House Bill 36 Still Undecided; Committee In Senate Favorable

Senate Members Not Perturbed Over Military Proposal

Psychology of Legislative Members Interesting Study

Robert Williams and Kent Heland of the Spectrum staff spent the early part of the week in Bismarck, visiting the senators to present arguments in behalf of compulsory military training. Below are interpretations of reactions, activities and behavior of legislators as given by Williams.

By ROBERT WILLIAMS

House bill 36 proposed to make military optional at the university of North Dakota and NDAC is a rather minor problem as analyzed by members of the senate.

Recognized as a cog in the liberal movement, it is however, being bitterly fought by the American Legion and students of both schools involved. At the same hour NDAC students here were rallying 1,000 strong to defeat the bill, senators in Bismarck were reading communications from the Farmers Union local, and the American Federation of Teachers local in defense of the proposal.

Division Is Close

Senators contacted were interested to the extent of asking for information regarding the status of military training at the college. Lieut. Gov. T. H. H. Thoresen expressed the belief that the battle in the senate would be one of solving the appropriations problem as it would affect the school.

The house, formerly, debated the bill from the standpoint of militarists versus pacifists which evaded the problem as it relates to appropriations. Farmers Union lobbyists were confident that the senate would show 27 favorable votes, but an unofficial ballot conducted in hotels and lobbies by your writer showed 25 against, 23 for, and one non-committal.

Teachers Write

Senator Kroeber showed a letter signed by Dr. H. C. Hanson of the College in which he stated, "We teachers are convinced that it is to the best interests of the students as well as the institution, and certainly to the state, to have military drill optional instead of compulsory." This proved misleading to some who did not understand that the American Federation of Teachers local was composed of only a percentage of the faculty as a

Petition-Signing, Telegram-

The destiny of house bill 36, focal point of week's discussion on the campus, was still hanging fire in the senate, according to latest word from the state legislature. The bill is yet to be debated on the senate floor after being recommended for passage by an 8 to 3 vote of the education committee.

Rabble-raising, meetings, campus arguments, petition-signing and telegraph-sending marked local reaction to the compulsory military bill. Discussion of the issue has held the front line of interest among students since the house passed the voluntary measure last week.

Approximately 1,000 students attended the convocation Tuesday to hear discussion of the question. The meeting instigated by sympathizers of compulsory drill turned out to be pro-compulsory in program, atmosphere and sentiment, but was a measure of ascertaining the majority of the students to favor retention of the compulsory feature.

Ronald Peterson and Donald Erickson, lone defenders of voluntary measure given places on the program, were heckled and booed by those attending.

Speaking for compulsory drill were Francis Ladwig, Georgia Cook, Orville Sorvick and James Elwin. Gorman King, who professed neutrality on the issues, gave his interpretation of the deposition of the voluntary bill and predicted it would become a law. Howard Hegbar was chairman.

Over 800 signatures, mostly of men students, were affixed to petitions requesting retention of compulsory drill sent to the state legislature early this week. These petitions were circulated by members of Scabbard and Blade. Other petitions supporting the bill drew many signers and were circulated by the Farmers Union group. Approximately 125 telegrams were sent by students with the alumni association financing this movement.

HOLD LAND PROGRAM

C. H. Plath of the federal land use office for North Dakota was chairman of a conference of representatives of various federal and state organizations interested in a program of land use held Wednesday in the agricultural building. The conference discussed methods of procedure and objectives of a logical land use program for the state.

Proponents Of Voluntary Military Bill Forecast No Loss In Appropriations, Opponents Say Funds Will Be Stopped

In an attempt to chronicle arguments presented by students in regard to the voluntary military bill, which aroused the most widespread opinionating on the part of undergraduates evidenced on controversial issues in many a moon, a Spectrum reporter interviewed students as to their opinions.

Published below are representative viewpoints pro and con by students:

Elizabeth Dewey, sr., A. A. and S.—I am opposed to house bill 36 because I can see in it nothing but a detrimental loss to our institution, financially and morally. Military training is a heritage to this land grant college. Why destroy this heritage without offering something to take its place?

Eldred Lee, sr., A. A. and S.—Even the most cursory examination of military history of the United States and other countries shows that there has not been a war fought with untrained men that could not have been successfully concluded in a much shorter time and with fewer lives lost. This to me is a complete justification of required military training.

Katherine Kilbourne, sr. A. A. and S.—Although it is encouraging to know that college students feel their responsibilities in legislative matters affecting the institution, I believe the mass meeting exhibited last week reverted to a conflict of personalities rather than the main issue of compulsory military training.

