Government Officials Study Financial Conditions At The NDSC

Two members of the state budget board and three board of administration members today finish their investigation of conditions on the NDSC campus. They will base their recommendations for appropriations for this school on the findings uncovered in this week's visit here.

Because of the present difficult financial situation, the budget board will recommend only appropriations which will cover bare necessities and urgent building repairs. Mr. Rishworth, however, expressed the possibility of the return of teachers' salaries to former levels if some form of taxation might be devised to supplement the general property tax.

The investigators are: Senator Frederickson and Representative Peters, members of the budget board; R. M. Rishworth, Nelson Sauvain, and Mrs. Jennie Ulsrud, board of administration principals Other members of the budget board not making the trip are Gov. O. H. Olson, P. O. Sathre, and Berta Ba-

The group, which arrived in Fargo Wednesday, have visited most of the state institutions already. Al-though they finish their work today, the company will remain here until tomorrow, when they attend the Homcoming festivities.

"Engineer ' Gains "A" Rating at Meet

At the national convention of the Engineering Colleges Magazines Associated held at Rose Polytechnical Institute, Terre Haute, Ind., Octo-ber 15-16, the North Dakota State Engineer was one of four publications given an "A" rating on the paper as a whole. The other three publications were the Marquette Engineer, the Illinois Technograph, and the Minnesota Technilog.

Delegates from North Dakota

State were Hill Elwin, Robert Froling, and Harold Naegeli, editor, assistant editor, and business manager, respectively, of the North Dakota State College Engineer. Four new members were admitted to the organization, according to Elwin. They are the Quadrangle of New York university, the Washington State College Engineer, the Villanova of Villanova College, and the Arkansas Engineer of the University of Arkansas. This brings the total number of members in the organization to twenty-five.

Gordon Johnsgard, Clifford Orvedahl, and Marion Striker, soils majors of 1934, have been employed by the state as soil classification experts on the U.S. soil survey.

This year is the 300th anniversary of the founding of the first secondary school in the United States.

Seventy-five colleges and universities gave the examination this fall, twenty-three of them using the same form of marking as did this institution. Among these North Dakota ranked ninth highest, placing above all schools in the larger enrollment class. Colorado Agricultural college, having a freshman class of almost the same size, ranked thirteenth. The University of Carolina and the Kansas State Teachers college were the only schools using the method of marking which have larger beginning student classes. They ranked sixteenth and seveneenth respectively.

The median grade for the 4,345 students taking the examination was 101.9, while the median for the 488 NDSC students was 105.1. The upper quartile for the group was determined at 115.2; for NDSC, at 118. ### Farmers Demand Students Examine Cooperative Move

In response to a growing sentiment among farmers that public schools and colleges are not serving the needs of the people, the state convention of the Farmers Union passed a resolution demanding that study of the cooperative movement be given an important place in the curricula of tax supported schools and colleges, according to Hjalmer Storlie, North Dakota State college instructor, who returned Saturday from Jamestown, after serving as one of the delegates to the convention from the North Dakota Federation of Labor.

The Farmers Union had invited representation from organized labor in the hope of fostering better understanding and cooperation between farmers and laborers. The labor delegates spoke briefly in response to recognition by President Charles Talbot. The labor delegation was headed by Jack Hammelsmith of Grand Forks.

Professor Jones Architect Plans Government Center For Masters Degree Thesis

The Betterment Of Mankind, Subject

Investigation of all the recent city halls built in the United States, study of the needs of Fargo and each individual officer, and the organization of a future building plan were the preliminary steps taken by Prof. Paul Jones of the architecture department, who is designing a municipal government center for Fargo as the thesis for his master's degree in architecture.

During the past year, Prof. Jones studied at Harvard and this year is continuing his work under the architecture school there along with his teaching activities at NDSC. A unique and unusual privilege was given him when Harvard permitted Kansas City, Mo., October 20-26. him to continue his work away from the department. Ordinarily, all advanced work for credit must be done within the institution.

"I had the project completely designed before leaving Harvard and my work now for the most part is the reinforced concrete and steel design calculations, working drawing details, rendered elevations and perspectives, which I hope to get completed by next June. I presume they gave me the opportunity to complete my thesis in Fargo as it was necessary for me to return after a year's leave of absence from college," said Jones in explaining the situation. He is, according to available information, the only person who has ever been extended this opportunity.

