As you know, your tuition fee covers an amount known as Student's Activities Fee. This is an amount budgeted among athletics, publications, public speaking, social functions, class treas-uries, etc. At a meeting of the respective heads it was decided that this money was wrongly apportioned. #### Armory Ready For Mechanic Arts Ball

Everything is in readiness for the annual Mechanic Arts ball which will be held in the college barn, Friday, May, from 8:30 to 11:30. The fight under the supervision of Robert Carlson are said to be nearly perfect and there is a large and varied assortment of good features which will keep the guests entertained from the beginning of the program to the end. The setting is to be laid on Wall Street where a new corporation is being where a new corporation is being formed and so, of course, there will be plenty of speculation but not along the line of having a good time. The decorations are also said to be very good this year, according to the committee in charge.

Woman Lecturer Addresses State Student Body

"Be very careful what you want for you are sure to get it," Mrs. Jessie Burrell Eubank, member of the Board of the National Geographic Magazine and lecturer in Education at the University of Cincinnati told members of the student body and faculty at a convocation held in the college armory Tuesday morning, April 28.

"Be careful what you think about for you're going to look like it," she went on to tell her audience. "It is a psychological fact that your desires a psychological fact that your desires influence your successes or failures as well as your personality. The big point is to be more vitally alive, to sweep away all temporary desires and lead your self to get more out of life in an ever-increasing ratio.

"The spiritual values of intelligence wisdom, joy, peace, courtesy and awareness are the things we must learn to live with," Mrs. Eubank

"We are all people of much greater power than we now think, and it is our problem to set that power free so that we may live the greater life," was Mrs. Eubank's closing statement.

The cover of the book was designed by Betty McMoran, Freshman Home Economics student. Betty received a two and one-half dollar gold piece for designing the most attractive block print in a contest carried on by Phi Upsilon Omicron in Miss Elliott's Freshman Art class.

Into the shop walked Mr. Dempsey, expressing his desire to try on some feminine styles of headwear. Well, Minda and the girls did their best and tried to convince him that he looked stunning or stunned or some-thing like that. Anyway, Jack decided that he had gone far enough and that he had better give the sales-ladies a chance to regain their proper and that he had better give the sales-ladies a chance to regain their proper complexion. But before he left he told them that they should all see him referee a couple of fights at the town hall that night. Minda, how-ever, thought that to see him at a prize fight would spoil his civilian charm so she stayed home that eve-ning and want to held for a while ning and went to bed for a while.

philosophy; the strength of the strong is rare. Being weak I must stoop to refutation of arguments presented against the pessimists in an article of a current magazine. You are referred to the April number of Scribner's, whose articles are acceptable to a man in a state of good health founded on plenty of sleep: "Amidst the Encircling Gloom", by Howard Mumford Jones . . . a really poor article.

The sum and substance of it is this: The sum and substance of it is this:

1) Since the great war our thinkers have sunk in materialism and pessimism;

2) This pessimism is blackening the human horizon . . . . general despair predominates;

3) This trend is conventional as Biblical writers, Hume, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Voltaire, etc., thought the identical centuries age: 4) The chances are still tarie, etc., thought the identical centuries ago; 4) The chances are still fifty-fifty for good. All of which proves nothing. Mr. Jones attempts the reducto ad absurdum and makes himself ridiculous. Here we find the conventional optimism founded on man's love of hope alone.

Mr. Jones in his activities falls into harder than architecture, housework is ten times harder than architecture, work and harder than architecture, work and

Mr. Jones, in his critique, falls into a general error from the start. He assumes pessimism signifies darkness. Let us correct him. Modern pessi-mism is that recognition of the fallacies we accept as human institutions, such recognition founded on proof, coupled with the belief that present human endeavor is misplaced, and resignation with man's inability to discover the light. Pessimism is courageous thinking free from dogma.

His third point appeals to the gullible, but his logic should tempt no serious thinker. Nietzsche and the rest merely lived ahead of their times. Human history has not been able to escape their conclusions. Moreover, Mr. Jones postulates progress since 3000 B. C., whereas the world has merely changed - - - - we cannot judge whether for the better or worse.

FINALLY, WE READ THAT THERE IS STILL A FIFTY-FIFTY CHANCE. SLAP ON THE BACK! A GLASS OF OLD JOHN! FROM OPTIMISM HE BACKS DOWN TO MELIORISM. HERE IS A NOTE OF INSINCERITY. OH LUCRE!

I enjoy criticism founded on proof, inasmuch as everything is doubtful, including my own beliefs. The opposite may be correct. But it is disgusting to read a critique which begs its own premises.

its own premises.

