

Homecoming Queen Contest Rules Change

At a recent meeting of the Student Senate, a new plan was devised for the selection of the Homecoming Queen of NDAC. The new rules call for one candidate from each of the six sororities on campus plus one from Ceres Hall and one candidate from the New Womens Dormitory. The resident hall candidates may not belong to a sorority.

The new procedure will limit the number of possible candidates to eight. Under the old system any organization could sponsor a girl; and, because of this, it was necessary to hold a preliminary elimination to choose the eight leading candidates out of which the students elected the queen and her attendants.

Under the new plan, fraternities will not sponsor the girls, as such is to be done exclusively by the candidates organization.

NDSC's 1954 homecoming has been scheduled for October 16.

The parade will be held on Saturday morning, with all judging taking place at that time. All organizations are urged to enter either a float or a car in the parade.

Organizations which entered the parade last year will receive entry blanks for this year's event. Any other group interested in entering should call parade marshal Gary Gibbons at 2-1632 or 2-3158, or address correspondence to him at 1303 13th Street North.

The deadline for entries is 5 p.m., October 8. Floats entered after the deadline will be subject to disqualification.

A prize of ten dollars plus two tickets to the 1954 homecoming dance will be given to the NDSC student who submits the best entry for the homecoming theme contest.

The winning theme will serve as the motto for the NDSC's homecoming this year.

The theme contest will close Friday, October 1 at 6 p.m. All entries should be left at the office of the student union director.

NDSC's Bison will face the Jackrabbits of South Dakota State for the annual homecoming football game this year.

Paul Hanson To Play At Dance Tomorrow

Lets all attend the all-college dance to be held Saturday evening, Sept. 25, at the Memorial Student Union Ballroom.

Music will be provided by Paul Hanson and his orchestra. The dance, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, will begin at 9:00 P.M. and continue until midnight.

Stag or drag, lets turn out to renew old and make new acquaintances with your fellow students.

Welcome, Freshmen

By Norman Reinke

On behalf of the Spectrum I would like to take this opportunity to welcome the freshman class of 1954 to the campus of North Dakota State College. But let's also reflect a few moments on what brought you to our campus and why you have elected to devote the next few years of your life to the pursuit of a higher education.

What is a freshman? The majority of us consider a freshman as a new and somewhat bewildered student whose class card lists primarily 100 courses, and whose main activity seems to be the pursuit of Bison booster buttons and the avoidance of freshman beanies. These may often be genuine characteristics, but a better definition is found on a somewhat higher plain.

A freshman is exactly that—a freshman. A new student entering our generally ivoryless domain prepared for a four year battle with the forces of education. His weapons are aptitude, tenacity, and time. Success or failure in his quest depends directly on the manner in which he uses these weapons.

The next few weeks could well be the most important period of a freshman's tenure at NDSC. In this time he will probably establish the basic pattern of study habits he'll use during his entire college career.

When a freshman has developed the twin habits of attendance and attention, when he has learned to divide his time properly between the book and the ball; he is well on the way to success in his search for education.

Why is a freshman? What forces have brought this large body of men and women from different parts of the state and nation together to form the freshman class of '54? They know the individual hopes and aspirations that motivate them. But individual desire is not enough to establish such a group. Each new student has a quiet, but very conspicuous partner helping him to attain his goal. This partner is the State of North Dakota. The contributions made by each partner are easily recognized.

The freshman contributes the time. North Dakota furnished the money, the plant, and the instruction. Seem unfair? I think so. But if you, the individual freshman, will extend yourself to take full advantage of all that is offered you, and apply yourself to the best of your ability, the State of North Dakota will be satisfied.

Introducing The 1954 Bison

Pictured above are this year's entry in the North Central conference football derby from North Dakota State. Hampered by lack of numbers and injuries, the Herd may not sweep to the title this year; but the tremendous spirit that they show promises much for the future.

Sherwood, Baker Represent AC At NSA Congress

Representing NDAC at the seventh annual National Student Association Convention at Iowa State College in Ames, Iowa, this summer were Judy Sherwood and Renee Baker. They were sponsored by the Student Senate.

The convention, which was attended by 500 students from the United States and countries from abroad, discussed problems and policies concerning students in relation with the school, administration and other schools.

Among the topics discussed included segregation in colleges, academic freedom, student's rights, exchange with Russia and other countries from abroad, rights of the student press and travel.

NSA, at their sixth annual Congress endorsed for passage a bill to enable students to make more than $600 a year and still be deductible as dependents of their parents. The lobby group of the NSA took the amendment to Washington, where it was introduced to various Senators and Representatives and was later passed by both groups.

