New Ruling Limits Entries to Eight Teams; District Winners here Mar. 24 and 25 for State Championship

North Dakota Agricultural College will again be host to high school basketball players on Friday and Saturday, March 10 and 11, when the district championship tournament is to be staged at the armory under the supervision of Stanley E. Borleske, director of athletics.

Plans are already well under way for the tournament play although the entries will not be announced until next week. Elaborate plans are being made to entertain the visiting play-An entertainment committee, consisting of four students and one alumni member, has been named to care for the high school basketeers during their stay in the city. They will make arrangements to meet the teams, get hotel reservations, furnish entertainment between games and see that they are supplied with necessities during the tournament play.

Mr. Borleske is arranging to get two competent out of town officials for the tourney but has had no definite replies from the nien he has written as yet. From the brand of ball which the district has been furnishing so far this season the tournament contests should be the best seen in several years. Because of the greatly increased interest in basketball, together with the seemingly strong championship claim of the Fargo team the attendance at the games are expected to be a record breaker.

The Agricultural College will also have the state tournament this year The eight district winners will meet here on March 24 and 25.

"The best Prom in the history of N. D. A. C." is the slogan of the mempects to open the eyes of the most critical when the evening of March thirty-first rolls round. Final arrangements have not, as yet, been wholly completed, and the class is unwilling, as to their work, but rumor ha it that the armory will be adorned and transformed in black and white gala array and the occasion will be given novelty by many new and surprising features known only to the committee in charge. The Junior Prom has always been the biggest affair of the year here and one that a student can look back on and take pleasure in the mere recollection of the splendor of the occasion. In the last three years the Prom has been a rather simple affair due to conditions arising from the war but this year will find the highest peak in elaborate fixings reached by the class of '23 in their endeavor to place a mark in our social world that will never be reached again by their successors.

Day For Filing Nominations For Com.

Names of Candidates must be in the Hands of Comm. of Elections by Noon next Monday

All individuals or organizations wishing to nominate persons for office on the Student Commission must submit nominations either oral or written to the Commissioner of Elections, George Kadlec, before noon of Monday, March 6th. Under the rules of the Constitution of the Student Commission, March 6th is the last day on which nomination can be made. Article III, Section 7, paragraph 2 gives the duty of the Commissioner of Elections on this point as follows: 2. He shall receive the announcement of all candidates for office; determine their elegibility; post all notices of candidacy not later than twelve o'clock on the Monday immediately preceeding the election; prepare ballots and place the same in the hands of the Clerk of Elections at least 10 hours before the opening of the polls; publish full announcements of all candidates in the issue of the weekly Spectrum immediately preceeding the election; at once upon the receipt of the results from the Judges of Election issue to the successful candidates writs of election, and announce the complete results in the issue of the Weekly Spectrum immediately following the election. shall not receive for advertising purposes more than the name of the candidate, the name of the desired office, picture of the candidate, and a statement of the candidate's platform not exceeding one hundred and firty words. All written matter must be presented in typewriting. Under this rule the complete list of candidates must be published in the next issue of the Spectrum which ordinarily goes to press on Friday. To get the list of candidates before the student body before the polls open on Friday the Spectrum will be issued one day earlier next week making its appearance on Thursday.

The nine offices to be filled were named in last week's issue of the Spectrum. Candidates must be pursuing a collegiate course; the candidate for office of president must be in the last half of the Junior year when elected. the candidates for the offices of Publications, Judiciary, Public Speaking and Athletics shall be in the last half of the Sophomore year; and no person shall be a candidate for more than one office at the same time.

SHOULD OUR NAME BE CHANGED?

Is the present name of our college a satisfactory one? Does it convey the right impression of what our institution is?

