

These images, taken from various locations along the North Shore of Lake Superior, further embody the notion that no matter how humans intervene with the natural world, mother nature will always eventually take back ownership of the land.