This privilege is in line with the many honors and distinctions he has won in his chosen field. While at Harvard in 1933-34, he made the highest scholastic record of any member of his class. Among his awards were five medals won while competing with students of Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Boston Architectural club upon problems of varying architectural interest. A 400 room hotel, completely designed and built in miniature, obtained for him his first medal. This was succeeded by medal awards upon "A Gothic Chapel," "A Wine Cellar and Tap Room," "An Air Transport Station," and "An Academy of Applied Arts." These awards enabled plied Arts." These awards enabled him to complete the required year's Senior Students work in several months before the close of the year and thus start upon his thesis.

While he was a student at Fontainbleau, France, Prof. Jones was given the highest honor awarded by the School of Fine Arts. An etching portraying a street scene in Langeais, France, won for him singular honor when it was chosen the best work done by a student at the school that year.

This is in line with the theory of architectural education used at Harvard in which the students work on the same basis as the commercial architect. His plans will be displayed upon completion.

"This Fargo government center is an extremely interesting problem," says Jones, who has worked on many interesting problems and many interesting things since joining the NDSC teaching staff. This summer was spent in California planning interiors for exclusive shops. "Beauty and individuality were the objectives and cost meant nothing to their owners." His vacations, previous to this summer, have been spent in Europe, where he lectured on architecture and history and traveled unhurriedly through house, Friday.

When the Spectrum interviewer envied his colorful life and success, Prof. Jones countered, "I don't do anything I don't like to do."

'99—'17—'24—'33 will be the signals passed across the campus as the grads exchange the Homecoming password today and tomorrow. They won't be the signals called by Gerteis or Reiners, but the identification by which each ed, and its exhaust blew me back." alumnus associates himself with the college history.

Men and women returning to the campus today see in epitome the expression of their own student days. The companionliness, the enthusiastic rivalry between honored enemies, the light-heartedness of social life are romanticized. The scholastic record and the educational reputation of the school are obscured by the colors and the shouting.

Today the college is bigger than it ever was. It has more notables among its graduates than ever before. Its reputation is spread over a wider area every year. The present students of North Dakota State college are building the reputation of each man's degree even as he built the reputation of other men's degrees while he was a student. The alumni succeeding in a large variety of occupations, leading social and community life, contributing to better balanced living are inspiring more students to follow their leads, to attend this college, and to add their abilities in increasing its fame and prestige.

As homecomers return today and tomorrow it is fitting that they renew the thrill of college life. They should again recapture the glamour and excitement of the year's big game. But as they return to the practical and ordinary routine again, they should sense the other side of the college life, the intensive and serious work of students and teachers struggling to fit themselves and others for a more complete life.

With the increased enrollment, inadequacy of equipment due to lower appropriations, decreased teachers salaries, the development of higher standards of education has been no easy task. If alumni and undergraduates appreciate this, the homecomings of the future will be marked by signals of greater achievement as '34—'46—'52—'99 ring across the NDSC campus.

WERE THEY RULES OR SUGGESTIONS?

Two weeks ago there appeared in this paper a list of traffic rules for this campus. As yet no visible effort has been made to comply with any of these rules. The daily papers continually confront us with the mounting toll of traffic accidents which occur because some one was either careless or wilfully disobeyed the ceremonies the girls will be curred on this campus. The modern trend seems to be toward giving college students more freedom and to put them on their own to a greater extent than ever before. Yet judging from the manner some of the students drive about the campus one would be inclined to believe that the students of this college are not yet ready to assume any responsibility other than that of the most elementary nature.

Having reached an age when one is supposed to know something of off." the mechanizations of society the modern college student should know by this time that there must be rules and regulations if people are to live together in harmony. Perhaps we are overestimating the intelligence of the college students on this campus, but we believe that most of them will recognize the necessity of adhering to the traffic regulations in order that the pedestrian may have as great an interest in the campus as does the motorist.

ATTENTION FRESHMEN!

The spirit of activity and enthusiasm for their first Homecoming game shown by the freshmen is commendable and refreshing. However, the methods of demonstrating this spirit are a shade prewar. Even though upperclassmen are glad to see the woodpile grow, freshmen should use discretion in choosing the source of their supply. Taking anything, even waste wood, against the wishes of the owner is not in line with NDSC ideas of sportsmanship.

"Indeed," they reflect, "college days are the happiest ones of your life." Silence falls over the campus in respect for the words of experience taught wisdom. "Yes," we resolve, "we will make the most of our college life, we'll never have it to live over again."

