Three Fraternities Entertain At Dances Over Last Weekend

Alpha Tau Omega and Alpha Gamma Rho Hold Joint "Agrato" Informal

Featured by novel decorations, two fraternity parties, given by three fraternities were held over the weekend. Alpha Gamma Rho and Alpha Tau Omega pledges gave a party entitled "Agrato," formed by a combination of the letters of the two fraternities. This was the first joint fraternity party ever given at North Dakota State.

With a grass hut the center of attraction the decorations of the "Agrato" party presented a unique setting in Festival hall for the dance which was informal from 8:30 to 9:00 and formal until 11:30. Other decorations were cannibal island paintings, palm trees, and lighting effects with a scattering of large white bones adding a touch of realism.

After the dance in Festival hall the party went to Ceres hall where, with Benjamin Bernel as master of ceremonies, a lunch was served in cabaret style. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music and short talks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Severinson Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Goodearl, and Mr. Victor Sander were chaperons.

The Washington party, held in the college Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, featured, in its decorations, a colonial theme with pictures of George Washington, colonial flags, and red, white and blue streamers.

The party started with informal dancing from 8:30 to 9:00 and program dancing from 9:00 to 11:30. "George Collins and His Music" played for the affair. Chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Otterson, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sackett.

WOMEN NEED 75 MORE AFFIRMATIVE VOTES

In order that the Women's Senate may be organized at once to have its picture taken for the 1932 Bison, 75 affirmative votes are needed before tomorrow morning on the proposed revision to the Women's League, said Dean Dinan today.

As soon as the Senate is organized projects for women students on the campus will be undertaken. Plans are being made for the establishing of several reading rooms for women in the different buildings.

REPRESENTATIVES WILL DISCUSS SPRING FORMALS

Representatives from every organization are asked to meet with Dean Sudro in room 210 Francis hall at 4 p. m. today to discuss the question of elimination of spring formals by the fraternal organizations.

JUDGE BURR DELIVERS WASHINGTON ADDRESS AT CONVOCATION MON.

Three-Day Celebration Includes Dramatization, Ball, Tea And Exhibits

SCHOOL DISMISSED AFTER CONVOCATION

"No man creates a great age, rather he is the product of a great age," pointed out Judge A. G. Burr in an address on George Washington at convocation yesterday morning which cumulated the three-day observance of the Washington-Bicentennial. School was dismissed following the program.

"If it had not been for the American Revolution it is entirely possible that George Washington might have died only as a respected Virginian gentleman. The necessity of studying the age to gain an impression of the man himself makes the study of history as necessary as the study of biography. There is a danger in the excessive study of biography for one often receives an exaggerated view of the individual all out of proportion to the current of human life."

Because Washington was a man of "balanced judgment, had a knowledge of the existing conditions and an understanding of those conditions, because of his tenacity of purpose, his cool judgment, and commanding presence he stepped forth fitted for the hour, ready to play his part," said Mr. Burr.

"The Revolution was a part of a great drama, not an isolated part. The conflict of ideas, thoughts, methods and theories of the time were responsible for it," continued Mr. Burr.

"The 'debunker' of recent time has had a tendency to make historic figures among them Washington, more human and understandable to us even though we are intolerant of the imperfect parts of being we revere and attempt to deify them and at the same time hold them as representations of ourselves," said Mr. Burr.

In addition to the address of the morning two tableaux were presented by Mart Vogel and Miss Alice Bender who were cast as George and Mrs. Washington, respectively. Musical numbers were given by the Gold Star band under the direction of Dr. Putnam and the glee clubs under the direction of Miss Adda Blakeslee and Homer Huntoon presented a combined number.

On Saturday afternoon as the first event on the Bicentennial program Sigma Delta discussion club and the Lincoln Forensic club presented a dramatization of the Constitutional Convention.

Band Does Not Expect To Make Annual Trip To University Friday

Seventy-Five Dollars Needed To Send Forty-Five Piece Band To U. N. D.

Unless 75 dollars can be raised before Friday the Gold Star Concert band of 45 pieces will not be able to make its customary trip to the University this weekend to play for the second series of games with the upstate institution it was learned today from Dr. C. S. Putnam and William Grey, commissioner of athletics.

"We are willing to go to the University and give our support to the team," said Dr. Putnam yesterday. "However, we cannot expect the band members to pay their own expenses."