Robert Amidon, fr., A. A. & S.—We all realize the tense atmosphere existing between world powers today. Some are even having compulsory training for women. Already a situation exists in Spain that may serve as a fuse to once again set off the works. To discard compulsory training at this time might be likened to a hunter throwing away his gun when he sees a lion charging down on him.

Howard Hegbar, sr., E. E.—North Dakota cannot afford to pass the non-compulsory military training bill. With at least five years of low production, this state cannot afford to refuse federal assistance given to schools that include a two year compulsory training period. North Dakota has won national recognition through Doc Putnam and his Gold Star Band. We cannot afford to destroy Doc's efforts of 34 years.

Dwight Hunkins, jr., A. A. and S.—I firmly believe that war is inevitable and when it comes we will be drawn into it regardless of whether it is abroad or on our own soil. At that time every able-bodied male citizen between the ages of 18 and 45 will be drafted into the army regardless of whether or not he is a Democrat, Republican, Farmer Unionist, Socialist, or Communist. Does it seem unfair then that those who will have to bear the burden of the next war be compelled to spend three hours a week nine months out of the year in learning the basic essentials so that time will not be lost in ending that cruel and inhuman game as quickly and as expediently as possible? In view of these facts I wholeheartedly advocate compulsory military training and the defeat of house bill 36.

Tom Donovan, soph., A. A. and S.—I think that compulsory military training is a nuisance. I think that there is every reason to believe we can make it optional and still keep the unit here in more abbreviated form along with more than enough federal cash to blanket the tears of its so many stout-hearted defenders.

R. Gordon Arneson, jr., A. A. and S.—There is considerable doubt as to the value of the product turned out by the ROTC. It is not at all established that an institution providing only voluntary military training loses its appropriations under the Morrill act nor that the unit will be removed from this college if training is made voluntary. Voluntary training will allow the student to exercise independence of thought which education seeks to develop in him, the conscientious objector to make his choice, the earnest, time-thrifty student to use three hours per week to better advantage.

Joey Burgum, jr., A. A. and S.—I am neither a communist nor a member of the Farmers Union. I favor passage of House bill 36 because it shall eliminate an uneducational feature from our school. After studying effects of similar rulings in other schools, I am of opinion that: (1) federal money will not be taken from us; (2) R. O. T. C will be maintained for those who wish to wear the shiny putts and breeches; (3) Doc and the band will still be with us, better than ever. (Concordia supports a band without military subsidy that was good enough to tour Europe.)

The Editor's Corner

GIVEN decidedly shabby treatment at the rabble-rousing convocation instigated to crystallize opinion for the support of compulsory ROTC were the student defenders of House Bill No. 36 invited to the platform. Billed as an open forum meeting to air both sides of the question, it was soon apparent that the affair was pre-arranged to bring out mob sentiment in support of the adherents of compulsory drill. Placed on the program first and without chance for rebuttal, the two lone supporters of the house bill were heckled in a disgraceful manner. The sophomoric mud-slinging directed at faculty and student members was despicable.

THE MEETING PROVED EFFECTIVE

to the defenders of compulsory drill in that it did heighten the interest of an apparently predominant majority of students who do favor the retention of the compulsory drill. As a longtime exponent of voluntary drill, I must confess that with the student so decidedly in favor of its retention, it would be unwise to pass the voluntary bill at the present session. Now accuse me of being a fence-straddler.

AT THE PRESENT MOMENT IT appears that going to the 1937 Bison Brevities will be deprived of seeing the hit team of the 1936 edition, Virginia Smith and Don Putnam. The former is dramatic director of the show and thus is diffident about projecting herself into the acting limelight, while Putnam maintains studies in his senior engineering course will not permit him to do any acting. It seems, however, the pair could at least do some between-the-acts stunt. Some student persuasion might effect it. —O. H. G.

ON MILITARY BILL

To The Editor:

The student body of NDAC was given a real treat on Tuesday morning of this week. When two groups of supposedly intelligent individuals adopt maudlin tactics as were done at this convocation we have a "fine state of affairs".

To the group that were responsible for the beautiful placards hung in Festival hall, let me remind them, that it is the work of children rather than intelligent college students. Personalities had no place in a meeting of this kind and any attempt to bring them in must be classed as malicious slander. May I also caution the debaters for the so-called "Militarists" that they should not engage in making loose remarks about the University having a band and this school having none. That is pernicious deceit.

To the "Pacifists," you are guilty of making issue of a trivial matter when there are other issues that are more pertinent to the welfare of the people of North Dakota and NDAC. To those who are supporting the passage of this bill, are you fighting for a principle that you believe in or are you fighting for purely selfish reasons?

