Bennie Nearly Misses Formal When Tux Does Not Appear

The big night finds Bennie crumpled in a chair up in the third floor of the Kappa Phi house, convulsed with racking sobs. His tux hadn't come. He fingered tearfully the luscious program he had arranged—even a dance with the honorary cadet colonel!—How his mother would quiver with pride at last! Curt Ball hadn't asked him for a dance yet, however—and he did feel it was too bad for Curt. Number three was with a girl named Jean Pote—he considered the 15 cent shine on his shoes. But all this is not to pass. His tux! and again he collapses in tears.

Footsteps on the stairs!! and in bursts burly Cy Lonsbrough—with the precious garment in his arms. Ben leaps to his feet, smiles breaking over his shining face.

There ensues a general tussle with boiled fronts and ties and studs—poor thing. His brow is wet with honest perspiration by the time his sartorial elegance is complete.

He galumphed down the steps, 4 at a leap—and made for the telephone. "234", he rasped in the mouthpiece. "Is this the 25 cent line—35 cents for two? The deuce I will! I know one for 7 cents." So saying he ran out in front and hailed the yellow peril.

He arrives at her house half an hour late and she had daggers in her eyes—a very appropriate little touch for a Military Ball. When she saw Ben gleaming in black and white splendor—her rancor melted—and they trolleyed on to the ball.

Now I'm not going to tell you what they find there—cause it'll spoil it all for you. All I know is that Ben told the Kappa Phis not to expect him till about three or four—and the date is staying with a friend—so it is evidently Ben's big night.

There is an automobile in the United States for every four and one half persons.

Cadet Adjutant Curt Ball and his partner, Miss Emma Nelson, will lead the grand march at the 16th annual Military Ball this evening at the Elk's Temple. The line will form at 9 o'clock following half an hour of informal dancing.

"We expect about 175 couple at the Scabbard and Blade formal tonight and we urge all basic course students to come in uniform," was the statement made by the prom manager.

The traditional formation of the sabre arch by senior R. O. T. C. officers will serve as a prelude to the Grand March. Following Ball and his partner will be Cadet Colonel Wallace Lovness and his partner, Miss Mary McLane. The platoon commanders, deans of the schools, and departmental heads will be followed by the other members of the corps and their guests.

Decorations Different

The decorations will feature a system of indirect lighting playing from the floor and walls. Panels of hammered metal will reflect the howitzers placed before them. Jack Kane's orchestra will be placed in a typical wartime dugout furthering the military atmosphere. The exact reproduction of a bursting bomb will be suspended directly over the dugout. The other decorations will be in red, white and blue, the fraternity colors.

The program will include twelve dances with a possibility of two extras. The managers have secured permission from the school authority

Honor Fraternity To Pledge Mart Vogel Floyd Viel Tuesday

Plans Discussed For North
Central Press Meet
At Fargo

Pledging services for Floyd Viel and Mart Vogel will be conducted by active members of Gamma Tau Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity, at 4 p. m., Tuesday, according to Amos Wallum, president of the organization. The two men were named pledges of the honorary fraternity at a meeting of the active chapter in the Spectrum office Tuesday afternoon.

Outstanding work in journalistic activities on the campus is the basis for selection of pledge members of Gamma Tau Sigma. At the present time there are ten active members. Viel, whose home is at Fargo, is a junior in the school of science and literature, and is business manager of the 1932 Bison. He is a member of Delta Kappa Sigma fraternity. Mart Vogel is also a member of the Bison staff being associate editor of the yearbook. Alpha Sigma Tau is his social fraternity. Vogel claims Perham, Minn., as his home town.

Three Classes Of Readings To Be Given; Contestants
Judged Together

Ten students of North Dakota State college will compete for first honors in the 36th declamation contest in the Little Country theater at 7 p. m., tonight, according to Miss Alice Bender, instructor in the public discussions department, who is in charge of the contest.

Miss Eleanor Gust, Woods, a junior in the Agricultural and Mechanic Arts high school, will also be awarded a medal at the contest by virtue of winning the high school declamation contest held several weeks ago.

Students who have entered the contest and their selections are:

THE MILITARY BALL

Tonight, after much feverish expectation comes the Military Ball. For weeks the various committees have been at work planning spectacular decorations and excellent entertainment.

Many a maiden has had visions of herself in gauzy chiffon, sophisticated satin, and long ear rings. Nor are the fair sex alone in the rosy plans for during the past few days we have heard the pros and cons of this kind of tie versus that kind of tie etc.

Truly formal affairs are a good thing. After all there is something about a military uniform, the cut of a tuxedo, and white shoulders above lovely many-hued gowns that lends us both dignity and beauty.

Then, too, formal clothes make for formal manners. Charming women can listen to gentlemanly men and believe, for once "those little white lies" that are so dear to the feminine heart.

