Two Productions of Nineteenth Century Melodrama Are Presented Here :

FINAL PLAY IS TONIGHT

Corrine Lawrence and Richard Randlett Have Leading Roles In Play

Tonight at 8:00 o'clock is the last op-portunity for students of North Dakota State college to view the drama "East Lynne", which ushered in the dramatic season for the year with its initial presentation last night.

The production, which scored a theatrical success during its production last night in the Little Country theater, is under the direction of Miss Alice Mo.

under the direction of Miss Alice Mc-Connell Bender and has the general supervisin of A. G. Arvold. Edwin Booth Dramatic club is the sponsor of this nineteenth century melodrama as their fall term play project.

This old favorite melodrama, which is taken from the well known novel of the same title, written by Mrs. Henry Wood, is so well known throughut the nation that little can be said of it to add the element of novelty.

Lady Isabel, Cornelia, Mr. Carlyle and Mr. Levison are strong characters, and are capably northrough by Corriers and Mr. Levison are strong characters, and are capably portrayed by Corrinne Lawrence, Hazel Swanson, Richard Randlett and David Minard, respectively. That the play still has the power to please is evidenced by the fact that collegiate dramatic circles throughout the country are reviving it in the manner which is being presented here.

The director is adhering as faithfully as possible to the dramatic principles as possible to the dramatic principles of the era in which the play made its debut. The stilted actions and speeches, as well as the Victorian construction of the play itself, has already delighted the audience in its contrast to present day drama, says Miss Bender.

The costumes have been collected from about the city, and are authentic examples of the 1850 dress. Properties and lighting effects, under the super-vision of Don Hay, have been elabor-ately worked out, and are an added feature of the production.

"EAST LYNNE" USHERS Instructors May Not Be Affected IN DRAMATIC SEASON By Passage Of Initiated Measure

Doubt Exists As To Whether Salary Reduction Measure Is Applicable To Faculty Members of North Dakota Educational Institutions

Whether the initiated measure concerning the salary reductions of state officials, passed by the state voters among the measures sponsored by the State Taxpayers' association applies to the instructors and department heads of the state's higher institutions of learning is at present an unanswerable question, it was learned by The Spectrum just before going to press last

A multitude of questions arise when it is attempted to apply the initiated measure to the faculties of the state educational in-stitutions especially those of the North Dakota State college and the University of North Dakota.

Is the clause applicable to educational institutions? Gus Lamb, secretary of the State Taxpayers' association, assured several faculty members at North Dakota State college early this fall that the measure had been meant to exclude the salaries of educators from those affected by the initiated law.

Hurrey Convocation

Student Body Hears Address At Assembly Wednesday In Festival Hall

"Our Unofficial Ambassadors" was the subject on which Charles Hurrey addressed the student body in convocation following the presentation of the Norman B. Black scholarship Wednesday morning.

Speaking of the many foreign students studying in the United States and of the many American students studying abroad as the "unofficial ambassadors," Mr. Hurrey declared them to be distinctive in that role because "they do not have to lie to tell the truth, they stand on their own feet, do their own thinking, and say what they think. They are realists bringing us new ideas and bringing us a challenge in every line of endeavor."

There are now 1700 students from abroad studying in the United States. They come from every country in the world including Afghanistan and Ice-land, according to Mr. Hurrey's statistics. The largest number come from Mexico and a large number from China and Japan. Members of the royal family in Siam study in America, and a professor of Harvard university is now advisor to the king. Engineering attracts the most students with agriculture, pathology, social and political science, journalism, education, and home economics interesting large numbers also. The faculty of the college did not put up a determined fight on the measure using this assurance as a basis for their belief in its not being applicable. Officers of the State Taxpayers' group have promised that if it is ruled. group have promised that if it is ruled that the measure applies to the college faculty salaries, that they will appear in person before the spring legislature and explain that educational institu-tions were excluded from the measure as it was initiated.

Is the clause constitutional? Scheduled to come up for consideration by the Supreme Court of North Dakota is the Von Sein vs. Preckel case, which will have a direct bearing on the rela-tion of the initiated measure to college instructors and department heads. Whether this case comes up directly before the Supreme Court or whether it must travel through the district courts first is still problematical. Also to come up for consideration by the highest judicial body of the state is the enstitutionality of the entire measure, it is reported.

Are the State college and University teachers truly employees of the State Board of Administration? Employees, under the interpretation of the state law, are those individuals who are di-rected in their work by their employers. While the State Board makes the major appointments of the college teaching staffs, the members of the Board do not direct the various instructors on how to carry on their courses, how to teach their mathematics or their chemistry classes.

If the initiated measure goes into effect on Dec. 1 with the inclusion of the faculty and department heads of the college among those affected by the reductions, an immediate cut of 10 percent in salary will be made. This cut added to that made last spring will total a 20 percent cut of salary for the teaching staff at the major institutions during the past year.