NDAC is in the Minnesota-Dakota region. Other schools in the region include Augsburg College, Carleton College, College of St. Benedict, College of St. Catherine, College of St. Thomas, Concordia College, University of Minnesota and St. John's University.

Lily Pons Concert To Open Season's Lyceum Series Tonight In Fieldhouse

By Keith Amundson

Lily Pons, one of the finest musical attractions ever to appear at NDSC; will open this year's lyceum program tonight with a concert at the fieldhouse at 8.

All students who did not receive tickets to the concert during registration may do so by presenting their activity tickets at the Little Country Theater office today.

One of the greatest coloraturas of all time, Miss Pons has had a long and brilliant career spanning more than a quarter of a century.

She began singing quite by accident during the first world war, and since then has come to be one of the most widely admired musical personalities of all time.

Since making her American debut in 1931, Miss Pons has taken the nation by storm. She has opened the season of the Metropolitan Opera several times and has broken many concert attendance records.

During world war two, Miss Pons entertained American troops all over the world and thus brought her magical voice to the ears of people all over the globe.

In the past few years, Miss Pons has devoted her time mainly to concert tours and has made several appearances with the San Francisco opera company.

Miss Pons' appearance here in Fargo holds great promise for the music lovers of the campus and area. How often is it that a great star known the world over appears in Fargo-Moorhead?

CASH AND CARRY FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE NO PARKING PROBLEMS

First School Day Confuses Q. Japi; Sleeps In Barn

The cab pulled up in front of old Main and Q. Japi Kutpepper alighted, handed the cabbie 60 cents and told him to keep the change. Ahh, evidently a man of the world.

Q. Japi leaped the retaining bar at the edge of the sidewalk and placed his two duffel bags carefully on the ground. Where do I go from here, he wondered to himself.

Just then a smiling fellow in striped overalls came up to him, stuck out his hand and hollered: "Hi cat, welcome to state." All frosh hustle over to the library chop-chop.

A nice fellow thought Japi to himself. Say, that must be the library over there. Well, I guess I better get into the swing of things.

On his way over Japi happened to stumble over several people laying on the lawn. College folk out sunning themselves.

Finally in the library, Japi found himself lost in a welter of humanity. People rushing this way and that, no one stopped to talk to him or to help him out.

Finally he spotted a large line and fell in. In two hours he found himself in front of the desk. Sign up here for the US Army the sign on the table read. "Oh, my, what would mother say," Japi wondered as he fled away in terror.

An hour later, Japi found himself sitting at a table with other freshmen signing endless forms and papers. Man, what is all this.

At five o'clock Japi suddenly found himself alone in the library with a card in his hand stating, report to the barracks for the night. Placing the two duffel bags on his shoulder, Japi wandered about the campus into the wee hours looking for the barracks.

He was violently ejected from two women's dorms and found that the doors of most of the buildings were locked for the night.

Finally, he found himself wandering into a barn on the edge of the campus. Could this be the barracks he wondered.

No, it wasn't the barracks. It was one of the stock barns of the experiment station. Japi didn't stay awake long enough to find out. Spotting a likely looking hay pile, he settled into it with a sigh and pulled his lumber jacket tightly around him.

So this is college, he thought to himself just before he dozed off.

Lights - Lights - Lights

Frosh Tangles With Sam Ketchum, Lights With 1000 Watt Bulbs

"This must stop! It can't go on — turn off the lights!" The racking sobs, could be heard through the closed door, they reached the ears of the upperclassman. He hesitated, then thinking of the homesick, lonely boy on the other side of the door, he put a sympathetic smile on his face and opened the door.

"Need a friend to talk to, son?"

"Uh-uh, I'm not lonesome."

"Whatza matter kid, first time away from home? The lines at the bookstore get too much for you? Couldn't you find a place to sit down at the Bison Room? Profs give you assignments already?"

"No, I'm not new here, I'm a junior. I'm just frustrated. It never happened to me before—never, I tell you. I can't stand it—a whole year—I'll never last." His further utterances were lost in incoherent sputterings.

"If you're not lonesome, what brought on the hysterics? Why the crying? What happend? If you were taking pharmacy I could understand, but why, why?" His voice ended in a shrill screech as he too collapsed to the floor.

"Just got back to school," mumbled the red-eyed one. "Just saw my girl, first time since last spring. Its too horrible to talk about." His voice was lost in the deep hollow of his shaking, shuddering shoulders.

"Whatza deal? Did she have a new boyfriend? Have a home permanent during the summer? Was she wearing the new Bermuda shorts and you discovered she is bowlegged? What is it?"

