Military Ball Attendance Is 190 Couples

Mary McLane Commissioned By President Shepperd As Feature

Decorations Accomplished Through Indirect Lighting Effects And Panels

The first formal of the year, the Military Ball, was attended by 190 couples Friday night when the annual affair was held in the Elks Temple. Adjutant William Ball and Miss Emma Nelson led the Grand March which formed at 9 o'clock. Scabbard and Blade fraternity sponsored the party.

The senior officers of the college cadet corps followed the leaders and formed an arch of sabres through which prom guests passed. Music which followed the opening ceremony was furnished by Jack Kane's band from Duluth.

The commissioning of Miss Mary McLane by President Shepperd was one of the big features of the evening. Miss McLane was the partner of Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Lovness who was second in line. The singing of the Delta Sig trio was the other feature of the party.

Decoration was accomplished by indirect lighting. The orchestra pit constructed to represent a dugout was beneath an interpretation of a bursting shell. Panels of pounded metal and lounges for the honor guests were placed on both sides of the pit. Bob Carlson was in charge of the decorating.

Miniature Springfield rifles with bayonets attached were given to the guests as favors. A leather sling added to their effectiveness.

Committee chairmen assisting Ball and Lovness in the planning of the affair included: Robert Carlson, decorations; Henry Zwerg, favors and programs; Ernest Larson, music and features; Cy Lonsbrough, tickets; Cliff Bollman, publicity; Roland Olson, refreshments; Gilbert Johnson, invitations and guests; Raymond Gilnett, floor manager.

MORE SPACE

That the Military Ball was a success, there is no doubt. The next time the affair is held we suggest that it be scheduled at a time when there is not an implement dealers convention in town. The Elk's Temple is large enough for fraternity or sorority parties but it is decidedly too small for an all-college prom.

The decorations were well carried out and cleverly designed. Without their effect the party would not have been as successful as it was. The ceremony of awarding the honorary Cadet Lieutenantcy could be improved and lengthened in order to make it more impressive. The other feature of the evening might have been entertaining, but the harmony was poor at times.

The general effect of the party was good. The large turnout showed that school formals are going to be a bigger success than they have been before.

IMPRESSIVE UNDERTAKING

The preparation of three major productions during the months of February and March by the department of public discussion is an impressive undertaking. A cast of between 50 and 60 characters from every walk of campus life have been chosen and will portray the parts in the dramas.

The Edwin Booth term play "Holiday" by the popular author Philip Barry is still running on Broadway and offers a chance of excellent interpretation.

"Little Women" taken from the famous novel by Miss Alcott offers something different to the theater going public. The old fashioned costumes furnish a quaint atmosphere that helps further the plot of the play.

The experimental production of the advanced class in play production will introduce "He Who Gets Slapped", a vivid story of circus life. The character He has always been one of the mysteries of the stage. His position in life, his family relations, and his former life have caused much speculation. Every detail of the show is managed by students.

This elaborate program of good drama for the coming months should appeal to anyone who takes an interest in the portrayal of character on the stage.

JAMES JOYCE

What is "Ulysses"? Who is James Joyce? To an American student these are oft recurring questions. Instructors, in passing, mention Joyce and the fact that his most famous book "Ulysses" is unattainable in this country. Perhaps no one has ever read it, and few on this campus have ever seen it.

All this is a result of stupidity on the part of those in authority. "Ulysses" occupies a most highly-esteemed place on the list of censored books which America prides herself on keeping out of the country as "dangerous literature". We wonder if it ever occurred to these people that no one likely to wade through this long book would be much affected by its style.

An amusing story is told of the book in manuscript form. It seems that Joyce sent it back to England. The censors there found it incomprehensible and thought it was written in cipher. It was only after much persuasion that they were convinced that it was a new type of literature unknown to them. At the present time Stuart Gilbert edits a volume in which he interprets every phrase.

If we can't read "Ulysses" we can at least read about Joyce who makes for interesting reading. Now he is living in Paris, almost blind, speaking a Triestine dialect, and dictating his new book which, like "Ulysses" is taking him seven years to write.

We have one consolation. Perhaps when we are old and confined to the fireside "Ulysses" will have as highly-esteemed a place on our bookshelves as it does on our censored list now. Not because "Ulysses" will be a better book, but because "dangerous literature" will be so much more dangerous.

BOREDOM

Living as we do in this twentieth century where motion seems to be the predominant urge we find it somewhat of a shock to meet people who are bored to extinction and so self-centered that they can find nothing to live for.