The optimist is fond of poking fun at the pessimist; his state of mind is one of enjoyment; "gaze on the stars and be happy" is the motto. As a pessimist I love the stars mith an equal ardor. The only difference is one of admission - - - I don't understand them, and am happy in my ignorance and pessimism.

STUDENT OPINION

Dear Mr. Editor:

Three guesses. What is the bane of an architect's life? No, not women, but gripers! We refer to the individual who recently published an article which has made him more unpopular which has made him more unpopular than the people he sought to denounce. Specifically he was striking at the women in the architectural department. There are seven women to some forty men! Picture the balance. We suggest the fellow concern himself with weightier problems. He challenges the mental ability of women to grasp difficult technical problems of architecture. Scientific research has revealed no difference in brains as to the sexes. Women pos-brains as to the sexes. Women possess just as mnny possibilities in architecture, surely as much vision, as much accuracy, as much idea of beauty. The fellow shows he is either afraid of his position in the department or that he is hopelessly old-fashioned.

The architect referred his readers to history as proof of women's in-ability. Is there any history of women in architecture? No! It is started.

As for being physically built for architecture, housework is ten times harder than architectural work and not half as uplifting. Man is forever trying to put a woman in her place "in the home", while he goes on blithely entering any field he may.
Lastly we wish to leave you the picture of the pessimist who rolls his eyes with horror at women architects. Is he afraid of the competition?

His face does not show a scar and one can hardly picture him as the greatest fighter of all time, when talking to him.

When asked what he thought of collegiate boxing, Dempsey was very enthusiastic in proclaiming it to be a wonderful thing, not with the idea of producing world champions but to teach the young mer of the colleges the art of self defense and to keep them in condition for their later life The former champion also pointed out that amateur boxing is much cleaner than professional boxing and that very few injuries ever resulted among amateur boxers.

Dempsey is not only interested in boxing but in any type of sport and he seemed especially interested in college athletics stating that every college should have some form of compulsory athletics for their men students with boxing and wrestling included. light from General Electric floodlighting projectors effect a picture of superb beauty done in the school colors and white. From the air, the tower is identified by the beam from a G-E airway beacon surmounting the floodlighted dome. » » Thus, G-E equipment plays its part in promoting progress and fine appreciation. Back of every G-E product is an organization in which college-trained men are largely responsible for the planning, production, and distribution.

Casey Finnegan Renamed State Athletic Mentor

Remains As Head Of Athletic Department; Shepperd Pleased

ATHLETIC INTEREST MUCH INCREASED

Bison Being Groomed For NCI Pennant During Next Year

C. C. (Casey) Finnegan, director of athletics at North Dakota State college for the past two years, will continue as head of the physical education department and head football coach at the Bison institution for another year according to an annunce.

other year, according to an announcement by President J. H. Shepperd.
Confirmation of the report that arrangements had been made to keep Finnegan as director of athletic affairs at State college is a source of sat-isfaction to college officials, students and alumni. J. E. Davis, chairman of the state board of administration, the state board of administration, stated that that body was well pleased with Finnegan's work since taking over his post at the college and was desirous of retaining the Bison mentor. The action is viewed by athletic board officials as assurance that Finnegan will remain as director of athletics at the college for a long term.

President Shepperd, in commenting on the reappointment, said: "Director Finnegan not only develops a good football team but encourages his as-sociates to develop high class basket-ball teams treated." ball teams, track teams, hockey play-ers and good boxers. He has a larger percentage of the men students taking percentage of the men students taking physical exercise than I have seen here at any time. The relationships throughout the group seem to be very cordial—Casey Finnegan dominates without domineering."

Athletic Interest Increased
Finnegan's reign as athletic chief at this institution has been marked by a decided increase in athletic interest hoth on the part of students.

terest both on the part of students and sports followers. Intramural contests, now at their height at the college have been stimulated to such a degree that a new record, in the a degree that a new record, in the number of men participating, has been established. By the close of the pres-ent school year more than 600 male students will have engaged in one or more forms of physical education. Taking over the reins of head foot-ball coach last fall when the stabletic ball coach last fall when the athletic board was in doubt as to the ad-visability of adding to the burden of athletic director's duties, Finnegan entered the 1929 North Central conference gridiron race, coaching a col-lege football team for the first time, with the smallest squad in recent history of the college and emerged at

The only conference game lost was to the North Dakota Nodaks, 1929 champions. 1929 champions.
No Reserve Trouble Now

With a record freshman squad and most of last year's veterans back Finnegan is expected to have a team this fall that will be one of the outstanding contenders for N. C. I. pennant honors. The matter of reserves, a serious one last fall, will be no problem this fall judging from the squad of more than 45 men which has been reporting daily for spring foot-ball training.