If not should tradition be disregarded and a new name

Is there a name more representative than the present

There is a movement on foot to change the present name of our college to one that will more truly express what kind of a school exists here. It is the belief that nearly every student in the institution wants the name changed. To make sure on this point the Spectrum is calling for a ballot this week. Read the editorial on "What's In A Name" then indicate in the space below your choice of a name, sign, cut out and drop in Spectrum box in Main Building.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A few days ago a young man who intends to enter college next year spent the week-end with his brother who is a student at the North Dakota Agricultural College. The morning after his arrival they started on a tour of inspection of the college campus and buildings. Proceeding up the main walk the older man pointed out the various buildings and gave their names. Passing be- this year the cost of operation has ex- department of training to the point yond the Administration building he pointed to the Machanics Arts building, Science Hall and the imposing big Chemistry building. Farther on he pointed out Francis Hall, the Vet building and the new Dairy building.

"But," said the younger man, "I don't quite understand." What do you mean by the various names of the buildings you have just pointed out?"

"The names in a general way correspond to the schools or departments in the college and the classes offered are largely confined to the corresponding buildings," the brother replied.

'Is it true then that you have courses in engineering, chemistry and science and literature besides a course in agriculture?" asked the visitor.

"Indeed, yes. The school of Agriculture is but one of eight distinct schools, each offering complete courses in a particular field of knowledge," replied the older brother.

Why, then, do they call this institution an agricultural college?" queried the puzzled visitor.

And the brother was at a loss to explain. If the same question had been put to any student of the college he or she would have been in the same predicament.

In his convocation address on Tuesday morning we believe that President Coulter threw down the gauntlet to the students, faculty and Board of Administration on the matter of a name for this institution. The writer may not have interpreted his remarks aright but his impressions are that there was a question implied and that was: Does the name, North Dakota Agricultural College, tell what we are to the world outside? Or does it mean the same to thousands of others, who hear that name or read it in the newspaper accounts, almost daily, that it meant to the young man who visited our campus and learned with surprise that there were other courses of instruction besides that of agricul-

There has been a growing sentiment among the students of this institution which now amounts to almost unanimity that it is high time we were calling a spade a spade or else continue to be misunderstood as to what kind of an institution of learning this college is.

The act of congress establishing and endowing this college defines the character and scope of instruction as follows: "The leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, in such manner as the legislature of the state may respectively prescribe, in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in

In plain terms it was thus decreed by the highest legislative authority, both state and national, that the college should become the great school of science and technology of the state of North Dakota for the training of its young men and women in the indus-

And, forthwith, they proceeded to name it the North Dakota Agricultural College, restricting the understanding of the nature of the training offered by the qualifying adjective, agricultural. And like a child with an unfortunate name imposed on it when too young to resist we have grown up and accepted the unfortunate title stoically.

But there is the matter of tradition and sentiment. We have been known so long as N. D. A. C. that a sort of holiness seems to gather round the name and forbid any attempts to change it. Γradition is a mighty fine thing but also has its limitations. Tradition has made China what she is today—the most backward of all nations. If Columbus had heeded the traditions of the ancients and been content to stay at home the bison and the Redman would be roaming North Dakota's prairies today. Through the wise provision of the early legislators of this state our college was given a large tract of land upon which we could expand as the growth of the institution warranted. But these same farsighted men imposed a name upon the college which today is hampering its possibilities for expansion and growth because of its restrictive

The teaching of agriculture in all its phases is and should be one of the main objects of this institution for the very foundations of this commonwealth rest upon the success or failure of its majority population, the agriculturalists. But what of mechanic arts and other industrial pursuits for which we offer training in our college? Are they to go unknown because of a name that is a misnomer?

The growth of North Dakota Agricultural College is not keeping pace with that of the state. We have the equipment and teaching personnel. Can it be that the trouble lies in a name?

We think it is. Let's tear down the old antiquated sign that has been so long misleading and adopt one that will either express more fully the true character of our school or at least not be

What Is Water Japan?

JAPAN—not the country but a metal-coating varnish —and your morning bottle of milk. Totally unlike, yet associated!

Ordinary japan consists of a tough, rubbery, tar-like "base" and a highly inflammable "solvent." The solvent dilutes the base so that the metal may be coated with it easily. The presence of the solvent involves considerable fire risk, especially in the baking oven.

Milk is a watery fluid containing suspended particles of butter fat, so small that one needs the ultra-microscope to detect them. An insoluble substance held permanently in suspension in a liquid in this manner is in "colloidal suspension."