Now that we've done our duty by the Ideals and Purposes, let's go out and jerk the hinges off hell. It's Homecoming, isn't it?

College History

Second in a series of same name)

In one college it was once the custom of the graduates, or alums, to return in a body to the college of their youth and try to repeat in one or two days all the follies they committed before reaching years of discretion. This day was called Homecoming.

They chose for this day one on which was to be held an important skull-crushing match, or football game. Then they would come from miles around, loaded with the spirits of reunion and repeal, and great would be the rejoicing.

Old friends were met and clapped on the back with shouts and protestations of friendship, such as "Hi yu Jack, ol' fella! Howza kid? I ain't seen yu in years! How yu gettin' along?"

Then, after a visit to the frat as is befitting those who are to save the prestige of the fraternity by their endowments, they would furtively slip into their cars and drive by devious routes to the nether parts of town, looking carefully at the time to see that none saw where they went.

After arriving at certain houses they would hurry from their cars to the house doors, tap twice, then once, and ask for one Joe. After this signal had been given they would be admitted, and would be shown to one who passed mysterious objects to them in return for money. Many sly winks were exchanged during this intercourse, and, after regaining their automobiles, they would make all haste to a public eating house, where they would order an ale made of ginger roots which, when mixed with that which they had obtained at the house of Joe, would cause them to gasp, and cough, and smile and laugh heartily over nothing.

After drinking many glasses of this mixture they would go to the amphitheater to see the crushing of skulls, but between the frequent visits to hidden recesses to drink that furnished by Joe, and the insistence of some to fall into sound slumber despite the cold and uncomfortable seats which were called bleachers, little of the bone-breaking was seen.

This, according to the records, seemed strange, insomuch that this was the most important game of the season, and the tuitions and expenses of the contestants had been paid by the school for this game more than any other.

None-the-less the game would reach a hilarious end, and, after waking those who could be awakened, and letting the rest sleep, the now jovial alums repaired to the institution of Joe, and regaled themselves with fiery beverages.

In the evening of Homecoming, the undergraduates gathered in a large hall, and, to the noise made by blowing into tubes of varied sizes, walked face to face in varyhouse, at which they were hailed ing paces with young lady students who called themselves coeds. This was called the Homecoming dance, and the students who came there would mimic the alums in their visitations to Joe's, and often the walking would be erratic and un-

> So passed Homecoming. The next day the participants would loudly bewail the aching condition of their heads, and exclaim over the "swell time" they had had the night before, and ask for the morning paper, that they might see who had won the football game.

Waldron Criticizes Shelterbelt Scheme In An Article For "Country Gentleman"

NDSC Professor Contends Plan Unworkable In This Section

"Can Trees Reclaim Water," an article written by Prof. L. R. Waldron, NDSC faculty man, is featured in the November issue of the Country Gentleman, national magazine published in Philadelphia. Waldron analyzes the federal shelterbelt project, which will cover a hundred mile strip from Canada to Mexico and will pass through North Dakota near Bismarck.

Dubiousness as to the workability of the plan is expressed in the article by Prof. Waldron. He asserts that the gigantic tree planting program will not increase the precipitation or reduce the wind velocity to the degree claimed by its spon-

"Mention was made of the fact that the maximum appreciable effect of the windbreak would be from twenty to twenty-five times its height. Except in special localities it may take twenty years for an efficient windbreak to attain twenty feet in the north and thirty feet in the south. At this time protection would be afforded a zone not over 700 feet wide, on the average," says Prof. Waldron.

"As the windbreaks are to be one mile apart it is evident that about 4,480 feet of wide open space, if my arithmetic is sound, remains unaccounted for. May we expect true steppe conditions for the greater portion of the mile-wide area? Really if the careful study of the forest service on windbreaks is to be taken seriously, then the main object of this whole tree-planting project, aside from relief, falls short of attainment. It is self-condemned from the start," according to the ar-

Professor L. R. Waldron, graduate of NDSC in 1899, whose article on the shelterbelt project was featured in November's Country Gentleman, will enjoy tomorrow's Homecoming.

After the ball that evening, several university belles went into seclusion with the NDSC homecoming queen and all emerged with the Claudette Colbert glamor. The stalwart critics objected, however, so bangs will not be in vogue at our homecoming.