May both sides come to their next argument with a few more implements with which to argue. To the audience it must have been disappointing to find nothing for the mind to grasp.

The incident of Tuesday morning was laughable to say the least. Possibly a farce of this kind is all that can be expected when a group of amateur politicians decide to turn on the pressure.

—Harold Olson.

To The Editor:

The efforts of certain farm blocs to eliminate compulsory military training from the two state institutions are prompted by deeper motives than the superficial idea to choose the breeders of future combatants in arms off the campus. I believe my statement to be true in part, at least, because the opposition to military training has not come forth with the usual rabid propaganda, "that we must drive the dogs of war out of our schools."

The motive is not new, but it is simply a resurrection of the old grievance farming North Dakota versus metropolitan East, Fargo. Many farmers feel, perhaps rightly so, that the actual control of everything connected with administration of the college lies in the hands of business men operating within a restricted area. The agricultural sections of the state can forgive the administration of our state university by professional men, but they object heatedly to the idea that the agricultural and technological school be controlled by the middle class. Our university is intended primarily as a school of the professions. Our agricultural college has a different purpose and was established with a different view in mind.

—Robert V. Russ,
Senior in Education.

To The Editor:

I think it is about time that some of the false statements about the consequences of voluntary military training be laid bare for the benefit of the student body. House bill 36, which would abolish compulsory military training, explicitly provides that military training cannot be discontinued. The claim that military training would have to be maintained solely by state funds if compulsory training were abolished, is, of course, preposterous.

The statements that the band will lose instruments, or uniforms, or that the unit will in some way cost the state more money are also entirely without factual basis. The following statements taken from the Congressional Record constitute the proof for my statements.

On Dec. 12, 1928, the following dialogue took place between Congressman Ross A. Collins, of Mississippi, a member of the subcommittee, and Capt. D. A. Watt, of the Adjutant General's Office of the War Department (pp. 881-882, U. S. House Hearings, War Department appropriation bill for 1930):

Mr. Collins: "You divide them (the schools and colleges having military training units) into those where training is compulsory and those where it is not compulsory, do you not?"

Capt. Watt: "No sir; they are all treated alike, does not enter into it so far as the war department is concerned. The war department does not require military training. That is left to the institutions."

Mr. Collins: "Do you furnish those schools where the military training is compulsory more than you do the strictly civilian institutions?"

Capt. Watt: "No sir; they are all treated alike, depending upon the branch of service."

So you see, Dr. Putnam, no one is recommending the removal of hospitals, but we are recommending the removal of the causes which do destroy the hospitals. We are only seeking for academic freedom for men students.

—Winfield Fine.

To the Editor:

To emphasize the stand of influential state officials and to clarify discussion on pros and cons of the federal appropriations fight in connection with the voluntary military bill, submit the following telegram received by the Farmers Union local early this week:

"Large dinner groups composed of state officials, legislators, labors, Farmers Union and others endorse your convocation on military bill. Sentiment expressed unanimously in favor of optional military training. Quoting Nye's telegram verbatim, 'Legislature has full right to determine policy without danger of federal retaliation.'
Signed, H. W. McInnes, chairman."
—Russell Stuart.

BISON BRIEFS

By JIM BACCUS

Everybody likes a good scrap, and Bill 36 seems to be kicking up a dandy. All's fair in love and politics but we wonder what caused the lads to draw a card from the grimy deck of national political tricks and bring in faculty personalities. This corner fails to see why it was necessary to smear thinly veiled references around the campus, when there has been no proof that the instructors in question were interested in this crusade the organization, to which they have been linked, has been conducting.

Probably the men were interested in the farm organization's problems only as long as they remained in the sphere of marketing and raising living standards. Perhaps they have opinions, but neither have voiced them in any way. The fact that it was a question involving the school was enough to guarantee their silence. Politicians grow to accept such tactics—thrive on them; the very fact that these men were faculty members should have been enough to insure them respect and courtesy from the student body.

It was last Sunday mid-night and Ceres hall was as quiet as a General Motors plant. Somebody called Rosemary Lee to the phone, so she pulled on her slippers getting one inner sole all lumped up, and hobbled down the corridor. Social Director Ewald, seeing that the call was coming from within the building, grew suspicious, and investigated while Rosemary, doing a little investigation of her own discovered the defunct mouse that some of her friends had lovingly inserted in her slipper. Pandemonium! Such goings-on, you little cut-ups. Now the question is: "Who receptacle the rodent in the spadrills and rang the lovely Rose?" Eev. Barnes and Jeanne Paris swear they didn't do it. Not being there, I can't prove that they did. Or that it even happened.