"No, SHE is all right, same as ever, only—only, well, we went to a movie and held hands real cozy just like always. Then we went back to the dorm, the NEW girls dorm. We were going to park in back of Ceres hall, but there wasn't any place to park. The janitors and housekeepers park their cars in the two feet of space available—so no place to park.

"Then we drove around the campus for about ten minutes and we just couldn't find a place without a No Parking sign. Finally we found a spot in the cow arena parking lot. I was just going to put my arms around her and kiss her when—"

"Yes, yes, go on. Don't start blubbering again just when it is getting interesting. Dry your tears on the bedspread, you're getting my neck all wet."

"Sam Ketchum came and told us to move on. I walked her the two blocks to the dorm thinking about the moment we could have alone inside the dorm door.

But there were lights all over the place. Spot lights with thousand watt bulbs. And no entry way to the dorm—just an open porch all lit up with more spotlight and then the main lounge. Big lights, small lights, spotlights, and no entry way with quiet corners.

I didn't kiss her goodnite tonite. I'll never kiss her

Bison, Vikings Tie NCC Opener

By Hal Miller amidst a fairly silent gathering at Dacotah Field. The North Dakota State Bison, Augustana, showing a good thwarted in attempt after attempt, were held to a 6 to 6 draw by the Augustana Vikings Friday night the Herd moved back to end the scoring just after the beginning of the second period.

It was the Bison's first North Central Conference tilt. They travel to Cedar Falls, Iowa to meet the Iowa State Teachers' Panthers this weekend.

The shining lights of the contest for the Bison were Jim DeRosier at fullback, Floyd Wagner at halfback and Ivan Lang at end. The punting of Dale Wallentine was good.

Phil Nelson and Mike Dahl were the Viking sparkplugs, but were handicapped behind a rather mediocre line.

We suggest reading the column directly above this for our pet peeve about State.

Fresh Back . . . Roses And Thorns School Spirit Putrid

By "Ham" Fisher

After a two year absence from the ivy halls of NDAC I must say things certainly have changed around here—some for the better, some for the worse.

A bouquet of roses to the person who thought of moving that smelly barn from behind the field house, at least our local sports heroes will be able to breathe some fresh air.

The building program has done wonders for the campus. The union especially tops every other union I have ever seen (and with 5c coffee I can see why it's so popular)!!

Speaking of the union, I think Paul (Brando) Werner must be managing the Bison Room. Could there be some truth in this?

Thorns to the meager band of football fans who attended the NDAC-Augustana game. Such a sad case of non support has never been seen in a divorce court.

Something will have to be done about this before the eskimoes up at NDU (Igloo Tech) hear about it. Maybe he solution would be a pep rally—who knows?

Well, the Bison are on the road this weekend and we're all pulling for a victory—let's just hope the ISTC fans give the Panthers worse support than we gave our team—that'd drop Notre Dame from the first fifty.

Let's show our new coaches and ball players a little noise next time. If you have a little during the game I'm sure you won't get cold—(bring along the girl friend and a blanket anyway).

Bison Frosh Squad Shows Scrap, Spirit

By Jim Feeney & Jim Harmon

From St. Mary's Central of Bismarck, North Dakota, the Baby Bison have Richard Tschider at a quarterback post. An All-State choice last year, Tschider played on the 1951 Class A Championship team and on the club that was beaten out for championship honors by Shanley of Fargo. St. Mary's was coached by Dave O'Brien, present head coach of States' freshman football team.

Commenting on the freshman team, Tschider says, "We've got a team that likes to play ball. We've got the material and the depth to go places."

From the Minnesota side of the river comes Duane Beaver of Detroit Lakes. Beaver, a 6'4", 200 pound end was an All-Conference selection in the Lake Region Conference.

A three year football letterman, Duane played end on the Laker team that was picked as the top Minnesota high school football team by most scribes and sports writers of the state. Concerning the Frosh squad, Beaver says, "It's going to be a great team. Some of the freshmen are varsity material right now."

James Noland of Hopkins, Minnesota follows his brother Benny Noland to North Dakota State. Noland played center for Hopkins three years in a row. An All-Conference selection in the Lakes Conference his junior and senior years, he was elected to the Minnesota North-South All-Star high school football squad this spring.

Noland played nearly the whole game for the victorious North squad. Of this years Baby Bison, Noland says, "We've got a great bunch of ball players as well as a great bunch of guys. That's what it takes to make a real team."

Truman Kingsley, six foot, 200 pound tackle from Casselton, North Dakota, says "Once we're organized, we're really going to rool. Look out we're moving."

Kingsley won four letters in football at Casselton, playing on the Minn-Dak Conference Championship team three of those four years. He was an All-conference tackle in his senior year.
