Through an architectural design project, can desolate industrial buildings be re-functioned to become a productive and habitable part of a community, while also interpreting its historical significance?