Naturally enough there are some for whom books have no appeal. To spend a quiet evening reading of far distant lands (real or imaginative) and of fascinating experiences is a type of amusement they have never experimented with. We are inclined to feel sorry for them. For melodrama they might pick any of the thrilling mystery stories; fascination biographies and exciting tales of adventure take us out of our own sphere; then there are the classics, Virgil, Homer and Shakespeare; the Russian novelists, Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, and Turgenev who give us that broad, comprehensive view of life, and then above all else is the realm of poetry—Keats, Shelly, Carl Sandburg, Edna St. Vincent Millay and innumerable others.

Then too we are living in the age of modern science. Every year new, and important discoveries are made of which we can only read and wonder at.

For some there is travel and for others there is art, but unfortunately some see only one color and not the great conception that the artist had in mind and others can talk of nothing else but of the poor service in European hotels.

Isn't it enough just to be living and to watch and predict whether the United States will ever join the League of Nations, how the Soviet experiment in Russia will end, and, more concretely, whether the capitol will remain at Bismarck.

Wasn't it Stevenson who said that: "The world is so full of a number of things, I am sure we should all be as happy as kings?"

COMPLEXES

In this age of modern psychology we are all fitted with one complex or another. The easiest and quickest way of explaining a self-retiring attitude is by labelling it "inferiority complex". Likewise a cocksure attitude is immediately "superiority complex".

There is it seems no happy medium. As yet psychology has discovered no man who is self-assured and yet modest of his own ability. Perhaps they have and now there will be a mediocrity complex.

As we go from class to class, from one activity to the other we find the same people carrying on the class discussion and the same people in charge of arrangements. These people are held in high esteem and for want of anything else are called brilliant. At the most it is a surface brilliancy. It is their customary poise and self-assurance to change the subject when it is too deep for them and leave us still bedazzled by their own cleverness.

Then the other nine-tenths among whom there are some excellent minds are content to remain inferior. If they would only remember that although they may do something bad or the wrong thing there is always somebody who does much worse, then they would gain confidence and the esteem of their fellows.

Don't be afraid to say what you think. About most questions one man's opinion is as good as the next. Meet the other fellow's bluff with a better one and life will seem much sweeter.

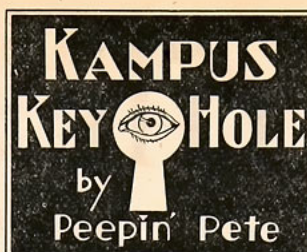

MOODS

We have often noticed that one person in low spirits will spoil a friendly, happy atmosphere beyond repair, and that the combined efforts of the others will be of no avail.

The same principle seems to apply to the classrooms. A student easy in his mind, and receptive to knowledge can walk into a classroom interested and anxious for open discussion. But five minutes later this attitude, on the coming of the instructor, has been changed into one of boredom, of restlessness, of anything but interest, merely because the instructor has something else on his mind and, with his coming, brings unrest to his students by biting sarcasm and impatience.

In most instances the student's day is completely ruined for learning anything. The combined efforts of the professors in the other classes can do nothing to regain his former attitude.

Thus it is, but thus should it be?

Fraternity Holds Open House Sunday

Theta Chi Mothers' Auxiliary Serves Refreshments To Guests

Nearly three hundred of the students and faculty of North Dakota State College and residents of Fargo were in attendance at open house of the Theta Chi fraternity Sunday evening.

Guests were escorted by the fraternity members through the four story chapter home, which was completed in October, 1939. Many expressed admiration for the plan of the building and the architecture in which the English style predominates.

The interior of the house is modeled after the latest ideas in fraternity home building, according to members of the fraternity. The suite plan of two-man study rooms and adjacent sleeping quarters is carried out on the second and third floor for better arrangements. The ground floor is of terrazzo composition with a large olunging room, reading, music, reception and cloak rooms, treasurer's office and guest suite. The basement includes a large dining room, kitchen, servants' quarters, storerooms and the furnace room, with heat furnished by an oil burner.

The fourth floor of the house is given over to a reproduction of the Blue Rooms, which was for many years the meeting place for the fraternity members. Many of the trophies and traditional relics from the former meeting place have been placed in the Blue Rooms of the new house, where the chapter business is now conducted.

The Theta Chi Mothers' Auxiliary served tea and a light lunch to the guests at the conclusion of their tours of the house.

Captain Bart Conmy will meet all members of the Rifle club in the gun room of the armory Wednesday at 4 o'clock. This includes those who did not try out for the team.

Bison Undertake Difficult 1931 Grid Schedule

BIG TEN SCHOOLS HAVE TWO GAMES ON S. C. PROGRAM

Kansas State College Will Meet Buffalomen On November 21

MOST COLORFUL CARD ATTEMPTED IN LOOP

Morningside, So. Dak. State Here In Conference Competition

The completion of the 1931 Bison football schedule, the most colorful and most difficult season campaign ever to be attempted by a North Central conference school, has been announced recently by Casey Finnegan, genial athletic director of this college.