Agriculture Roll Has 174 Percent Increase In Year

Freshman enrollment in the school of agriculture at this period is 85, while at the corresponding date in 1933 it was 31, according to Prof. P. J. Olson, assistant dean. Thus, increased enrollment in the agriculture department amounts to 174 per cent as compared with a schoolwide increase of 11.5 per cent. These students have come from all parts of the state as seen by the map arranged by Dean Walster.

Women, as well as men, find courses offered in the school of agriculture attractive. Miss Guinevere Feckler, a graduate of the University of California, is a junior in the school. Miss Flora Elliott, also a junior, is especially interested in animal husbandry. She has already gained distinction as a livestock judge. At present she is one of the students in that department who is trying out for the judging team which will represent this college in the contests to be held in connection with the International Livestock show at Chicago.

Dr. D. E. Tope was a dinner guest at the Theta Chi fraternity last Saturday.

DENIO IN IDAHO

R. M. DeNio, June graduate in botany, was married this summer, which may account for no one hearing from him. He is presumably engaged in forest work in Idaho.

INTERSTATE BUSINESS COLLEGE

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA

"It's the Same Old Story" but so old it's new.....

NEARLY ten years ago North Dakota Agricultural College freshmen were asked why they chose this college. Back came the answer—Types of Courses Offered. Times and high school graduates have not changed much. They're still choosing, and for the same old reason—Types of Courses Offered.

Some choose because it's agriculture; others because it's home economics and others and still others for the electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, chemical engineering, architectural engineering, architecture, chemistry, biology, pharmacy, education, science and literature, civil engineering and so on. Whatever they choose leads to a bachelor of science degree.

A NOTHER reason It's The Same Old Story—students still insist on the NDAC because of Low Cost As Compared With Other Institutions. Just last year NDAC students cut their food costs (usually the one large single item of college expense) to around $1.50 a week. In spite of it they ate like kings. Bachelor kitchens did the trick. This is only one of the many ways NDAC faculty and students are pointing the way to lower costs for students.

A GAIN, It's The Same Old Story — NDAC enrollments have reached seven under the 1,400 mark. With such a figure gracing the 1934 records of the college registrar, it is likely that 1,500 will have enrolled be for e spring.

A revamping of the group discussion feature of the annual conference this spring was also decided upon at the meeting. Students will replace college instructors as discussion leaders, according to plans made Sunday. The professors will this year, instead, serve in advisory capacities in these discussion groups as resource men to furnish the conferees with facts when the students seek them.

Heading the University of North Dakota delegation here Sunday was Bill Holland, state YMCA president and 1935 conference charman; Mrs. Adda Bek, area chairman; and Roy Holand, executive YMCA secretary at the university. Other state YMCA officers in attendance Sunday were: Orville Goplen, North Dakota State college, vice-president; and Milton Euberg, Minot State Teachers college, secretarytreasurer. Also attending were Miss Jane Bradley, Minnesota YWCA traveling secretary, and Lester Howard, Minnesota YMCA traveling secretary.

The YWCA, under the direction DATE PROBLEM SOLVED AS DATE BUREAU OPENS

"Bashfulosis" may be at an end as a result of the dating bureau, sponsored by the senior staff and located downstairs in Old Main.

The Spinster's Skip provided chance for this college to experiment with a practice in vogue at several colleges throughout the United States, that of getting a date for those students who wanted to go to the dance but who either didn't know anyone well enough to ask or were too bashful to make the arrangements for themselves.

Although the idea of a date arranger may sound funny, the senior staff is really serious about the whole affair. Should this one be a success, there will no doubt be dating bureaus in the future, according to Jane Nichols, in charge.

"If you haven't heretofore been able to muster what it takes, it isn't too late yet to give the bureau a chance to get you the best date you ever had," says Miss Nichols.

The daters did business all last week up until as late as 5 p. m. last

Dr. Wirth Opens Sigma Xi Lecture Course On Nov. 8

The first of a series of lectures sponsored by the Sigma Xi club will be given on November 8, when Dr. H. E. Wirth of the school of chemistry will speak on "Chemical Oceanography." These lectures are open to the public and deal with the research efforts of the speakers.

Each lecturer will attempt to build up a broad, fundamental foundation in order that his specific contributions to the field may be more easily appreciated by those whose interests and training are in other fields. The intent of the lecturer is to broaden the scientific horizon and they are therefore recommended to advanced science students

The first speaker, Dr. Wirth, has spent the past five years in very close touch with the University of Washington oceanographic laboratories. During this period he has published four papers dealing with the chemistry of sea water.