If department heads are "employees" in the full sense of the word, of the State Board of Administration, all salput into the use of humanity; and we are giving our best to be shared with all the world," was Mr. Hurrey's closing statement.

If the initiated measure does apply to salaries of college instructors an immeasureable harm will be done to the state educational institutions, is Developing the theme, "An Experiment in Science," Prof. L. R. Waldron was the speaker at a meeting Tuesday that the new law does apply to the instructors' salaries.

North Dakota's educational rating would drop 50 percent, the committee has stated, in the event of the slashing of the salaries. Heads of departments could not be expected to stay here at the $2400 a year figure when larger salaries are available to them in other sections of the country. The 20 per-cent general cut would lower salary tion of officers and choosing a co-ed to levels considerably. With thirty-two State college stu-dents signed up for the interscholastic, interclass, and community program de-bating groups, active work under the direction of Mr. Donald Hay, instruc-tor in public discussion, has gotten under way.,

Following the policy of previous years, college debate teams will be sent to clubs, schools, lodges, Parent-Teacher associations, community groups and other interested organizations to discuss both sides of appropriate ques-

Among the questions already select-ed for discussion are "Resolved, that the United States should cancel inter-allied war debts;" "Resolved, that at least one-half of the revenue for state and local governments should be derived from sources other than tangible property;" "Resolved, that the Frazier Farm Relief Bill should be enacted into legislation;" "Resolved, that rural life should be reconstructed along the lines of village communities;" and a humorous debate, "Resolved, that emotion has done more for the world than intellect."

The first two questions are also the subjects for interscholastic debate.

Increased interest among the incoming students in debate is evident, eleven of the thirty-two who have signified their intention of competing being

STATE GRIDDERS WORK OUT ON ARMY FIELD FOR COMING CONTEST

Milt Summerfelt Leads Cadets To Victory Over Strong Eastern Schools

REST WILL BE AID TO BISON

Experience Given Sophomores Proves Valuable For Future Contests

Spurred on rather than discouraged by their recent setback at the hands of the George Washington Colonials, the Bison are today working out on the Army gridiron at West Point, N. Y., with the aim of making a determined stand against the onslaughts of one of the highest raphing teams in the the highest ranking teams in the nation.

Saturday they meet the crucial test of the season. Captained by Milt Summerfelt, nationally known guard, the Army has swept through their 1932 schedule with but one setback, that at the hands of the mighty Pitt Panthers, leading national team. The 20-0 defeat of Yale, an ancient rival, and last Saturday's 46-0 walkaway over Harvard has stamped the Army to be offensively and defensively one of the best teams ever had at that institution.

Bison May Do Well

Bison May Do Well

Lack of reserve stamina cost the Bi-son a better showing against the Washson a better showing against the Washington team last weekend and plenty of exercise and rest is scheduled for the team during this week. Last Friday playing the day after their arrival in Washington, following three full days of continuous train travel, the Bison started strong but weakened enough in the fourth quarter to allow two touchdowns to be added to the Colonial margin. Plenty of rest this week will aid the Bison in showing their championship calibre against the toughest team in the far east.

In the opening of the setto in Wash-

In the opening of the setto in Washington, the Bison outpushed the Colonials with diminutive Fritz Hanson and line-smashing Bill Gove making first downs. Second quarter found the play even up—the Colonials scored once in the final play of the period. The third quarter finished without scoring on each team and Fritz Hanson started the fourth phase with a bang by run-ning through the entire eastern team for a touchdown. When Hanson's score was called back for his having stepped over a chalk line, the Bison lost their tight defense allowing two touchdowns to be brought through in that last part of the game

Army Looms Strong

The seasonal record of the Cadets leaves honor to the team able to stem the scoring punch of the West Point eleven. Whether the Bison can pierce the Cadet defense for a touchdown as Jarrett of the Sioux did two years ago is problematical with the improved team offered by the eastern school.

Of the greatest importance in Saturday's game is the experience efforded.

day's game is the experience afforded the many sophomores on the leading team in the North Central conference. The hand to hand tussle with the Army boys and the attempt to master and stop the various Army plays will afford the members of the Bison squad valuable experience in their quest for honors in this conference.

Little rest is in store for the North Dakota State gridders. When they return this Tuesday from the Army game they will have but a few days in school before they entrain for Morningside college, Sioux City, Iowa, to play the game deciding the championship of the North Central conference dist team is the only bulwark in the way of the Bison's first conference vic-tory of a number of years and a throne at the peak of both football and bas ketball competition in this section.