Yes indeed, an occasional formal affair midst so much in our life that is informal helps us to remember the neglected arts of good manners and graceful living.

WHERE DOES THE FAULT LIE?

The other day we heard a student make, what would seem to some a surprising statement. He maintained that the existing system of education is all wrong. To support his assertion he said that he had got a lot more out of the books read on his own initiative than any task he had been set to in the class room.

When we look back we remember that at six we were conscientiously learning our ABC's. That is where the fault lies—even at the beginning we did things conscientiously and so destroyed all the real thrill that comes from studying something for its own sake.

Many of were amazed when he entered high school to find that we were expected to select some one course, and to follow it in its entirety even though we had been taught nothing in the grades that made us anxious to master some particular subject. As a result many of us more or less drifted into a college preparatory course when we were no more fitted for college work than a moron.

During these four years of preparation we learn (still conscientiously) something about Keats, about Milton, about chemistry, about math—and oh how many pages of Virgil we painstakingly translated. Consequently the mere mention of a Latin text brings vision of horror rather than of enjoyment such as only Virgil can give—after all the average student of seventeen has hardly a mature enough mind or a broad enough background to appreciate Latin poetry.

Then came graduation and having been trained for nothing except college we went to college because it was the thing to do, because our parents wanted us to, or more likely because there wasn't anything else to do.

Again the problem of course was presented to us. Further more we were asked what profession we were planning to enter. Hastly we glanced over the courses offered and saw surveys of this and that and something else. Moreover they seemed to follow pretty generally those subjects pursued in high school. Following the line of least resistance we signed for French and English and everything else we had been introduced to—one shouldn't forget to mention that all things unsuccessfully mastered in high school were assiduously avoided now we had learned one thing, the power of selection. For all we know perhaps if chemistry had been presented differently in the more practical rather than theoretical phases we might have become interested. Instead we learned formulas and formulas and theories.

Then as young as twenty-one we are graduated for the last time inadequately prepared with nothing, but surveys of this, that and the other thing.

What next? Do we then drift into a job (usually not a position) eventually marry and become so many Babbitts telling ourselves life is good and God is just?

Naturally we don't pretend to offer a solution, but it is something to think about.

LITERARY PEOPLE

Some people have queer values on which they base their opinions of individuals. For example a man once said to us: "I always look at a man's bookshelves when I go to his house." By them I can fairly well judge what sort of man he is.

I couldn't help thinking how often this man must have been mistaken and is now suffering under the hallucination that so and so is a well-read person.

Just recently I entered a room filled with books. All around me there were beautifully bound editions of Dickens, Hardy, Thackeray, Sir Walter Scott, and all the other authors who form the basis for a library. On the table, I saw copies of Harper, Atlantic Monthly, and Century not to mention the American Mercury. On the other side of the table I found the latest selections of the Book-of-the-month Club and Literary Guild. Out of curiosity we questioned the host about one that has been much discussed lately.

But "he'd been so busy; really hadn't gotten around to it." That reply immediately made us suspicious and we examined the shelves and found the pages of the beautiful volumes submerged under a layer of dust and uncut.

Thus the "literary people." Know your true reader by the carefully selected, single volumes cheaply bound, but dog-eared, handled often with a reverent touch.

LITTLE INTERNATIONAL

The Little International Livestock Show presented last night by Saddle and Siroloin was a distinct success from every angle. The entertainment as well as the exhibition of the animals showed intelligent preparation and careful execution. The managers of the Show as well as the entire organization behind it are to be complemented.

The new attraction, the Co-Ed milking contest proved to be a scream and should be incorporated into the regular program. If the progress of the show reveals as much advancement every year as it did this year, the college will have to find larger quarters for the event.

In Passing: See you at the Military tonight. Declamation contest this afternoon. Frosh hockey team plays today.

Student Opinion

According to an editorial appearing in a late edition of the Spectrum, our schools and colleges are robbing the student of about fifteen hundred dollars a year because the educational institutions do not train individuals to step into highly paid jobs the day after graduation. However, is the making of money the only objective of an educational institution. I say no, it is not.

I realize that we have to live, but I don't think anyone with a college diploma would have to starve either. On leaving college, the average man is able to earn at least a hundred dollars a month. This may not seem very much for an ambitious person to start life on, but he would not be able to earn half that much without his education.

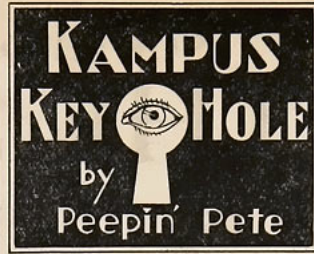

Although it sometimes seems hard to pay the price of a college education, yet there is nothing in the world more valuable to young people than the intellectual and social contacts found on a college campus. Aside from learning the humdrum tasks of making a living there are countless other things which a man or woman automatically comes in contact with during a college career. People who rail against colleges and their expense are usually the ones who have not attended a college and therefore are not in a position to present the facts in their true light. M. H.