This will be the first time in many years that the band has been unable to trek to the University for the annual clashes there. At the first of the series two weeks ago the University brought a full concert band to Fargo for the conference game on Friday night. A rally will be held on Thursday morning with Charles Brown in charge of arrangements.

SIDNEY LANDON COMES TOMORROW AS FOURTH LYCEUM SERIES NUMBER

Character Impersonator Uses Wigs, Grease Paint To Give Reproductions

STUDENTS ADMITTED ON REGISTRATION CARDS

Landon Gives Popular And Unique "Great Literary Men"

Sidney Landon, widely known as a character impersonator, comes to Fargo tomorrow to appear as the fourth number on the twenty-first annual college lyceum series. The performance will begin at 8:15 in Festival hall.

Through the medium of wigs, grease paints and a precisely vivid imagination, this artist gives many faithful literary reproductions. Listed among the great literary men Mr. Landon impersonates are: Mark Twain, Josh Billings, Victor Hugo, Bill Nye, Longfellow, Thackeray, Tennyson, Kipling and Holmes. After Mr. Landon has completely lost his own identity by means of makeup, he assumes an entirely new role and quotes from the authors impersonated. One of Mr. Landon's most popular presentations is of Mark Twain making his historic birthday speech. Included in his repertoire are humorous readings by F. Hopkinson Smith, James Whitcomb Riley and Bill Nye. Edgar Allen Poe's "Annabel Lee," Rudyard Kipling poems and groups of Longfellow poems are also frequently given by Mr. Landon.

Of the characters he impersonates, and of those whose works he reads, Mr. Landon knew Riley, Twain and F. Hopkinson Smith personally. He has become acquainted with the backgrounds of the others through research and visits to their homes, both in England and America. Because of his personal contacts and familiarity with cultural surroundings, Sidney Landon is able to add a new dignity to the art of impersonation. Aided by interviews with relatives of these famous personages, plus a lively imagination, Mr. Landon is able to give realistic interpretations to his popular and unique intellectual diversion which is entitled "Great Literary Men."

All students of the college will be admitted to this performance, arranged by A. G. Arvold, upon presentation of their registration cards.

Spring Formals

Today at four p. m. the representatives of the Greek letter organizations will meet with Dean Sudro to discuss the question of omitting spring formal parties this year.

We have heard this question discussed during the last weekend and the consensus of opinion seems to be that it is an individual matter. No one is a better judge of their financial stability than the organization itself and the decision should be left to them.

It may be fashionable to be broke but there is no reason why we should become depression mad. Economy has to be practiced if it is true, but if such a practice is forced upon an unwilling organization it will immediately think of some other function to take the place of the one omitted.

The attendance at the Military and Charity Balls was anything but discouraging and we believe that no fraternity man would give up his own fraternity formal to attend the Military Ball in which event it would seem that most of them are planning on their own parties.

We would urge the representatives at this meeting this afternoon to leave the matter alone. Let the individual organization decide its own affairs without too much campus interference.

Ventilation

We have been aware of the poor ventilation in Science hall for some time, but it was only after a thorough tour of inspection that we learned on careful inquiry how bad the situation really is and how simple is the remedy.

At the present time the old wing of the building receives no ventilation except when the windows are open, an impossible solution at this time of the year. Air circulation in the new wing is more adequate because of the ventilators installed in all the classrooms, but the excessive heat and stuffy conditions in these rooms leads us to believe that this system also needs adjustment.

It seems that in building the new wing the contractors were forced to disconnect the system for the entire building. Unfortunately they were allowed to leave the campus without repairing their damage.

We are told that this is the most opportune time of the year to repair such damage. It is unfortunate that those in charge were allowed to neglect their work, but we feel that the situation is intolerable and should not be allowed to exist any longer in a modern educational plant such as this.

The Rah-Rah Spirit

With the passing of the song "Collegiate" and all the many things that it glorified we have the passing of the "Rah-Rah" spirit. Of course there are some individuals who are loath to give up their old ways, who refuse to let a good thing die.

Certainly the discouraging reception given rallies this year is evidence in itself that we are tired of straining our lungs and waving our hands in a vain attempt to help "that team". The noise at our games has settled down to a dignified din rather than a deafening roar—and we still win games.

It is interesting to speculate on the reasons for the change. Fundamentally of course this change is due to a difference in attitudes. It is no longer smart to be "collegiate". Instead we must be blasé, must curb those emotions that make us hug our neighbor and sit on his hat at the most exciting moments.