People: Johnny Halcrow is having a great time with his high school practice teaching, a five hour "Auto Safety" course. A desirable thing, it would seem. It was Delmer (Guilgud) Skow who said that the Winterset cast had a waffly good time at Miss Bender's party. Skow, that versatile fellow, had to give up the lead in 'Polly of the Circus,' in order to get into the Golden Glove mixup in Minneapolis next week. Deserting the foos for the floods the boards for the canvas and rawsin, as it were. We understand he's free-lancing it—imagine paying your own way to a fight, when you crawl in a little ring with two others, one bent on annihilating you as quickly as possible. He should have stayed with Arvold. Mrs. McVeety, who has walked the icy streets all winter to and from her home on 7th St., fell on the bottom step of those inside the library doors.

It must keep Jack Benny humping to get his program ready for Sunday, when he has to wait until Fred Allen's hour is over to write his. Did you see the swell burleycue on symphony conductors that the Central Park cop did in "Born to Dance?" And did you hear the Duncan sisters on the NBC Red Cross charity? Malcolm Cowley's "Exile's Return" isn't bad reading.

This is for the senior who was griping to me about his chances in life, and for all those of dear old Class of 1937 who wondering in the same vein. It came from Ed Sullivan's column, which is one of the Big Stem's better strips, and I pass it on for what its worth. "Youngsters who are starting out in life, armed with diplomas from grammar school or college, need not feel too depressed over your chances of suc-

Unbeaten Five Face Bison In Game Tonight

Classy Morningside Team Has Unspoiled Conference Record

Holds Title In Two Tourneys, Two Victories Over Iowa Teachers

Morningside's basketball team, probably the classiest in history of that school, stands as a dangerous barrier to the Bison tonight in their campaign for the North Central conference basketball championship. The game is set for 8 p. m.

The Maroons, undefeated in three conference games boast a season's record which includes championship of two intercollegiate tournaments and two wins, one by a one-sided score over Iowa Teachers, who gave both the Bison and University of North Dakota close battles.

Boast Brother Pairs

The Sioux City, Iowa, team has a very fast quintet, which includes two brothers combinations, Andersons and Rosenbergers, who are all exceptionally talented.

In their northern invasion this week-end, the Maroons hold the key to the final results of the conference race. They face the Bison and Sioux, both holding five wins and no defeats, on successive nights. Victory over both would cinch the title for Morningside, while a lone win over either would give the victor in the other contest a decided edge for the conference title.

Anderson Leading

Holding the lead in the race for conference scoring honor is Russ Anderson with 66 points in five games. He holds a 16-point advantage over Robert Curtis, Iowa Teacher pivot man who has played six games.

Bob Finnegan and Emmet Birk, all-conference forwards from the University of North Dakota, held third and fourth place, respectively, the former with 45, and the latter, 41.

Bob Saunders and Carl Rorvig of the Bison are eighth and ninth with 29 and 28 points, respectively.

Seniors Win Coed Cage Tournament

For the third consecutive year, the group of girls now composing the senior basketball team have won first in the inter-class tournament. The team is composed of Lottie Behrens, captain; Olive Murchie, Ethel Olson, Emma Jordre, Grace Gruttlie, Helen Boettcher, and Mary Fay Wenger. The freshman team under co-captains, Tessie Thue and Beverly Barnes, was runner-up.

Standings at the close of the tournament were:

This week the inter-sorority tournament began for the Delta Psi Kappa trophy.

HOLD APPRAISAL SCHOOL

Field men of the Federal Land Bank under the leadership of R. W. Gowland attended a three-day school held here this week to secure information about soils, crops, and livestock for use in land appraisal. School was under the direction of Cap. E. Miller.

The University of Iowa defeated the University of North Dakota basketball team, 35 to 30, last Wednesday.

Bison Defeat 2 Conference Foes On Trip

Omaha Victims By 42-18 Count; Iowa Teachers By 28-23 Score

Russ Anderson Leads Scoring For NDAC on Road Engagements

The Herd left little doubt in the minds of southern aspirants to the title as they drubbed Omaha University, 42-18, last Saturday and then continued on to trip the highly-touted Iowa Teachers by a score of 28-23.

Russ Anderson and Carl Rorvig added necessary field goals in final minutes of play against the Teachers to cinch the victory after a hard-fought engagement in which the lead changed 18 times. Anderson maintained his 13-point average to draw 15 ahead of his nearest rival for individual scoring honors, namely Bob Curtis, Panther center.

Coach Bob Lowe did not make the trip but Johnny Smith spirited the starting five into consistent ball handling and shooting that proved the margin of victory. Saunders and Rorvig supported Anderson consistently in the scoring column to give the team the balance it has needed throughout the season.

