According to the U.S. Census, "The cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde are some of the most important times of the day. They were occupied from about 600 to 1300 AD, during which time the population of Mesa Verde increased from less than 150 rooms to over 1000 rooms. The structures ranged in size from one-room storage units to villages of more than 150 rooms. While still farming the mesa tops, they were fishing and hunting in the area. The cliff dwellings were occupied by people in such an environment.
