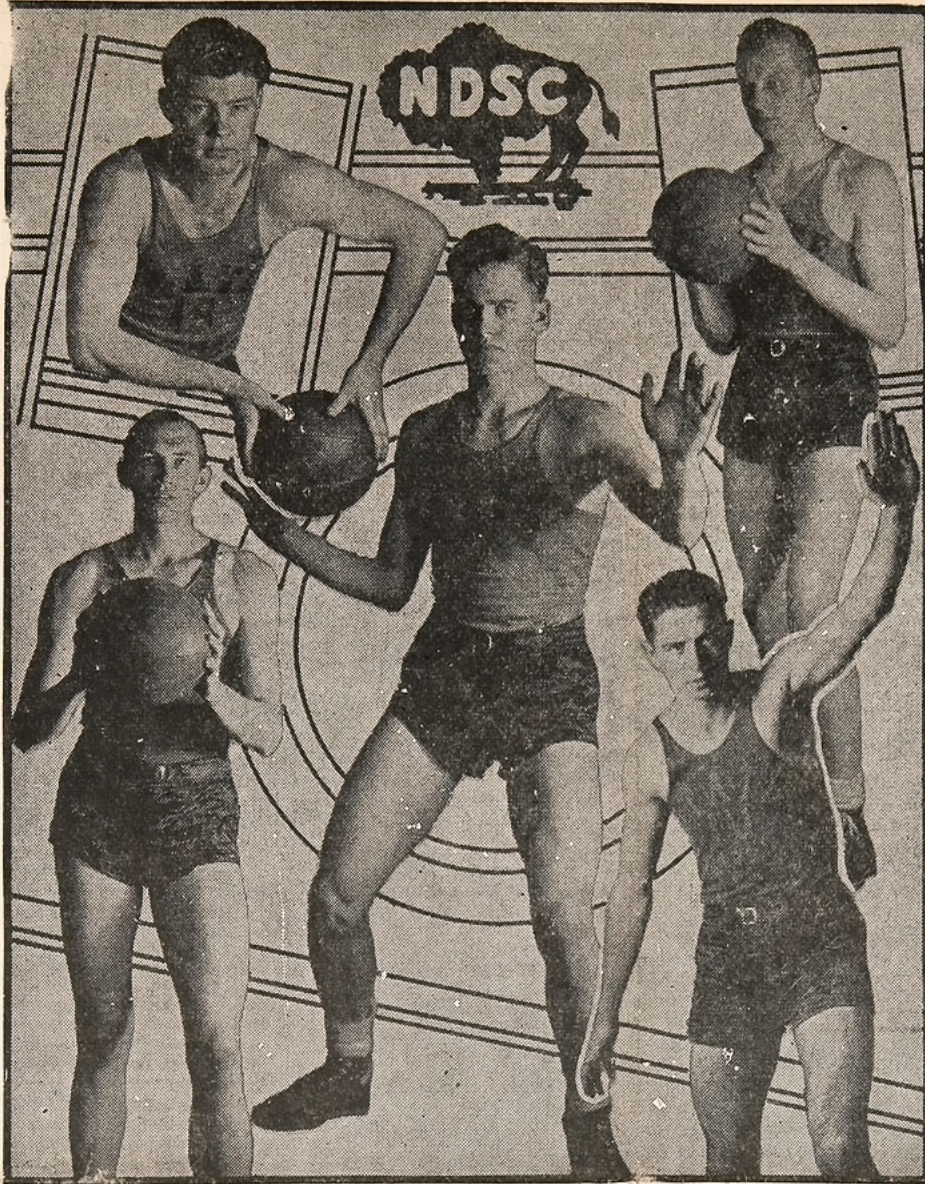

Miss Verne submitted a plate for an afternoon tea gown which, in the opinion of Miss Alice Bender, judge of the competition, was the most original and best suited to the needs of the chorus groups of "No, No, Nanette."

Second place was won by Eloise Voss, also H. E. jr., while third and fourth honors were given to Geraldine Acker, H. E. sr., and Jane Willson, H. E. soph. These students will serve on the costume committee with the winner, and the completed costumes will incorporate features of each of the four designs, selected from the 20 drawings presented.

Rehearsals for the all-college musical comedy, to be presented April 5, 6, are being held daily. Special publicity appearances of cast members will begin next week.

