

An inventor is distinguished from the rest of society by their uncanny ability to think in terms of concepts that do not exist yet. This is not intended to be the final solution that addresses living near the Red River. It is simply a catalyst to open people's eyes to what may now be possible outside of our current means of dwelling in the region.