And then too perhaps night football has dampened these exuberant spirits. Somehow organized cheering is grotesque and a bit wierd at a night game where we have difficulty in seeing our neighbors.

Of course there is much about this blasé attitude that is to be deplored, but it is a relief after these emotional orgies we were subjected to and is, perhaps, a step in the right direction. Yes the "Rah-Rah" spirit is passing—praise be to Allah!

The Reform Instinct

As a nation of egoists we are also a nation of reformers. All our lives we make zealous efforts to reform others to conform with our ideas of what is right.

Our educators spend years of wasted energy trying to reform us so that we will fit into the accepted educational pattern rather than attempting to phathom those idiosyncrasies that make us different from our contemporaries.

Every fraternal group has its member who is continually telling the organization what is wrong with it and all its members, and then complacently sitting back in the armchair waiting for someone to measure up.

Every magazine has its staff member who is itching to reform the colleges and their students.

We could go on indefinitely pointing out signs of this mania which urges even rational individuals on to foolish ends. Our greatest trouble is that we are too fond of reforming other people. This topsy-turvy world is full of amateur censors who want to tell everyone else what is wrong with them. We while away precious hours telling penniless people how to pay their debts.

A little indifference is a good thing. If we could except a few more things and people for what they are without worrying ourselves unduly in an effort to change them we might cease to be a nation of bores.

Plagiarism

Foreigners are often amazed at the elaborate system of copyrights and patents that we have established in this country, proving it seems that we are all suspicious of our neighbors.

English professors at a great expense of time and effort carefully destroy or safely file away themes from unscrupulous hands—themes which wouldn't bring one cent or even a passing thought on the open market, but which might easily fall handily into the grasp of a fellow student. If we are optimistic or exceptionally good writers we decry this precaution as childless and needless.

Plagiarism is childless and more than that it is unforgivable. It is difficult to imagine how any individual will deliberately steal the work of someone else not to mention the possibility of discovery that such a move incurs.

To us this is just one more point of evidence showing to what lengths people will go to get a grade—a numerical value for someone else's work. How much more valuable and satisfying it would be to civilization and to the individual if he could stand firmly on his own feet putting forth his best efforts without this constant seeking after marks and memberships in honorary organizations.

Student Opinion

Take It Or Leave It!

Are these our children? It doesn't seem plausible that our campus has become infested with the date racketeer—but yes, the girls have "gone wall street," so to speak. They are holding out for "better" dates. Over the weekend touching tales have reached this person's ears. It seems that there were several parties over the weekend, and some of the fellers had dates weeks in advance; the programs were all made out; the gals were in the bag, so to speak. But came the day before the party, and many of the girls became sick and unable to go with the original dates, on the very slightest of provocations. And later—said parties were seen at the dances with other men, and at other centers of Fargo's night life. Now, is that the human thing to do? Pretty raw, I call it. But then perhaps they can't help it; their thyroid glands might be overactive. Such a condition naturally will make the person ambitious for better dates and more excitement. But these girls must remember that this overworking of the thyroid gland will perhaps leave them in a rather depleted state later on. You know the old line, she was always the life of every party and made every fraternity dance, but now she's just another drudge in the kitchen. But what we're trying to get at is, that this ditching of dates appears to be poor policy on the surface. No hard feelings, girls.—A. R. O.

Spring Formals

I hear there is to be a meeting of social chairmen from the different campus organizations today. They are to discuss the ruling out of individual spring formals. I can't see why there should be any discussion. As far as I can see it is a problem to be discussed and settled by each organization. Some individuals feel that in this time of depression that spring formals are a luxury and an added expense. If their thoughts were tending toward depression why didn't they start them moving at the time of the Military and Charity Balls?

The Military with expenses running into the two hundred dollar region, the Charity over a hundred! Think what they paid for the orchestra alone for the Military. And they are asking us to give up spring formals. Every girl is compelled to buy a ticket for the Charity or else her sorority is liable. I am not kicking on paying some into charity, but it seems to me if the depression is so great as to prohibit spring formals it's great enough to do away with school formals.

Think of the money put out to celebrate during these last few days. I say again if depression is so great as to rule out spring formals a thought to saving money could be put into other places.

Why should four or five social chairmen who feel that their groups can't afford a spring formal keep three or four others who feel that they can have one from enjoying themselves. I feel it's an individual problem to be settled as such.