Howard Hegbar, member of Blue Key, has joined the production staff as chief electrician.

AC Basketball Stock Skyrockets With Win Over Sioux At Forks

Final of Four Game Series Will Be Fought On Bison Floor Friday and Saturday
Nights of This Week

Bison basketball "stock" skyrocketed to new highs after last Saturday night when the stout-hearted herd closed a seven-point University Sioux lead in a 2½ minute scoring spree and paved the way to a 26 to 23 victory for the NDAC. Post mortems of the initial two games with the University at Grand Forks last week-end indicate that the most optimistic Bison followers had secretly conceded defeat for their team when they learned of the crippled condition of the NDAC varsity prior to the initial two games of the four-game series with the Sioux. But the fans had not taken into consideration the fighting spirit of players, who after dropping the opener on Friday night to the University to the tune of 29 to 23, came back stronger than ever for their surprise win on Saturday.

12 Matches Won By Rifle Team

Squad Composed Mostly of Recruits Shape Up Well
for National Contest

The NDAC rifle team, coached by Capt. A. J. Tagliabue, has not been defeated in 12 postal matches this season.

Although the team is composed almost entirely of new members, Tagliabue believes that they are just about as competent as last year's team which won the National Intercollegiate trophy.

Below is a comparison of the NDAC's score with the other teams competing: Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, Pa., 1800, NDAC 1837; Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., 1784, NDAC 1837; Kemper Military School, Boonsville, Mo., 1817, NDAC 1837; Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Pa., 1251; NDAC 1837; Montana State College, Bozeman, Mont., 1764; NDAC 1837; Western Maryland, Westminster, Md., 1786; NDAC 1837; Oakland A. and M., Stillwater, Oklahoma 1810; NDAC 1837; U. of Dayton, Dayton, Ohio, 1780; NDAC 1862; Natrona Co. H. S., Casper, Wyoming, 1691; NDAC 1862; U. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn., 1821, NDAC 1862; U. of Kansas, 1755; NDAC 1862; U. of Washington, Seattle, Wash., 1381, NDAC 1862.

Stop Sioux Offense

In the two games at the Forks the Sioux saw their offense stopped effectively for the first time this season in North Central Conference play. Although Wes Phillips went out of the game both nights on personal fouls, his guarding proved effective in slowing down the sharp shooting eye of Emmett Birk, the outstanding Sioux performer, and limiting the University scoring ace to a single field goal on Saturday night. Bob Saunders' defensive play and seven-point contribution were important items in the victory, while Carl Rorvig's speed and aggressiveness were equally as important as his seven points. Russ Anderson, the leading conference scorer, who found the net for only one field goal Friday, lead the scoring Saturday with 11 points, sinking four field goals and three free throws in addition to playing a bangup defensive game.

Wendell Kielty and Forrest Stevens, elongated forwards, who shared duties in the front line, while failing to contribute heavily to the scoring, Kielty's free throw being the only tally, were important players in the Bison floor work and generally effective in controlling the rebounds off the boards.

Fraser May Play

Howard Fraser, star Bison guard until he injured his shoulder in the Morningside game, did not see service at the University. It is possible, however, that Coach Bob Lowe will use him for part of the games at the NDAC this Friday and Saturday, February 26 and 27, when the Sioux play the final two games with the Bison on their home court. Emil May, Ernest Wheeler and Bernard Toman will be available for the final games, giving the squad 100 per cent strength at the battles that will decide the winner of the conference race.

AC Will Debate U On Thursday

The annual exchange debates between the NDU and the NDAC will be held next Thursday evenings, one at each college.

Sam Mackoff and George Sorlie from the affirmative team that will debate at Grand Forks and Tom Ray and Richard Hoag constitute the negative team that will debate here. Judges have not yet been chosen while the subject will be the national Psi Kappa Delta question.

Representing the University at the University will be Marion Lesley and Mildred Burns; at Fargo Dale Nordquist, and Thomas Plant will uphold the affirmative for the visitors.

Alpha Zeta Elects New Members

Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural fraternity, last night elected to membership Donald Kaldor, Sam Trzcinski, and Clifford Volkerding, juniors in agriculture. Stanley Bale was awarded a certificate of recognition for being one of the two highest agriculture freshmen in the fall term. J. B. Martin, Hamilton, who is not in school this term, tied with Bale for highest. Their averages were 89.6.