Three outstanding football headliners, Minnesota and Wisconsin Universities and Kansas State College will oppose the Thundering Herd on their own gridirons next fall, besides the regular North Central conference grid rivals and the St. Thomas and Moorhead State Teachers teams.

The games with the two great middle-western universities will come during the arly part of the fall season, Minnesota on September 26 and Wisconsin on October 3. This will be the first time in four years that the Bison will oppose the noted Badger gridriders, to whom they displayed in the former encounter that the North Dakota boys know how to play real football.

The Kansas State college team, coached by a former all-American quarterback, Alvin N. (Bo) McMillan, will contest the Bison at Manhattan, Kansas, in the last game of the Bison schedule. The Kansas team proved to be one of the strongest in the Big Six conference last year winning over Missouri, Iowa State, Nebraska, Centre, and Washburn.

The complete schedule for 1931 is as follows:

- Sept. 26—Minnesota U at Minneapolis.
- Oct. 3—Wisconsin at Madison.
- Oct. 9—St. Thomas at Fargo.
- Oct. 16—Morningside at Fargo.
- Oct. 24—South Dakota State at Fargo.
- Oct. 31—North Dakota U at Grand Forks.
- Nov. 7—Moorhead State Teachers at Fargo.
- Nov. 14—South Dakota U at Vermillion.
- Nov. 21—Kansas State at Manhattan.

Frosh Team Will Play Valley City

Saturday the Baby Bison pucksters will journey to Valley City where they will meet the high school puck squad in a second hockey game of the season with that group.

Through several unusual coincidences of victory and defeat it will be hard to predict the outcome of Saturday's game, according to Captain J. B. Conmy, hockey coach. The Hilliners eked out a 1-0 victory over the State College freshmen in their first encounter but lost to the Central high school team of Fargo in another fray. However, still later, the Valley City boys defeated the conquerors of the Fargo high school squad, the Detroit Lakes high school team.

Last Friday afternoon the Baby Bison defeated the Central high school pucksters with a decisive margin which indeed tends to further complicate the situation, according to the hockey coach.

The boys are certainly up to their old tricks. Stew bad we didn't predict three defeats for Saaly and his henchmen. Anyway we are still in the conference and should lose a couple of games to the Normal (notice the prediction). At least we will gain gobs of prestige by staying in there until the whistle blows.

Again a little fooling with conference scores is going to be a lot of fun. South Dakota State beat Morningside by 24 points; the Bison lost by three points, which gives the Bunnies a 21 point advantage over us—and we beat them once by 19 points. Which only goes to show that no matter how many games we win the Sioux will be a couple of points better than Notre Dame or something.

Root, Atkins and Buck are plenty to worry to worry any opposition in this conference and in a good many other conferences. They very definitely proved to the Bison their ability in South Dakota's 27 to 14 victory.

That gang of Coyotes down south are out to win another pennant and nothing less. Right now they are at the top of the list and it seems quite probable that they will stay there. Perhaps they will have a little difficulty when they make their northern trip but hardly enough to put a damper on their pennant aspirations.

However, basketball trips are quite beneficial in giving a green team experience. By the end of the season the Bison should be "going hot" as Ed McArdle says. But most likely there won't be any games left at the end of the season.

Lemke Stars In Frosh Win From Fargo High

Smaltz, Kaercher Play Well In Contest; McEssy Leads Fargo Array

Although outplayed and outskated the major portion of the game the Bison Frosh, through the stellar work of Bill Lemke at goal, managed to eke out a 4 to 2 victory over the Fargo High School Midgets. Time after time the Midgets' forward line swept down the ice only to be stopped short by Lemke's furious work in the net. One of the two points scored against him was batted into the net by one of his own men during a scramble in front of the goal.

McEssy was the outstanding player for Fargo but was ably assisted by McGrath. For the Baby Bison, Smaltz was the defensive ace until he was injured and taken from the game. Kaercher played well at wing, scoring two goals.

The lineup:
Fargo High G Bison
F. Myers D Lemke
McEssy D Smaltz
Gaffaney D Lesh
Hendrickson W Kaercher
Hanson W Lund

BISON LOSE TWO GAMES ON TRIP

Strong South Dakota Quintet Defeats North Dakota With 27-14 Score

MORNINGSIDE DOWNS BISON AT SIOUX CITY

McKay, Arthur, Fairhead, And Olson Star On Southern Journey

By Jack Grohne

The trip that is carrying the Bison basketball team into the southern end of the conference has proven quite disappointing to the local followers.