PERIOD OF TEST

The period of ballyhoo in national political circles is now drawn sharply to a close but the real period of test as to sincerity

Whether a true national spirit or whether a party line spirit governs the administration will be demonstrated during the closing months of its term. The actions destructive or constructive, that are evidenced, will show whether party promises are true representations of the convictions of those candidates or whether they are but empty phrases.

There are numerous instances in the past where party lines have been considered dominant to national welfare. Treasuries have been depleted and means used to make the terms of the incomers appear to get off at least to a bad start.

This partisan selfishness is not necessarily restricted to national and state politics. There have been numerous instances of selfishly misguided individuals on college campuses who have had the lack of foresight and institutional loyalty to see beyond their own welfare or the welfare of their social group. There are those whose entire consideration and interests are linked up within themselves-they have no feeling of "social awareness."

These latter peoples are those who expect life to hand them rewards and only to them. The welfare of the general group of the people is not considered.

This feeling is regarded as one of the baser characteristics of human nature, and it is not the attitude which means the successful management of a group or to general progress. Little is accomplished if the greater share of the time is spent in attempting to stop all progress attempted by those of other divisions

In all fairness to the present national administration it seems almost likely that no criticism could possibly be fairly directed at the present administration when it gives up its power next March. However, it will be interesting to watch this action and compare it to the action of certain groups and individuals on college campuses in lieu of defeat. The ability to take defeat or victory gracefully is one of the greater tests of character.

NO LACK HERE

In having places to hold convocations, plays, stage shows, fraternity and sorority parties and as a general meeting place for campus activities North Dakota State college is truly fortunate in boasting both Festival hall and the new athletic building.

Above is the opinion expressed Monday by Chairman Nelson P. Sauvain of the state Board of Administration and an opinion shared by the majority of students on the campus and in this area.

With the combination of Festival hall, which is now devoted exclusively to school functions of the nature listed above, and the gigantic physical education plant, one of the largest in the entire northwest, North Dakota State's facilities in the line of entertainment of larger groups in educational or social aspects ranks the best of all institutions in the state.

Also prominently known in the facilities for gatherings and stage presentations are the Little County Theater and the Lincoln Log Cabin, developed through the enterprise of A. G. Arvold, leader of the Little Country Theater movement in America. These have been used successfully for a number of seasons here.

One of the least of worries of coming years for North Dakota State college is the provision of a meeting place for student functions. The college is indeed fortunate in this respect.

Due to the full holiday for North Dakota State college on Friday, Spectrum publication this week was cut down to one issue. Thursday was selected as the day most advantageous of any of the four available days during the school week.

Congratulations have been in order all week long to the newest chapter of Phi Mu national sorority, now at North Dakota Backed by a rich heritage of southern tradition, State college. the ideals of the national sorority should prove an inspiration to the baby chapter of the group.

One accomplishment, at least, of this year's hotly contested presidential election is the increased interest in national and local political affairs of college men and women. Interest throughout this college has been at a high peak during the entire campaign period. In classes and in their homes the students have discussed politics and party principles more than ever before.

Heading the program committee of the organization for the coming year is Prof. F. A. Willson, specialist in rural organization. He is assisted by Lloyd Rawalt, Agnes Mohr, and Jeanette Greenshields, all of Fargo.

November 11, Armistice day; Why should we celebrate Armistice day? On that day just fourteen years ago the last shot was fired in the World

Amid the golden glow of the sun, shining through breaking mists and casting upon the uncleared battle field, a light that seemd like a halo, the soldiers of the American army found on that day the true glory of war-

At 11 o'clock in the morning they fired their last shot and the world's greatest war ended in the world's

For most of them, muddy and dog tired in body and spirit, it came as something unnatural, something incredible. They stood up in their trenches wet and cold, stretching themselves, looking about in wonderment, and beheld another wonder; for only a stones throw away other figures also stood up and stretched themselves. They were gray clad figures, who only a short while ago had been their ene-

That day brought many things to the dawned on the weary soldiers. There was cheering, and here and there some rocket flares were fired, while many a boy in khaki slapped another on the back and said: "Well I guess the old guerve is fine." It had not yet come over them with all its force, that the young lives they had taken in their hands every day were safe, with all that safety to a young life meant, and that there was an end to horrors unspeak-able and of the weariness and hardship—that once again after four years all was right with the world. But once the idea did come, their faces turned in one direction towards home and to those who loved them, those who had shared them for the world's greatest cause, and whose faces they thought never to see again. So gradually their begrimed and weary countenances took on a joyful expression, and they realized that peace meant home

What a series of unforgettable pictures those boys of ours saw on this day of days when the world lay down its arms; pictures of No Man's Land, where men walked upright in the day-light, where men in khaki met men in gray, to swap souvenirs and laugh, the strange short laugh that men laugh whose lives have been given back to them; of a battery of guns that had poured forth death, now silent; of French towns bright with suddenly ossoming flags of red, white and blue after four years of mourning.