Goplen Removed From Spectrum

Board of Publications Control
Dismisses Editor After Violation of Contract

At a special meeting of the Board of Publications Control held last night it was decided by unanimous vote to remove Orville Goplen as editor of the Spectrum.

The dismissal came as a result of Goplen's violation of his contract with the Board concerning the policies of student publications on controversial matters. Thursday a meeting was held between the Board and Goplen at which a formal retraction of several statements in question was drawn up to appear in the next issue of the Spectrum. The retraction, however, failed to appear and Goplen, at a second meeting with the Board, refused to comply with the request of that group and the school administration that the retraction still be printed.

As a result the dismissal was found necessary.

The Tartars, several centuries ago, often ate books in an attempt to acquire the knowledge in them.

NOTICE

The first three paragraphs of the Bison Briefs column as it appeared in the February 12 issue of the Spectrum are not in accord with the policies of the Board of Publications Control regarding controversial political issues and personalities, nor are they in accord with the Board's instructions to and agreement with the editor of the Spectrum. We regret exceedingly the lack of judgment and misinformation on the part of the editors that led to their publication and do hereby make formal retraction of the three above mentioned paragraphs.

Circus Play Is Well Received

Virginia Smith in Lead Role
Excellent; Others Well
Cast

Virginia Smith added to her other dramatic successes an excellent interpretation of the leading character in "Polly of the Circus" when it was presented last Tuesday at the Little Country theater.

The light comedy of this play was in contrast to the previous theater productions, "Elizabeth the Queen" and "Winterset" and was received in the same enthusiastic manner.

LaVerne Gilbertson is to be commended for her work as director and her characterization of Mandy, the colored servant. Joey Burgum was cast as her husband and he too turned in an excellent comedy role. Probably the most humor with least effort was given by Albert Hinkle as the not so pious churchman.

George Putz took the other leading role of Rev. John Douglas. Supporting characters were Jennie Barton, Jessie Herbison, Kelly Smith, Adelaide Dinwoodie, Marjorie Rooney, Robert Sanders, Orville Sorvick, Kenneth Archer, Richard Weltzin, Charles Wachter, and Ivah Brevik.

Students Contribute $96.75 At Flood Relief Convo.

NDAC students loosened their purse strings Thursday morning to the tune of $96.75, all of which is being turned over to the local Red Cross organization to be used for flood relief purposes. The contribution was collected as admission to a special convocation sponsored by Blue Key, campus service commission.

Featured by the initial public appearance of the Mighty Stewart-Art

Players, the program was presented by campus talent, supplemented by a short talk on the Red Cross by Hugh Corrigan, head of the local body.

The program was in the form of a radio skit with Bill Stewart, announcer and master-of-ceremonies. Campus organizations represented were the Kappa Kappa Psi band, directed by Doc Putnam and the Walsh-Sanders swing band.

Headlining the list of famous radio personalities was Franklin D. Roosevelt, excellently portrayed by Orville Sorvick. Eleanor Powell (in private life Lois Rudrud) added to the success of the program with one of her spirited tap dance routines. Coming directly from Iceland to present a dramatic-trombone skit, "The Three Little Bears" was Eddie Gudmundson.

The New Rockford trio, Ruth

Piper, Genevieve and Dorothy Hawkins, aided by Don Putnam scored another hit as did Putnam and Virginia Smith in one of their well-known classical skits. Others contributing to the program were Wilfred Rommel, James Baccus and Dean Cavett.

The Blue Key committee in charge of the event was composed of Baccus, Rommel, Max Thal, Howard Hegbar, Dayton Jones and Kent Helland.

Supreme Court Reform Arouses Interest

President Roosevelt's suggested change of the supreme court has aroused widespread discussion throughout the nation. It is a change which would affect fundamentally our governmental order.

FOR...

The present furor over the proposed supreme court alteration seems little else than a thermometer of social movement. From the vantage point of the chief executive's chair, it is an indirect answer to the subtle clamorings of a restless nation, supposedly bent on selection of security through necessary regimentation of a moderate nature.

The problems of our critical day need the untiring activity of a class grounded in the thinking, not found in the gay nineties of generous despoliation when unchecked and now unwanted individualism ran high, but enthroned on the fine pedestal of Americanism that will again make 'the land of the free and the home of the brave'—God's country!