Friday evening the strong South Dakota University quintet turned the Buffalomen by a 27-14 score. The University team won the conference championship last season and lost only one man by graduation. The Coyotes opened up with a fast-breaking offense that netted nine points before the Bison scored.

Viv McKay proved the star of the State College five. He held the South Dakota scoring ace, Adkins, in check but the Coyote offense continued to function around Root and Buck.

The forward line composed of Nordstrom, Fairhead, and May was unable to break up the defense of the strong southern team.

Saturday night the Bison lost a heart-breaking encounter to Morningside College cagers at Sioux City.

It was the kind of a game which had the capacity crowd on its toes all the way, neither team ever holding more than a six point advantage. The Bison were in the lead 13-12 at the half way mark.

Two tight defenses, the zone of the Maroons, and a man to man of the Bison offered the attraction of the game. The defense of the Sioux held more effectively in the pinches and this gave them the advantage.

Inability to sink free throws proved disastrous to the State College five. They made only three of their attempts from the foul line good and the Methodists garnered 13 of their points in this manner.

Donald Arthur and Olson led a desperate rally in the last few minutes of play which nearly upset the Morningside team.

Arthur, Fairhead, and Olson played well for North Dakota while Koberg and Mossman led the attack of the Maroons.

Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Knudson of Pelican Rapids, Minn., visited with their son, Wakleamar, Sunday afternoon.

FIGHT LIGHTS

The first Bison fight card of the season will draw students and Fargo fight fans to the Armory next Saturday night.

We see that Burton Pinkham will be one of the feature fighters of the evening. Burt has ever been a consistent threat for honors in the lightweight division. Though he has missed the title for the past two years, he has proven himself an ever willing and doughty little fighter.

Both Mert Brady and Bob Deering, giant freshman football men, tip the scales at 195 pounds and have shown much promise as aspirants to the heavyweight throne. It will be interesting to see the big fellows in the ring Saturday night.

Undaunted by his comical knockout last year, Weshnevski, the Bouncing Pole, is back into training and plans to entertain the boxing public this weekend.

You're beaten to earth—well what's that?

Come up with a smiling face
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts
But to lie there—that's disgrace.

The harder you fall—why the higher you bounce

Be proud of your blackened eye.
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts

But how did you fight—and why.

President Gives Address At Start Of Farmers Week

Points Out That Population Has Not Overtaken Production

Scientists of 50 years ago showed wonderful accuracy in forecasting the number of people in the world now, but they missed sadly when they predicted that population would have overtaken production and the world would be on short food rations, Dr. John H. Shepperd, president of the North Dakota State college declared Wednesday in his address opening the first general session of the 32nd Farmers and Housewives week.

The North Dakota State Beekeepers association convention opened Wednesday with an address by W. F. Boylan, Carrington, president; the seed growers school which opened Tuesday, continued its sessions and the North Dakota Homemakers opened their annual sessions with greetings from Miss Alba Bales and Miss Grace DeLong, of the college staff.

Two features of Wednesday's program were the banquets held in the evening, one for the Master Farm Homemakers, who will be honored this year, and the other by the beekeepers.

A general session in the college armory Wednesday included various groups attending farm schools and other gatherings on the college campus and members of the North Dakota Implement Dealers association, who opened their annual meeting.

The program centered about modern harvesting machinery, appropriate to the 100th anniversary year of the invention of the reaping machines.

H. F. McColly, agricultural engineer at the college discussed the three methods of harvesting—with the binder-thresher, the combine, and the "New Way" harvester. Dr. H. L. Walster, dean of agriculture at the college, discussed the effect of grain standing after being ripe and the quality of grain harvested by the various methods.

Shepperd Gives Analysis
In his analysis of the upsetting effect on the adaptation of scientific methods to the farming business, on predictions made by scientists themselves, Dr. Shepperd said:

"It was the conclusion of scientists in 1882 that 50 years from that date the world's population would have overtaken production, and that people would have to manage on short rations. The year 1932 is almost here and we have too much to eat and too much to wear.

"And now we know that even more amazing results in economical production are to be expected."

Honor Homemakers
Work of years to fulfill faithfully their jobs as homemakers will receive formal recognition tonight, when four North Dakota farm women are recognized as master farm homemakers at a banquet in Ceres hall at the North Dakota State College. They are Mrs. Joseph Paulson, Concrete, Pembina county; Mrs. Herman M. Anderson, Warwick, Benson county; Mrs. Louis A. Vasey, Mott, Hettinger county; and Mrs. Howard Wilson, Leal, Barnes county.