Two words-"It's over"-changed the grim men into laughing boys, marching columns tired and mud spattered were galvanized into new life. The bells in war shattered Verdun began pealing their song of peace. Celebration and their song of peace. Celebration and joy was manifested all through the world.

So tomorrow we celebrate, as the celebrated 14 years ago, rejoicing in the end of the bloody war.

Our saddest thought of the war is that those who gave their lives to lift various countries. The program, accompanied by music will be climaxed by the presentation of the speakers. live to see and share the victory. Our consolation lies in the fact that those who died were men of great heart and strong faith. They did not think that the will of God could be permanently defeated by a broken treaty, a torpedo, a piece of rugged ground, a cold winter or a treacherous Balkan prince. Behind all accidents and the varying fortunes of war lay their solid conviction that whether it took one year or ten, one war or ten, the struggle could have but one end.—K. H.

Pi Gamma Mu Elects New Officers' Group

Initiation Services For New Members of Fraternity Are Held Tonight

At an election of officers held re-cently, Frank Callinan, Fargo, was elected president of Pi Gamma Mu, honorary professional social science fratenity. Other officers elected for the ratemity. Other officers elected for the coming year are Mary Healy, Fargo, vice president; and Prof. C. A. Sevrinson, instructor in history, secretary-treasurer. Prof. Paul E. State Instructor Friend of Thomas

That Dr. W. C. Hunter, head of the history department, was a personal friend and a Princeton classmate of Norman Thomas, several times socialist candidate for president, was disclosed today in an interview with Dr. Hunter

The Fargoan describes Thomas as very studious person who, during his college days, received especially high marks in government and history, although his scholarly ability was not confined to these fields alone.

The friendship of these two men has not been limited to college life alone, however, because they have met on several occasions since their gradua-tion in 1925. Back in 1925 Dr. Hunter visited New York city where he called upon his former classmate. Several times since their renewal of friendship in the east the Socialist politician has been in Fargo where he was enter-tained by Dr. Hunter.

The State college professor summar-ized his analysis of the Socialist candidate by stating that he is a practical idealist, a fine scholar, and one of the most brilliant men he has ever met.

Robert Montgomery and Tallulah Bankhead give good performances, Bankhead better than usual, in "Faithcurrent movie showing at the State theater.

The picture opens with the two living in an atmosphere of riches and "high society." From this state they are both reduced by the depression to poverty, and the question of whether their love will survive the new conditions is interestingly answered. Scenes involving Bankhead and a boarding-house landlady, and Bankhead and a corner policeman, are perhaps the most absorbing of the whole show.

Perhaps the most outstanding pur-pose of bird-banding is that such a system provides a means by which birds may be studied alive, length of lives, winter habitat, local ranges and other interesting far and be determined. For example, cofessor Stevens discovered that the average length of time for the Harris sparrow to remain in this locality in the fall is one week. Also, it was learned that old birds migrate ahead of young ones. However, this is true of some other species.

Obtains Architects' Exhibit Of Designs

Donald Best, Alumnus, Brings Outstanding Drawings From Columbia

An exhibit of designs from the architectural department of Columbia university has been procured by Prof. Homer B. Huntoon, head of the North Dakota State college architecture de-partment, through Donald Best, '31, who completed post-graduate work at who completed post-graduate work at Columbia last June. The exhibit will be on display in the architecture de-partment until Thanksgiving, according to Professor Huntoon.

Best, who graduated from the North Dakota State school of architecture in June, 1930, has four drawings in the exhibit. They include designs for a exhibit. They include designs for a private banking house, a classroom and office building on Columbia university campus, an aeration cascade, and a memorial to Edison.

The most colorful design is "A Chinese Pagoda," which depicts a Chinese temple with ornaments and pottery in an oriental setting. G. Steinacher is the architect who produced this piece. An airport on an island by Howard Bahr shows a reclaimed island reached by ferry-boat with yacht harbor, waiting room, hotel and other services.

A university club in a fifteen story building with the lower story occupied by business places is designed by Charles Gunther. Included in the scheme is such facilities as smoking room, gymnasium, card rooms, and

Other projects include a museum of antiquities, a wrought-iron shop, and a terra cotta plant.

State College Grad Plays On Rugby Team

Alumnus Playing With Regina Roughriders Former Star In Football, Boxing

Bill Hilts, twice all-conference end during his football career at North Da-kota State college, is listed among the North Dakotans playing on the Regina Roughrider rugby team, it has been reported here.

Playing professional rugby, which is the Canadian equivalent of American football, is only one of the many un-usual experiences for Hilts, who graduated in 1931. The following fall after his graduation, Hilts made two round-the-world trips with a college orchestra playing on an ocean liner. Hilts took time off during his senior year here to experiment with boxing. He won the championship of the North cotta plant.