TELEPHONES

There is a matter on the campus to which I would like to call the attention of the authorities. It is the matter of adequate telephone communication. We feel rather sure that it is an oversight on the part of those in charge that all outside calls on the campus must be made from the library or Ceres Hall.

For the benefit of those living off the campus I believe public telephones should be installed in all the buildings. On a cold winter's day it is anything but pleasant to rudge over o the library to call a cab, or make any other necessary call that arises during the course of a day.

At present there is a private telephone exchange on the campus. Surely the addition of a few more instruments would not make a terrible expense. However, if the committee feels that the expense would be too grtat, a pay telephone like the one in the main building could be provided in every building. M. A.

Military Ball Postponed; Ball Has Lost Ticket

Several Local Pawn Shops Shall Be Searched By Order Of Dean Smith

Plans for one of the most lavish Military balls in the history of the institution came to an abrupt terminus today when it was learned that Curtiss "Hi" Ball, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ball, had lost his ticket for the gala event.

When advised of this loss, Dean I. W. Smith called for two fearless reporters and immediately planned a foraging trip to include the local pawn shops.

"And where did you lose your ticket, Mr. Ball?" inquired the reporter, fearlessly.

"It must have been between the Ceres Hall cafe and the drug store," stated the Montanan with a Shirely grin, but wincing a bit.

"Ha! and what were you doing at the drug store?"

"I just stated that I ate at Ceres Hall," spoke willyum loyally.

"Mr. Ball!" "Now look hyer reporteh, I'll hav youah know I'm from th' West where we string up Critters th' likes o' you thet gets fresh. And thar's gold in them hills," he finished.

"How long have you worn you're Christmas sick now?" inquired the reporter relentlessly, and expectorating expertly into goldfish bowl.

"How are the folks?" asked the former, reaching for a Murad which a man named Klotz had carelessly tossed to the pavement.

At an early hour this morning Mr. Ball was still at a loss to know its whereabouts.

"I am still at a loss to know its whereabouts," he stated at an early hour this morning.

While prowling . . . no, not prowling, for prowling is a horrid word . . . the reporters came upon a suspicious looking man by the name of Lovness. He was released after a grueling examination of cross fire when he proved that his ticket had been given him for taking a Pop.

Resolved to track down their quarry the reporters querously questioned Emma Nelson, who had already borrowed a formal for the occasion.

Miss Nelson, who was crocheting an ear muff at the time refused to believe the staggering statement until the reporters crossed their hearts.

"The old meanie," she cried, speaking of Mr. Ball, "I knew he'd seen that picture in the Fargo Forum."

"Life is like that", added the third reporter (Now, this isn't your cue, third reporter, grabbing him by the Que) avidly.

The postponement of the social affair is to be regretted by the whole College and will leave bevys of Ceres Hall girls with formal all-night privileges, to say nothing of the consternation in the MSTC, and freshly shined brass buttons of our strategists. (Back seat strategists with lots of brass)

MY LAST LINE; Thank you, Mr. Ball, I already have a bid for the Military.

MEET COYOTES ON VERMILLION COURT IN FIRST CONTEST

Final Game With Jackrabbits Monday; Two Wins Hoped For

Morningside Methodists Battle Bison Tomorrow In Second Game

Hopes running high, an ambitious squad of North Dakota State College basketballers embarked Wednesday for Vermillion, S. D., where tonight the Buffalomen meet the Coyotes in the first of a three-game series. The Bison meet Morningside tomorrow and the Bunnies Monday.

Mindful of last year when the Bison dropped two games on the southern journey, Saalwaechter has pointed his charges for the trip in the belief that two wins out of three will place the North Dakotans in a strategic position for the remainder of the season. The overwhelming victory over South Dakota State at Fargo last weekend indicates the Bison have a powerful aggregation, one that must be considered in doping loop ratings.

Those with Saalwaechter on the trip are: Nordstrom, Fairhead, May, Olson, McKay, Weir, Arthur, McDonald, Thomasson, and Seitz.

Much credit for the Bison showing in the conference opener goes to Leo May, only senior on the squad, whose steadying influence was an important factor in the Bunny setback. Leo is playing the brand of ball which made him outstanding two years ago, and the Bison are keyed for a determined pennant fight.

Frosh Pucksters Meet Strong Fargo Sextet

Bison Yearlings Show Improved Rink Game Since Their Defeat By V. C.