The indefensible cry of "sporadic like-behavior" in ensuing governmental party moves, smacks strongly of lack of faith in the very essence of Democracy to which the propounders claim such close allegiance.

AGAINST...

This question of revamping the supreme court to include more and younger members seems a definite trend toward dictatorship, resulting in giving too many appointive powers to one man—the chief executive.

If tradition that has proved its worth over a great number of years is thus disregarded in the supreme court, will not that power tend to destroy other traditions upon which the foundation of this country rests?

MEN SAY:

Oh, why are women that way? Those red lips and pruned eye-brows and dazzling smiles react with men like steam on ice, and the men invariably melt. They can't help it, it's their nature. But it isn't woman's nature, they have been subjective to man's will since the beginning of time and have only recently gained independent voice.

WOMEN SAYS:

Oh, why are men that way? They try to be so stoical, why it's pathetic! Anyone can read their every little thought and heart-flutter. They are gullible and imaginative. Imaginative! why they think every little flutter of the eye-lid is a come-on!

Growth Of School Contests Commended

The growth of inter-school contests between the NDU and NDAC is commendable in building of better relations between the two institutions. This year more contests than ever are scheduled.

Outside of athletic circles, the two schools will meet in debates next week and the annual exchange of newspaper editors is scheduled soon.

All activities are a trend in the betterment of relations between North Dakota's two major educational institutions.

Swan Song Season

So you are a senior? We might expend reams telling you all about the cruel, cruel world you have to bat your head against when June hits the campus—almost next week; about all the pitfalls of the struggle for livelihood; of the hardships of existence free from the protective wing of Alma Mater.

You would grit your teeth and attempt to look grim with a complete realization of the quota which is set for you—and then in a moment your mind has wandered to those Rolls Royces, fine furs and eleven footmen. So we won't do that.

We'll let the tasks of 1937-38 unfold themselves before your very eyes in the manner which is more impressive—reality!

Our point is in the tasks of this semester. Through every hall and Greek letter organization rings that annual tune, "Oh, well, what do I care, I'll be gone in a few weeks."

This is your last semester, you say, and you want to make the most of it. Absolutely nothing on your mind but a few studies (as few as your record will allow) and a lot of time to do the things you have promised yourself for three and a half years you were going to do.

In a general way, you can get the same result by casually stepping off the curb into the path of a five-ton truck. Three days or three weeks or three months later you wake up surrounded by what should be flowers but what is likely to turn out to be a lot of pretty thistles and you realize that "you have missed the boat."

Wherever you may be in your delirium it is difficult to contact you, because long before D. W. Griffith conceived the fadeout for motion pictures, seniors were expert at it.

Carry your share of the load in the organizations individually and the University collectively. Just because your application for a degree may be filed there is not justification for forgetting that the starter always signals which is the last lap—and that lap is for the sprint. Being a senior does not make you eligible for the social security act's old age assistance.

Time for fun, Spring has come!!!

A silver loving cup will be offered to the winner of the Bison cut sales contest, which ends March 1st, according to Maurice Benidt, business manager. "It is the desire of the Bison staff to have every student represented in the classes section, in order to obtain a book truly representative of the student body," said Benidt.

Injury Jinx "Dogs" Bison In Sioux Basketball Series

Three Regulars Are Handicapped

Question Is, Will Bison Keep Up Courage To Turn in Three Wins

For the sixth consecutive year the North Central basketball championship will be at stake in the annual Bison and Sioux series.

It began in 1932, when Coach L. T. Saalwaechter's quintet copped the first — and only conference recognition game — of a series of two to gain the North Central conference championship. Again in 1933 the Bison clinched the championship by defeating Clem Letich's boys in a crucial two game series.

In 1934, however, the Bison, although splitting the four game series with the Sioux, lost its chance at the title because of other defects. This year also inaugurated the present four game series, with each game counting as one half of a conference game. The Sioux repeated their victory in 1935 in four straight wins.

Last year the Sioux carried off the honors and the championship by defeating the Bison in three games out of four.

For the fourth consecutive year, the Bison went to Grand Forks with the effectiveness of their first string combination impaired by injuries. In 1934, after blossoming out as the sensation of conference as a sophomore center, Russ Anderson went to the Forks severely injured after being shoved into the wall in the Sioux game at Fargo.