The second lecture will be held during December at which time Dr. H. C. Hanson will discuss his research on grasslands. Subsequent speakers include Dr. Warren Keck, Dr. C. I. Nelson, and Dr. C. E. Mangels from this campus, and Dr. Rostel, Fargo dermatologist. Dates and subjects of these lectures will be announced later.

In addition to these lectures, the Sigma Xi club is attempting to obtain a speaker from either Moorhead State Teachers college or from Concordia and to foster an exchange lecture with the University of North

Sioux-Bison Encounter Is Gala Day Highlight

Sioux To Have Slight Edge As Improved Bison Threaten

Sophomores On Both Teams Get Starting Posts In Gridiron Fray

Climaxing the 1934 home schedule, the Thundering Herd of North Dakota State college will attempt to trounce the University of North Dakota Sioux and at the same time gain a firmer grip on the conference title. This contest, to be staged at 2:30 Saturday afternoon at Dacotah field, is the main event of the annual Homecoming festivities and gives promise of being one of the most thrilling battles in a series noted for its close, hard fought Excitement will be at fever pitch when the two teams line up before a crowd which has been estimated at being the largest to witness any football game played in Fargo. Fervent fans of both squads are willing to wager anything from a box of cough drops to grandpa's red flannel underwear that their favorites come out on the long end of the count. Seats for the fray are at a premium and rush ducats are being hastily planned for by those unfortunates who have been unable to obtain reserved places.

Sioux Are Powerful

But, now to get to the teams themselves. From indications of comparative scores, the Sioux seem to have the edge in this annual battle. In the five games they have played this year a defensive record of some sort has been established. Not one of their opponents have scored and aside from this only six first downs is the most their combined adversaries have been able to register. Two of the University's opponents have been held without a single first down, while the most any team garnered is three. In their first appearance of the year the Sioux conceded those three to the Winnipeg All-Stars, whom they defeated 13-3. In defeating Omaha university 14-0, the Sioux played perfect defensive ball, allowing not a single first down, but South Dakota university, which fell 21-0, managed to register two. In the next two contests, both of them loop battles, the Sioux defense was at its peak, permitting neither Morningside, which succumbed 23-0, nor South Dakota State, which fell 6-0. enough yardage for a single first down.

But now comes the surprising part of the whole story. Two sophomores, Louis Chumich and Martin Gainor, are holding down regular tackle positions and that's where the defensive strength or weakness shows on a team. These two boys are more than ably supported by Fritz Falgren and Don Smart, ends; Bill Goethel and El Sowl, guards, Braverman and Jim Gehrke, and Captain Len Sauer, center. If these fellows feel honor-bound to maintain be hard pressed to persuade them to homecoming in gala form. change their minds.

Bison Win Three

And here's where the Bison rec-ord comes in. In the five attempts so far, the Bison have won three, lost one and tied one. This sounds rather flimsy beside the impressive list of wins compiled by the Sioux, and yet the followers of both teams insist upon placing the Aggies on at least a par with the fast-stepping Nodaks, while many of them rate the Thundering Herd favorites. Most winning stride yet and with seven- 13-7 and will stick by it. teen letter winners to call upon, they are about due to start clicking.

Hanson Bison Hope Upon the fleet feet of Fritz Hanson, blond bit of dynamite from Perham, Minn., rests many of the (Continued on page 16)

Unquestionably the situation is perfect for a U-NDS homecoming There has never been a game between these two where enthusiasm has been lacking; but seldom has the turn of the conference events given such an opportunity for a real scrap. In all due respect to the undefeated Sioux we readily acknowledge that they are a clever, well-drilled band and that only consistently fast football will interrupt their title plans.

There is some reason to question the reported over-confidence which has developed in the "U" camp during the week. If such is true, the feeling is certainly one of advance egoism. From the season's beginning the Bison have enjoyed the favorites' seat and their undefeated status entitles them to keep it until their right is disproved. It may be that Jack West has turned loose his goat-getting campaign. He's an ex-

Keep in mind that the Bison forward wall is a treasure-house in offensive power. Then watch No. 28 go where he pleases. Take inventory of the Bison reserves. When you're completely satisfied that the Bison do pack a stiff punch, maybe you'll wonder how our northern friends can get so far out of line. But there we go again—that's what makes this game all that it is

In christening the homecoming program, the Baby Bison will take out after the tiny Sioux. The Friday night feature can only be left to chance guess as to the outcome, but the future topnotchers have already caught the rivalry of the affair. They'll put out football fit for the Queen-and that's good enough for all of us.