Seek New Bill For AC Support

Secretary Hagen Ordered to Draw Up New Appropriations Measure

Secretary S. W. Hagen has been ordered to draw up a new bill immediately to take the place of three other bills concerning appropriations for the college proper, extension division and experiment station. The former bill was subject of heated debate in the appropriations committee meeting in which Hagen and President J. H. Shepherd were cross-examined at length. The examination also concerned other items affecting the college such as the men's residence hall.

Earlier, Representative Roy Frazier had moved that a committee of three be appointed to investigate, with a like committee from the senate, alleged activities at the college. Representative Twitchell moved that the motion be amended to investigate the state board of administration.

Under the original motion Frazier asked that the committee investigate "an apparent diversion of funds appropriated by the 1935 legislature for certain things, as well as the bond deals for the dormitory and the purported fascist demonstration in the college for the purpose of intimidating legislators in their official duties." The motion was passed with amendment.

The committee was also asked to "investigate the $60,000 tax placed on the college for the sewage disposal plant, and the charge made against the college by the city of Fargo for water to wash their sewage system."

Frazier attempted to withdraw his motion but this was not allowed because the amendment had been approved. Twitchell then challenged Frazier to "investigate your Non-partisan board." Both house members chimed in with the general round of laughter that followed.

European Travels Subject For Talk

Anna Jane Black, freshman in applied arts and sciences, will be speaker for culture meeting next Thursday in the YWCA fireplace room.

Last summer Miss Black with her family visited the central powers of Europe including England, France, Germany and Italy. Basing her talk on these travels, Miss Black will speak on "Cultures in Contemporary Europe."

An innovation for this culture meeting will be a reception committee of hostesses including Dorothy Reed, Marion Smith and Marion Anstett.

Graduate Plans Meals For 5,000

Planning meals for 5,000 patients and 950 employees at the Manteno State Hospital in Illinois, is the work which will keep Clarice Gullickson, a 1931 graduate of the school of home economics, occupied after July 1. At present she is in direct charge of 19 dining rooms, serving 3300 people. She recently completed plans for additional equipment to increase the serving capacity of the institution to 5950.

"The food is all purchased quarterly," says Miss Gullickson in a letter to Alba Bales, dean of the NDAC division of home economics. "Last quarter I spent a little over $51,000. We have good food—all top grade—excellent meat and poultry. Illinois is very much advanced in feeding of state patients. There is a dietitian in every institution.

"Our state food and textile advisor spent last week with me. She was pleased with my work. Enough so that she asked me to consider an appointment as her assistant in the spring. If I accept, I will be located in Springfield."

Miss Gullickson's home is at Montpelier, North Dakota.

Huntoon Leader Of Fine Arts Meet

Talks and demonstrations brought out that one fine art is supplemented by another and the same forms or patterns were used in the development of all special correlated arts. This was concluded in an innovated procedure in club events used in a meeting of the Fine Arts club under the direction of Homer Huntoon Wednesday.

Examples of modern art under the three divisions: abstract, surrealism, and propaganda were presented.

Huntoon gave the architectural sketches, Alice Bender the literature, Miss Ann Brown the art.

House Bill 36 Still Undecided

whole and the impression was left that the local faculty as a majority favored it, which is not true.

The bill was referred to the committee on education following its first reading in the senate. This committee reported in favor of the bill Wednesday by a vote of 8 to 3. This margin was expected since the membership of that committee are predominately boosters of the bill through their political affiliations. The committee report is in no sense a measure of the sentiment of the entire senate.

Observe Procedure
It is interesting to note the procedure of house members in debating appropriations bills. The senate is quite dignified and peaceful compared to the lower house, where party lines are more pronounced and parliamentary procedure not so readily understood.

Opposition to appropriations or salary increases is sectional. Western farmers who have taken a severe beating during the last few years naturally view a man receiving $1500 a year as a capitalist. At any rate they cannot favor an increase in salaries which would raise the tax burden on these people.

Accorded Co-operation
Members of the house and senate and others including Pat Flannigan, Lieut. Gov. Thoresen, and Gerald Movius of the Fargo Forum were especially willing to do all in their power to direct "green" lobbyists in presentation of their arguments. The cooperation and hearing the legislators accorded was astonishing considering the other affairs confronting these men.

Winterset Given For Second Time

To a near capacity audience, the second performance of "Winterset," was given by the Edwin Booth dramatic club last Tuesday night.

The second presentation was given because of enthusiasm shown by the over capacity first night audience. Dayton Jones and Alice Bender were in lead parts.

The third of the LCT plays, "Polly of the Circus," will be given later this month.