If they rule out spring formals from the organizations why not the various Proms?

The Old School Spirit

(in one act)

BY A MALE OBSERVER

Salesman: Good afternoon, madam. My name is Joe Collitch—and yours? Thank you Miss Coed. I'm working my way thru college.

Miss: Say! I go to N. D. State myself. S. M.: Are you acquainted with realsilk hosiery?

Miss: I'm not interested one little bit.

S. M.: Of course not, because you haven't seen our latest numbers. They'll knock your eyes out, I'm tellin' you.

Miss: Well, I haven't the time this afternoon, and I never buy from people who come to the door.

S. M.: Well, I tell you, I wouldn't buy from the average solicitor either, but I'm a representative of the fairest, squarest, most extraordinarily fine company in the United States, and—

Miss: But I don't buy from canvassers, and I don't need anything now.

S. M. But I'm just a poor boy working my way thru college, don't you catch on? Get me? You'll need something later on won't you?

Miss: I buy from local stores only.

S. M.: That's fine—I stay up at the men's dorm, and I boost everything local like the Crystal, Bison Brevities, the, say, have you heard what they're going to do in the Brevities this year—

Miss: Yes, but don't you think you better be running along now?

S. M. Now I don't want to sell you anything; I merely want to show you my line; I'll step inside and show you our sensational values.

Miss: Wait a minute—I've let several collitch boys in, and they're very insulting.

S. M.: But Miss, we boast that all our customers are satisfied. I'll just have to call a spade a spade, I guess. You see, I've pledged a quota for this week to my manager, and if I don't come through with this sale, I can't go to the Forks for the University games.

Could you stand to see me staying at home? Do you want to see me starve? Do you want to see me selling apples at the corner of Broadway and Front next winter? Do you? Of course you don't. Why, I've got a wife and three kids to support, and I haven't had a bite to eat for three days. This here is the last nickel I got in the world.

And, my gosh, I gotta see those U games. Haven't you got no sporting blood in your veins? And, Miss—

Miss: (reduced to a mental wreck) All right then, give me six pairs of that gunmetal—but you can't come in.

BISON CLING TITLE BY SEVEN CONSECUTIVE CONFERENCE VICTORIES

Bison Defeat South Dakota State In Last Home Game Saturday

TEAM SUFFERS THREE DEFEATS THIS SEASON

Capable Reserve Material Helped Bring Coveted Honor After Many Years

By JACK GROHNKE

Winning their seventh consecutive conference game of the season by defeating South Dakota State college 32-24 in the new physical education building Saturday evening, the State college Bison clinched first place in the North Central conference championship race.

Coach L. T. Saalwaechter has established an enviable record thus far this season by defeating every team in the conference without a setback. The team has suffered but three defeats the entire season and two of these games were early in the year before the Bison had reached their form, and the other game was lost to the University of North Dakota when Saalwaechter chose to use his second string against the Sioux.

Reserve Material Strong

Starting the season with no more than an ordinary chance of winning a championship, Saaly built up an aggregation that was strong enough to bring the coveted honor to the school for the first time in many years. Capable reserve material has been one of the strong points in favor of the Bison during the entire season. George Fairhead proved this in the South Dakota university game by making a basket in the closing minute of play to cinch a victory for the Bison. Leo Thomasson again proved this point in the North Dakota university game when he was injected into the contest late in the game and steadied down the team which had become erratic and enabled them to win the game with a safe margin.

Weir

Much of the success of the team can fall on the shoulders of Donald Arthur,

Thomasson

Olson

Bob Weir, Walt Olson, Viv McKay and Eric Nordstrom. Donald Arthur, probably the surest shot on the team, has been high scorer in practically every game of the season. The key man of the Bison offense, Bob Weir, is greatly responsible for many of the Bison wins. Walt Olson, left handed cager, made many of his short shots from the side of the court to take his team out of danger. Viv McKay, probably the cleverest guard in the conference, and Eric Nordstrom were a pair of guards that were outstanding in every game.

The game Saturday was slow throughout with neither team playing up to their regular form. Coming from behind on two different occasions, the Bison proved their championship rights by downing their opponents after being on the short end of the count at two different times.