And there's another thrill added to the colorful pageant of reunion. Homecoming queen, blond Virginia Landbloom, with her military escort, will take over the student scepter between halves. Surrounded by friends and banks of chrysanthemums, "Queenie" will assume her regal poise and homecoming filling in for the injured Arnold goes autocratic. Add to this the picture of "Doc" Putnam and his warm friend, John E. Howard, as hey parade their rival bands bethis astounding record against the fore the stands. See the prize floats No. 2 here this Saturday. The herd Bison, the Fargo boys are going to in the background. They all are

We can't say that we'll win; but we honestly expect just that. Stripping the contest of all prejudice, we are attracted by the more conspicuous Bison power. The line is heavier; the backs are equally as fast. We are able to match a Hanson for Cambell, an Olson for Smart. ### Conference Doings

The southern end of the conference loop swings into full power Saturday as the traditional S.D. rivals-the SDU Coyotes and the deposed conference kings of SD State - tangle. Although the outcome will not at all affect the title race, the two teams will fight it out for reasons of their own.

This battle marks the same rivalry as the U-SC fracus always brings to the local Homecoming picture.

Morningside, content after hum-bling South Dakota State's former champs 6-0, and after temporarily chilling the Bison in a 12-12 deadlock, has hung up its conference tongs and will not be with us until next year.

South Dakota university still feels that Mr. J. Anthony Toughluck has deprived them of a better conference showing. Having had three regulars declared ineligible, Coach Gamage was further harassed by the injury jinx.

The Bison manage to furnish the opposition in four different homecomings. Already having played the Morningside Maroons in their "special" tilt, the A. C. chalks up also play featured roles in the S. D. State and Oklahoma City university homecomings.

STATE CONFERENCE PLAY-OFF SATURDAY

The North Dakota college conference football race will be settled Saturday at Wahpeton when Science plays Jamestown, barring upsets in the remaining contests.

Jamestown and Wahpeton emerged from last week's contest in a tie for the lead—the only unbeaten teams in the conference. The Jimmies upset Minot's strong eleven 7 to 0. while Wahpeton eked out a 7-6 victory over Valley City. It was the first defeat for the Beavers and the Vikings and broke a four-way tie for the lead.

Hanson Scampers 75 Yards Five Undefeated For First Herd Score Late In Half

The Bison returned home from their first conference trip and reported a 12-12 deadlock with Morningside's fearless Maroons. Already having put South Dakota State's hopes for a repeated conference title on the skids, Denton Dean and his teammates lowered the Bison conference hopes to the extent of removing them from the list of teams unblemished by defeat or tie.

Serving notice to the Aggies that their five-year scoring drought was at an end, the Maroons turned up the unexpected in holding the favored Bison on even terms. The game, postponed from Friday to Saturday because of a persistent est contenders for the mythical narain storm, was played on a slow, muddy field. Uncertainty of footing hampered the playing of both teams and furnished the small Homecoming crowd a comic exhibition of amateur diving.

In the third period of the NDSC - Morningside game, Referee Elmer Smeby collapsed and died several hours later. An examination showed the cause to be produced by an apoplectic Marching the opening kickoff to the Bison 32-yard line, Morningside utilized the Dean-Saunderson pass combination to slip one over. All Bison attempts to even the score the first period fell short. It was not until the second period that Hanson got away on one of his specialties. Starting slow, the brilliant half dodged through an opening and sped 75 yards to score.

The Bison came back from the half in a spirited try to get their bearings. Their renewed campaign was successful when Lyle (miniature mountain) Sturgeon recovered Litrell's fumble on the Morningside 38-yard stripe. A strong Bison of-fensive forced the play to the opponents' four-yard territory, where smashing Bob Erickson plunged across to give the Herd a 12-6 lead.

Morningside tied it up again in the fourth period on a rush from the middle of the field. A pass and two around - end plays sent the Bison hopes for a victory spinning.

The tie leaves only the University of North Dakota unbeaten and untied in the North Central Conferenec and places them in the somewhat dubious role of favorites to annex the conference banner.