The principle of colloidal suspension as demonstrated in milk was applied by the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company to develop Water Japan. In this compound the particles of japan base are colloidally suspended in water. The fire risk vanishes.

So the analysis of milk has pointed the way to a safe japan. Again Nature serves industry.

Connected with the common things around us are many principles which may be applied to the uses of industry with revolutionary results. As Hamlet said, "There are more things in Heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

A. C. Athletics To Be Known As Bissons

New Name for Athletic Teams Chosen by Members of N. D. Club

At last week's meeting of the letter men of the Agricultural College, the new N. D. club completed its organtzation. The men voted on and approved the temporary and dummy constitution submitted to them by the committee in charge. Committees were appointed to look into the matter of membership pins and they will submit their plans and prices at the next meeting. The entertainment and taking care of the visiting high school basket ball teams in the coming district and state tournaments here will be in the hands of the letter men, and the committees in charge are going to see that the college makes a good impression on the youngsters. The members officially voted Athletic Director Stanley E. Borleske, and Assistant Coach Fenwick H. Watkins as honorary members of the club and advisors for the coming year.

The college athletic teams in the future will no longer be famed as the fighting Aggies but as the Bisons, the new and official name adopted by the N. D. club to be taken by our teams from now on. The name will no doubt sound queer to us for a while, but when we once become used to its usage we can be proud to have our teams play under the name of the staunchest and most persistant fighters of the plains in the early days. The name of Bison has been incorporated in our natural history and college song and though "Hushed upon the boundless prairies, is the bison's thundering tread," its dauntless spirit and domination will still continue to be carried throughout our annals and the future to come, by N. D. A. C. athletic teams. Through custom and imitation most of the colleges are known by some animal, flower, or bird in which they find traits to admire, as our sister school up the river. This week will undoubtedly prove conclusively to U. N. D. how big a flickertail looks under the Outweighed several pounds to the man the Aggie tossers could only of fer a vain fight to the plunging driving tactics of the larger team. As i was, although outweighed and, greater part of the time, outfought the Aggies might have captured both contests, had the team not complete lost its shooting ability. The team which had been scoring sensationally in previous contests, was unable to find the hoop. Captain Sivertson scored two field goals in the first contest and did not connect once in the second game. Hildre, who had just started o earn a named as a scorer, was un able to connect during the whole series. This hard-working center's play fell down considerably in the first contest and Coach Watkins start ed Murphy in the second contest.

Except in the first half of the sec ond contest, when the Aggies matched field goal for field goal with the University, the story of the series is lar-gely a tale of Flem scoring free throws to balance the field counters of the University five. Flem started the scoring in the first game and counted three free tosses before Burkman opened for the University with a Bill Bina's million-and-a-half dollar field goal. He scored another before while Busdicker and Sinclair each scrap if I had to come all the way made one. Wilson made the first field goal for the Aggies and Sivertson came through with a long field goal short time later. In the meantime Flem kept counting regularily on free throws so the first half ended with a knotted tally, 13 to 13.

In the second half Burkman started ed by him, he contributed 31 from the out by missing a free throw. Although he scored three goals from the field and played a sensational game, Burkman had miserable luck with his fou shooting. He missed more than half of his tries. Flem again counted first in the second half, putting the Aggies in the lead. He scored twice more be fore the University counted. Sinclair then scored his second field goal and the Bison margin looked small. Trow bridge received the ball on a perfect pass play and added a double counter making the count 23 for the Aggies Burkman got a free throw and made Agnes Parsons, formerly a student the visitors' total 21. Plan For New Course I Journalism Complete

Open to all Students having Completed Freshman Composition

The new course in the elements of newswriting will given during the spring term by R. O. Nafziger of the college publicity staff in Room Science Hall, Monday, Wednesday Friday at 2:55. Completion of lege freshman composition is prerequisite. Typical newspapers from all parts of the country are being ordered for use of the class. From the interest indicated the class will be a popular one. It will use a well known text by Professor Bleyer of Wisconsin, and will turn out local news stories as part of its weekly program, many of which, it is expected, will be published in The Spectrum and in the news 0 0 0 0 service of the college.