Arthur Starts Scoring

Donald Arthur started the scoring for the Bison when he counted for a short shot with but a minute of the game gone. The Bison counted five field goals before the Jackrabbits were able to count but uncanny free throwing ability enabled them to keep pace with the Saalymen and have a 14-13 lead at the half mark.

During the second half the Bison found their form and were easily masters of the situation. When Franz Peterson, lanky Jackrabbit center, was put out of the game on personal fouls, the tide of victory turned in favor of the Bison. He was big and active and caused the Bison no little worry.

But two games remain on the State college schedule, and these will be the return games at Grand Forks this weekend.

First Golden Gloves Tourney Series To Be Held In New Gymnasium

Fight fans at North Dakota State college and in Fargo are going to have their first view of the 1932 Bison boxers next week, when the first Golden Gloves tourney of the year will be held in the physical education building, Lt. Fay Smith informed The Spectrum today.

Complete personnel and dates for the boxing cards for next week will be ready for Friday's Spectrum, according to Lt. Smith. A ring with floodlights and modern boxing equipment will be constructed in the new physical education building this weekend.

A new scheme in selecting the personnel of the Bison boxing team is to be inaugurated this week by having the elimination tournaments held for several successive nights. This method of demonstrating the ability of fighters of each weight class under like conditions will make the selection of team men easier, according to Coach Smith.

The University of North Dakota has promise of having a strong team to oppose the Bison this year, word from Grand Forks indicates. Heavyweight champion of the University, "Milk" Wick, is preparing to revenge himself on the State college contender of this year for his 1931 defeat. "Mickey" O'Connor, clever middleweight, is also listed as a scrapper in a revengeful mood for defeats in 1931 at the Grand Forks tourney. A number of strong boxers are listed on the University squad.

Fighting practice is being kept up at the University of South Dakota with a number of boxers in each division. South Dakota university has displayed strength in the lighthweight and the welterweight division contenders. Several exhibitions of wrestling may be planned for next week as a part of the regular program, Lt. Smith announces. Several freshman football players have been working in this division of the art of self defense with Coach Smith, who is also adept at the instruction of jiu-jitsu.

Stephen Foster and Ed Will, members of the University rifle team, were guests at the Delta Tau house Friday and Saturday.

Lester Wyman and Kenneth Dick, Delta Tau Epsilon, were dinner guests at the Alpha Gamma Rho house Sunday.

Freshman Team Suffers One Defeat In Amateur Hockey League

North Dakota State college's Baby Bison hockey team is the champion of the Fargo-Moorhead Amateur Hockey league, according to Capt. J. B. Conmy, hockey coach.

The Creighton Prep swimming squad won a meet with another high school team in a curious way. When the outside team thought they had the game practically won, one of the judges informed the surprised Creighton team that they had won the meet, as one of the swimmers of the opposing team had used an illegal kick in his event.

Birds Are Few This Winter, Says Stevens

Eleven Species Seen On North Dakota's Christmas Bird Census List

Birds show a marked scarcity this winter, according to Prof. O. A. Stevens, associate professor of botany and pure seed analyst at the college.

In Bird-Lore magazine's Christmas census, taken by bird lovers the width of the United States, six censuses were sent in from North Dakota. They were taken by Prof. O. A. Stevens and Gordon Heggenes at Fargo; Gale W. Monson at Argusville; Henry Kyllingstad at Valley City; Albert Harris at Mapleton; Glenn Berner at Jamestown; and Pirna Stine at Minct.

Birds on the combined list are: prairie hen, ring-necked pheasant, snowflake, crow, short-eared owl, chickadee, Bohemian waxwing, Lapland longspur, white-breasted nuthatch, and downy woodpecker.

As compared with census lists of former years, the 1931 census shows a marked falling off in the number of birds seen, according to Mr. Stevens.

A city testing laboratory is being maintained at the University of Akron. Many unusual experiences are met by the workers in the laboratory. Now and then some man will come in to have his cup of coffee or bowl of soup tested, fearing that his wife is trying to poison him. Others call up and ask how to get rid of rats, and so forth. The laboratory also tests paving material, bricks, alcoholic contents of liquors, cocaine found in powder, bacteria in bread, water, and soil, and even a copper and gold vase.

An announcement coming from the University of Wisconsin is surprising, in view of the widespread feeling against the emphasizing of college football. It is the opinion of the Wisconsin legislature that its university should have the best football team available, and has suggested that the university carry their idea out by hiring the best athletic coach available and hiring an entirely new athletic council.