Teams In Current Big Ten Classic

In reviewing the Big Ten conference race, five of the teams in the western half of the loop remain unbeaten in league competition with Chicago heading the parade with two victories. Illinois, Purdue and Iowa have won one game apiece, while Minnesota as yet has not been tested in conference competition.

Minnesota's 13-7 conquest of Pittsburgh last week firmly establishes them not only as Big Ten favorites but as one of the strongtional championship. Having thus far chalked up wins against North Dakota State, Nebraska, and Pitt's. Panthers, Minnesota will step into the loop grind when they face Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Chicago, and Wisconsin on successive weekends. There is no doubt that this is a suicide schedule, especially so because every team will be pointing for that game in an attempt to stem the Gopher victory march. However, if they come through unscathed, and there is a pretty good chance that they will, there is no doubt that they will be hailed as the national champs.

Illinois ranks second in the contenders for the coveted Big Ten title and is preceded by Chicago. Chicago has proved convincing by its decisive wins over Michigan and Indiana. Michigan, loop leaders of last season, fell before a fierce onslaught 27-0, while Indiana was the victim of a 21-0 avalanche.

Sioux And Bison Continue Rivalry Started In 1910

Dating back to 1910, the rivalry between North Dakota State and the University of North Dakota is probably the oldest series of games in the conference. In that year the Sioux succeeded in scalping the Bison and since then it has been an annual affair for the two schools to get together and put on an exhibition of legalized mayhem. This series has proven itself to be the climax of every season as the two teams always are "pointed" for this one game and in the last few years especially, the conference title usually belongs to the victor. Upsets are the order rather than the exception and it's not at all unusual for a supposedly inferior eleven to pounce on a "great" team from the opposing institution and whip them to a fare-you-well. Word-weary sports scribes have been wrong so many times on guessing the outcome of these contests that more than one has been forced to hock his watch to pay debts for fervent CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS fans who were foolish enough to take his misguided advice, thereby losing their well-known and much advertised shirts.

The biggest margin either team has ever had over the other was back in '21 when the Sioux not only scalped the then not so Thundering Herd, but pushed them all over the field to mount up a 38-3 win. The Bison have the edge when it comes to eking out close decisions, having squeezed out 7-6 wins in '14, '19, and '32. Only once in this long series of contests has the fracas ended in a deadlock and this one last season when the best the Aggies could do was a 7-7 count.

This battle gives evidence of being one of the closest and hardest fought in the entire series and so, because comparative scores point all in the favor of the Sioux, we'll stick out our neck in expectation of the ax and mutter "the Bison ought to win by at least seven points.'

Bison Frosh Oppose Sioux Squad Tonight

Serving as an appetiser for the varsity game tomorrow, the Baby Bison confront the Nodak yearlings tonight at 8 p.m. under the flood-lights of Dacotah field. Much intense rivalry and spirit has characterized the previous games between the freshman squads of the two schools and spectators should not be disappointed with this game.

Because of rain which necessitated the postponement of last Friday's game, the Baby Bison were disappointed in their hope of avenging last year's defeat, but will swing into tonight's game with undiminished fervor. Coach Gergen, assisted by Raymond Anderson, has drilled his squad on the finer points of football tactics. That the Bison have taken heed is proven by their conquest of Wahpeton and in their scrimmages versus the varsity.

Gergen, who is confident that the team will get in and pitch, is probably basing most of his hopes on the passing combination of Westby to Ingstad and in the shifty running of Emil May. The squad this year is largely composed of clever runners and punters in the backfield while the line is inclined to be rangy but wiry.

The Sioux yearlings come down from the north with one of the outstanding freshman teams in their school history. In a doubleheader against the University of Manitoba they came out victorious in both games. Among the players of note is Burich, a tackle from Chisholm, who is claimed to be one of the biggest and toughest boys since Ted Meinhover was a freshman. Others who have proved promising to Coach Letich include Mackinroth, Rorvig, and Durkie.

TWO THOUSAND BOOKS DRAWN FROM LIBRARY

That NDSC students are studying more than ever before might be the conclusion drawn from figures divulging this week by Harriet Pearson, assistant librarian. The largest number of reserve books taken out of the library in the history of the institution for that period of time - two thousand - were used during the first three weeks of the current school term.

In addition to the great use of books on reserve, Miss Pearson reports that an unusually large number of two-week books are in circulation.

