O. A. C. Barometer
On The North
Dakota Contract

We have just been informed that the forensic council has decided to break forensic relations with the North Dakota Agricultural College, which has existed between the two institutions since the signing of a two-year contract last fall. Members of the council feel that the large cost of sending a team to North Dakota can not be met with the funds available this year, without seriously curtailing forensic work at home.

The Barometer believes that the forensic council acted wisely in this matter, for activities at home should not be sacrificed for a far-off debate. The North Dakota contract could have justified itself only by bringing about an increase of interest in forensics among our fellow students. The hope that interest in debate would be appreciable increased was the chief reason for signing the contract. But it did not create enthusiasm as expected. The amount of interest among students in a debate can be indicated only by the number trying out for that debate. Only two more tried out for the North Dakota debate last year for the triangular debate with W. S. C. and the University of Idaho the year before. This meager increase in the turnout for debate does not justify the cost of a debate with North Dakota.

We recognize the difficulties involved in breaking a contract that has been in force for a year. But the interest of the institution as a whole must be considered first, and the present plan of the forensic council to promote intermural debate and oratory will in all probability bring greater returns for the money set aside for forensics. —E. ALPHA ZETA HOLDS
ANNUAL SMOKER

The Alpha Zeta Fraternity held their annual smoker in the Armory last Thursday evening. The purpose of this smoker is to bring together the agricultural students, members of the faculty, and the station staff. This year they were especially fortunate in having the county agents and field men as guests. There was an attendance of nearly a hundred.

The early part of the evening was spent in "mixing" and after an hour or so everyone felt as if he had been life-long friends with the rest. Refreshments were served about 9:30, followed by a program of short addresses. Raymond Reierson acquitted himself of the position as toastmaster in a very creditable manner. President Ladd responded to "A Worthy Aim." He emphasized the value of "stick-to-it-iveness." His talk was well pointed and pithy and very well received. Schollander was introduced in truthful but hardly complimentary terms. He gave the purpose and history of the fraternity, and made it very interesting by introducing humorous stories having a faint connection. Mr. W. R. A. Porter of the Extension department spoke on "An Alumnus' Point of View." He prophesied that the future would show a large percentage of agricultural college graduates engaged in farming. Dean Waldron's address was on "Globigerina Ooze." The audience was astounded to learn that such an imposing word was merely the name of a microscopic chalk-forming animal. Exercising his wonderful nautical vocabulary, the Dean talked of our life's voyage and was listened to with utmost concern. Mr. Hughes, an alumnus of the A. C. and editor of "The Farm, Stock, and Home", gave a very fine talk on friendship. He said: "There are no friendships which ask so little of you as those you make in college. There are no friendships to which you should give so much as college friendships." Prof. Doryland gave a very fitting finishing address. He said that there was only one road to Success,—and the signboard read "Work". This concluded the program and everybody left, imbued with fresh "pep."

ONE OF BEST SPORTS

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 6.—Dr. Chas. H. Mayo, the famous surgeon of Rochester, Minn., regarded by many as the most distinguished of all the 1,800 surgeons assembled here, declared in an interview that football and baseball were the best of American sports.

"College football is one of the best sports you could provide for the athletic development of young men," said Dr. Mayo. "The well-rounded-out life needs athletic exercise, and I think that by their attention to athletics the big colleges, with their careful training system are doing a great good."