The freshman hockey team will meet its second opponent of the season, the Central high school puck squad, in an ice battle at the college rink this afternoon at four o'clock, according to Capt. J. B. Conmy, college hockey coach.

The Baby Bison have shown marked improvement both in individual and team play since the contest with Valley City high school several weeks ago, according to their coach. The squad had only four days of practice before the tiff with the Hi-liners which they lost 1-0.

No games are scheduled for the Bison varsity hockey team this weekend, according to Capt. Conmy. The squad has had several practice sessions this week in preparation for a return game with the Fargo-Moorhead Comets to settle the tie of a single victory each.

BY CHAMPLIN

Again the Bison are on their that trip south, one which has been so disastrous in past years. As in those years the Bison are favorites to win at least two of the three games. Tonight they open at Vermillion with a tough bunch of Coyotes. We know that S. D. U. has beaten Morningside, but not half so badly as did the Rabbits. And the rearing, tearing, slashing, smashing, gnashing, crashing Herd didn't do so poorly against these Bunnies.

Playing at Morningside Saturday the Bison are liable to run into almost anything. You never can tell what the Methodists are going to do. Some extremely powerful Bison teams have been defeated on the small floor there, even though they had been doped to win with their hands tied behind their backs. The dope is almost the same this year, but will it bring the same results?

The Bison meet the Jackrabbits on Monday night for their second clash. Of course we should beat them again, but if Saaly thinks that two wins on the trip will be sufficient, this might be the one to lose—(in case we win the other two).

Yes, Saaly will be quite well satisfied if the team comes home with a couple of victories, for they will still be quite definitely in the conference race. It is a question whether we should put a jinx on the team, but anyway, here are some predictions.

- Bison 36, S. D. U. 21
- Bison 32, Morningside 18
- Bison 30, S. D. S. 21

Perhaps anyone that makes predictions for basketball games should be shot—at least half shot.

Why doesn't Mr. Saalwaechter send one of his teams to Vermillion and the other one to Sioux City? Such an arrangement should cut down expenses.

Work On Brevities To Begin Saturday

Presler Announces Schedule For Supervised Act Rehearsals

With the try-outs completed, the final preparations for the Bison Brevities begin with the supervised rehearsals Saturday, according to Henry Pressler, general Manager of the show. Each group will be given definite periods for the rehearsals, at which time suggestions will be given for the improvement of the individual presentations.

The schedule for Saturday follows: Theta Chi, 9:30; Gamma Phi Beta, 9:45; Delta Kappa Sigma, 10:00; Kappa Kappa Gamma, 10:15; Sigma Phi Delta, 10:30; Kappa Delta, 10:45; Alpha Sigma Tau, 11:00; Alpha Kappa Phi, 11:15; Phi Omega Pi, 11:30; Y. M. C. A., 11:45.

Mr. Pressler is making arrangements to secure Cyclorama curtains to be used in the show, and each group is expected to have all stage settings decided upon before its rehearsal Saturday. The rehearsals will continue at intervals until the presentation of the show on March 2 and 3.

BOXING TOURNEY DATE POSTPONED TILL JANUARY 31

Eight Bouts Are Planned For Round In College Competition

The date for the first Bison boxing tournament of the 1931 season has been set ahead to Saturday evening, January 31, it was announced today by Lt. Fay Smith, boxing instructor. Several outstanding social events this weekend were the reasons for the change in the schedule.

Eight bouts are planned for this first round of the Golden Glove tourney. The greater part of the fights will be that of first year men who have shown boxing promise in the daily workouts. The most outstanding of those billed for the evening is that of Pinkham and Lynn in the junior lightweight division and Brady and Deering in the heavyweight class, according to fight fans.

Two light, clever boxers, Don Lieb and Johnny Rice will be among the first to mix in the evening contests. This is the first year of boxing for both of the bantams. Ed Dehne and George Nichols will contest for the featherweight honors of the evening.

Two freshman welterweights, John Smith and Reiton, are well matched and promise to give an interesting exhibition. Weshnevski, the bouncing Pole, will be back in the ring Saturday to trade "haymakers" with Ed Kunkel.

Two fights have been arranged in the middleweight class. Hammond and Gabe, both weighing around 150 pounds, and Kupp and Adams, who are of slightly heavier build, will exchange fistcuffs.

Deering and Brady, giant freshmen football players, will form one of the major attractions for the evening. The boys have shown good speed and hitting power during practice bouts.

Andy Lynn and Burton Pinkham, among the several contenders for the lightweight title, will form the main bout of the evening. Pinkham has been a runner-up in his weight division for several years and is determined to go further at this time. Lynn has shown marked improvement in boxing this year, his second one, and many feel he has an even chance for the honors on Saturday.

Out of a total of 82 reported as failing during the first semester at the University of Arizona, 68 were men and 14 were women.