In 1935, Anderson was out of school, but Arnold Bernard was literally burning up the conference with a 15-per game scoring average. In the first Sioux game he twisted his knee and could not play the remainder of the season.

Anderson was back in 1936 and the Bison has a formidable outfit, needing Bernard's sharp-shooting to round out a championship club. But Bernard's knee never did improve and he saw little service.

This year Bob Saunders, after playing his best basketball of his career, sprained his ankle just previous to the series. He will play, but the injury has slowed him up. In the same game Howard Fraser, who developed sensationally at guard, injured his shoulder and he did not see service in the first two of the four-game series. His effectiveness will be reduced. Previously the Bison lost Forrest Stevens, six foot four forward, who will do some reserve duty.

Thus the Bison go into this year's crucial series with the Sioux with three of the regulars, which stopped Minnesota, leaders in the Big Ten, impaired by injuries.

Will the Bison have courage and fight enough to turn tide against the course taken in the last three years?

Smith's Charges Are Primed To Wipe Out Sting of Forks Defeat

Smarting under a one-point defeat at the hands of the Sioux frosh administered at Grand Forks last Saturday, the Bison yearlings are primed to shoot the works when they meet the University first year squad on their home floor this Saturday afternoon. The score at Grand Forks was 31 to 30.

The Bison frosh squad will be intact, according to Coach Johnny Smith.

Ted Whalen of Grafton, a forward, will be ready for Saturday. Last winter Whalen played with the frosh team at the University of Minnesota and according to McCormick, director of athletics at Minnesota, he was one of their most promising yearlings. Herman Larson of Mad-dock, is another outstanding frosh forward. Other forwards are Lloyd Troseth of Hannaford, Merrill Green of Enderlin, and Reaburn Fisk of Hunter. The outstanding frosh center is Sidney Saign of Waaubun, Minn. He is tall, fast and an accurate shot.

Another Minnesota boy who also plays at the center position, is Byron Glad of Lancaster. Guards who will see plenty of work in the frosh eseries are James Maxwell of Grafton, Wallace Ruud of Hoople and Joe LaFournaise of Wahpeton, Joe Kojancik of Aurora, Minn., and Cliff Stefanowicz of Lakota, all guards who can give a good account of themselves.

Nine printing and journalism students became charter members of the South Dakota State College chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, last week.

Botany Students Hold Open House

The students majoring in the department of botany staged their second annual open house last Wednesday. Displays of the various fields of botany and research work being carried on in the department were shown to over one hundred students and faculty members.

After lunch was served, three reels of motion pictures from the Department of Agriculture on its service of locating, breeding, and testing new plant varieties were shown. The concluding feature and hi-light of the evening was an illustrated and "verbally augmented" talk on Yellowstone Park by Chas. Dave Taylor, chairman of the committee on general arrangements, states, "We who are majoring in the department enjoy putting on the open house and so doing present to the elementary students and faculty the nature of the advanced courses and the possibilities and scope of botanical work."

3,783 Youths Find Employment In Jan.

In spite of the usual post-holiday decline in the number of job opportunities for inexperienced young workers, 3,783 placements in private employment for youths under 25 were secured during January by the Junior Employment Service of the National Youth Administration, Dr. Mary H. S. Hayes, deputy executive director, announced.

While the January total represents a decline of nearly 2,000 from the number of jobs secured in December, such a decrease is to be expected, Dr. Hayes declared.

"Employment in nearly all lines showed a marked increase in December under the impetus of Christmas buying," she said. "In that month, our Junior Employment Service succeeded in placing 5,669 young workers—the greatest number in any month since the program began in March.

"Many of these jobs, of course, were for the duration of the holidays only. Those who were laid off after Christmas naturally resumed the search for other jobs, and thus complicated, to some degree, the situation for other young people seeking work.

"Under such circumstances, the making of 3,783 new placements in January is something of an achievement."

It was announced at the same time that the number of employment offices serving young people had increased by five during the month, bringing the total at present to 48. New units are located at Albuquerque, N. M., Reno, and Las Vegas, Nev., and Houston and Dallas, Texas.

These offices, staffed by the National Youth Administration, work in co-operation with regular United States employment service offices, taking the applications of job seekers under 25 years of age and seeking out the types of work for which they are best suited.

This is recognized as a particularly important service at present because of the demands of specialization surrounding most fields of employment and the corresponding inability of so many young people to secure the training necessary to equip them for a job.