Graduation To Cut Ten Gridders From Best Bison Roster

Fritz Hanson, Captain Olson To Play Last Games For State Fans

Gathered together for the Bison Homecoming festivities-the alums, the faculty, students and friendsgame tomorrow promises to bring forth one of the most exciting football programs ever scheduled in this vicinity. So it is with a good deal of reluctance that the time has come to realize that tomorrow's event culminates the long football activities of ten of the finest Bison athletes who have ever thundered down the line for North Dakota State.

That these men have not only served their school well to the student's pleasure but also have brought fame and recognition from the outside is undoubted. Not only have many of these men proved their proficiency in football, but also to their laurels has been added such sports as basketball and track.

Consider, for a moment, the absence of Fritz Hanson, one of the outstanding and most clever field runners that the Bison ranks have ever had the honor of producing.

Taking a slight resume of each individual it is only fitting to begin with this year's captain, Charles Olson of Fargo. He entered college with an all-state record in both football and basketball; last year he was chosen all-conference end.

Marquardt Through Paired with Olson is Bud Marquardt, clever Moorhead star. During high school he was a hot competitor of Olson in inter-city games. In college the combination of the pair proved outstanding in their freshman years. This brings to mind the fact that the freshmen of that year defeated the Sioux yearlings decisively in both games—all of the present seniors being members of that team.

Fritz anson, Perham, Minn., of Undefeated Teams course, will not be easily forgotten. His name was prominent in Minnesota athletic circles even before his advent to NDSC. It will be a difficult task to refill his clever, shifty shoes, which have sped the length of the field for a great many of the

Lose All-Conference Guard

One of the three all-conference seniors is Leonard House, a Mandan youth, who, as a formidable guard, has been one of the finest linemen found in the Bison lineup. Always dependable, he has played a fair and square game throughout his college career.

Another lineman not to be passed up is Herbert Peschel from Wahpeton. As a guard he has played along with House in the Bison ranks and his departure will be felt

Arthur Skurdall, a stocky half-back from Devils Lake, has given four years of fine service to the

As signal caller and blocking back, Leo Gerteis of Fargo, proves again that the Bison seniors have some mighty football heroes. George May, Aberdeen, S. D., also leaves a hole to fill in the Bison backfield. Perhaps no man on the team has been called on to suffer through injuries as much as May and still carry on with the efficiency he has demonstrated.

Passing Pair To Go

Then there is Earl Thomas, a valuable center from Grafton, who has played a keen game both on offensive and defensive. A star in his own home town, he has passed through four successful years with the Herd.

Class Entertains

The nineteenth annual Harvest Festival was held last Wednesday in the Little Country theater from 6 to 9 p.m., with the entertainment in the hands of A. G. Arvold's festival class.

Included among the many interesting features of the evening's program were such events as a husking and spinning bee, Aunt Dinah's quilting party, and turkey dinner. A varied Hallowe'en theme was folhopes for a Bison Homecoming victory. Fritz is in the best condition of his college career and if he can break into the clear a few times there is a good chance that he will put the game on ice for the home team. In fact, the Bison backfield seems to be the deciding factor this game and fans are sure to see a high-powered scoring machine in action. Schollander, Dohn, May, Erickson, Gove, Gerteis, Isensee, Reiners, and Skurdall are all recognized as potential scorers. In Dohn and Schollander, the Aggies boast two of the finest forward passers in the loop. If the Herd is forced to take to the aerial route to count, such ends as Bud Marquardt, Acey Olson, and Forrest Stevens are likely to play an important part as they are recognized as the finest pass-snatching trio the squad affords.

In the line for the Fargo team are such stalwarts as Sam Dobervich and Lyle Sturgeon at the tackle posts, Leonard House and Herbert Peschel at the guard, and Earl Thomas holding down the pivot position. Captain Acey Olson and Greg Sloan are available for duty at the flanks, as are Bud Marquardt, Forrest Stevens, and Beryl Newman. Bob Millar, hard hitting guard from At Turkey Dinner Warren, Minn., has been showing lots of stuff in practice lately and Warren, Minn., has been showing there's more than an even chance that he will displace some of the veterans and be in the fray for more than a few minutes tomorrow.

ALUMNI COME FROM FAR

Early arrivals for the Bison Homecoming festivities are Mercades Cramer, Portsmouth, Virginia, '27, and Pat Brindle, Denver, Colo., '29.
