The building expresses the relationship between the farmer and government services provided by the FSA (Farm Service Agency). The perception of each other creates a dialogue of two forms. On one side is the authority, on the other the public.

Mending this relationship, each side is working together to form a whole. The artisan and the organic share a personal exchange in one space, and develop a newfound respect for one another.