Thirty-one per cent of the young people registering for the first time in January had never worked before, having only their willingness and ambition to recommend them to a prospective employer. Of those registering over a ten month period ending December 31, 1936, only 50 per cent had any previous work experience.

Seven per cent of the 8,201 young

While 44 per cent of the new applicants were high school graduates, 33 per cent had been forced to drop out of school before completing their high school course and 22 per cent had not progressed beyond the eighth grade. Approximately one per cent were college graduates.

Federal Finance Will Not Be Lessened, Governor Is Advised

Abolition of compulsory military training at NDAC and the University was made final Wednesday when Governor William Langer signed House Bill 36 providing for this change. The bill will take effect July 1.

The Governor had previously voiced his approval of the measure when he spoke over a state-wide broadcast last week. He said, "Frankly I believe that the Agricultural college and the State University were not founded to train men to fight. They were chartered for specific purposes—among others, to provide an education. That means the unfolding of personality; the cultivation of ideals; the bestowal of vision; the clarifying of purpose; the strengthening of will; the development of character. Certainly it would not be necessary to require that young men take military drill before they can receive an academic degree. In adhering to the business of education these schools serve the state best."

"Another motive that compels me to sign the bill is that I have received a telegram from the president of the land grant colleges at Washington, who advises me that the finance received from the federal government in case military drill is made optional instead of compulsory, will in no wise be lessened, and that our state university and our state college will receive the same amount of money from the federal government when military drill is optional, as they got when it was compulsory. So, as I said, I am going to sign the bill."

Dallas Dedrick, Chem. Instructor, Counts Music His Hobby, Chemistry His Business

By JIM BACCUS

Someone (perhaps O. O. McIntyre) once coined the simile: As changeable as a trombone player. Its curious, but most of the professional trombone players I know are small, bald-headed, and loquacious. This last quality is not always restricted to the professional ranks; perhaps this confidence is due to the fact that in every marching band except Doc Putnam's, the trombonist is placed on the front line, plus the fact that the instrument has the unique and (to me) always surprising ability to double its length.

Dr. Dallas Dedrick, instructor in chemistry, is the living exception to these observations. He played trombone in high school and college, and still counts music as a hobby, but he is physically towering, by no means bald, is modest and unassuming.

Born In Texas

Dr. Dedrick was not named for the Texas city, although he was born not so far from the Lone Star state, in Hobart, Oklahoma. He attended Oklahoma City University, home of the gridiron Gold Bugs, receiving his A. B. in 1927. He attended the State University of Iowa, at Iowa

City, for his higher physical chemistry degree, receiving his Masters in 1929, his Ph. D. in 1931. His minors are in physics and mathematics.

September, 1931 found him beginning his first term of teaching at NDAC; he has been busy ever since. Aside from instructing majors in physical chemistry, graduate students in colloids and thermodynamics, he leads service courses for pharmacy and agriculture majors, and teaches his share of the some 500 freshmen taking the basic chemistry.

Is Physical Chemist

The broad and important subject of colloids interests Dr. Dedrick tremendously. He has written some half-dozen papers on his subject for the Journal of Physical Chemistry devoted to the publication of scientific data in that field. His summer vacations have been spent in research at the Iowa University laboratories; from his own work-shop recently has come results of experiments which have shed some light on the theory of emulsification.

Speaking of his work, Dr. Dedrick says, "The field of physical chemistry is broadening at amazing speed, faster than civilization can assimilate and utilize it. We have only scratched the surface in our research. As the subject becomes of age, it will become more integrated, more connected with its brother fields."

Enjoys Music

Although he has laid by his musical instrument, the instructor counts music his first leisure-interest. He enjoys music of all types, listens to the more important radio musical programs, comedians Benny and Allen. He smokes, enjoys bridge, plays volley ball on the faculty league, reads biographies.

Dedrick enjoys teaching for the opportunity it affords to meet and come to know the students. A student in human nature, he is sympathetic and understanding, quiet-speaking in his class-room lectures. Students like him.

Led Faculty Club

A member of Sigma Xi, national scholarship fraternity, he is also an honorary member of Kappa Sigma Chi. He just recently relinquished the presidency of the Faculty Men's Club, is a member of the Chemists' club.

Married, he resides at 1315 10th Ave. North. They have no children.
