Miss Monitor Visits NDSU 25 Million People Listen

North Dakota State University was featured on NBC's weekend Monitor December 9-11.

Each weekend Miss Monitor visits a college or university campus in the United States by means of tape recording. The national broadcast was taped in New York and played from a New York studio. An estimated 25 million people heard the program.

Her visit to NDSU was arranged by Jan Kippen of WDAY and Roy Peterson, promotion manager for WDAY. Both are graduates of NDSU. Information used in the seven one minute spot announcements was furnished by the Communications department.

NDSU was featured as the nation's newest university. Spot announcements started at 8:30 p.m.

Friday night with the last one heard Sunday evening.

Miss Monitor told the nation about the name change campaign, Homecoming, Sharivar, Bison Brevities and the Military Ball. She mentioned that NDSU had the oldest department of paint chemistry in the world.

Emphasizing the School of Agriculture, she stated that the livestock judging team placed first in the nation.

Monitor played the six most popular songs of KDSC, besides the NDSU concert choir's recording of "Go Tell It On The Mountain."

These spot announcements were taped and NBC will send them back to WDAY.

Students interested in working on the Spectrum as reporters or typists report to the Spectrum office on Tuesday, Dec. 20 at 6:30 p.m. Reporters from ALL organizations including fraternities and sororities are asked to meet at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 20 in the Spectrum office. Letter to the Editor . . . The Spectrum Asked:

Dear Editor:

Permit me to use you as a go-betweener. My remarks concern mainly a 'letter to the Editor' in the December 2 issue of your noble publication.

According to one Miss Judi Amoth we should attend all convocations for their educational value. I believe she even supports the theory that closing the rest of the campus will force everyone into Festival Hall.

I will agree that convos do contain some educational value. But doesn't almost everything? Her key statement was that "students go only to convocations that interest them." This is in fact the truth of the whole matter.

I will stand upon the fact that anyone who is not interested in a certain convo will draw more knowledge from the activity which has allured his or her attention than from an uninteresting session at Festival Hall.

Miss Amoth must realize that there are many good reasons for missing a convocation other than a cup of coffee. Therefore if she thinks that closing the union during convocations will increase attendance to a large degree let me suggest that she is a little mixed up, and if that doesn't do the trick I will say that she is out-to-lunch!

I am not proposing that convocations are not worth attending, since we do have many fine programs during the year. However the quality of the convocation will influence the attendance more than the closing of the union.

JON GREENLEY
Teedoff Student

Dear Miss Amoth:

I just read your letter to the editor of the SPECTRUM and may I state that as a matter of policy the library always closes during convocation.

We always have and as far as I am concerned, we always will, but it so happens that at the last convocation we had some 130 military students taking qualifying examinations for advanced ROTC and it was entirely impractical to close the library with that many students who had to be in. Otherwise I definitely agree with your point of view.

H. DEAN STALLINGS,
Librarian

Editor's Note: Why should the library or the Bison and State Rooms be closed during convocations? By the time we're college students we should be able to decide for ourselves just what we should do at that hour.

Let's make our OWN decisions.

No, I think we get better qualified leaders through the national conventions than we would through the national primary, although it isn't as directly democratic. I think the general public is not as well informed concerning the qualifications of the candidates as would be the general public more say in the primary.

Yes, a national primary would tend to give the individual more voice in the selection of presidential candidates and hence nothing would be solved. Effective measures would have to be taken to insure the people that the best qualified men are placed in the primary.

I had never really thought of this. But I think it might be just as effective to have national primaries. State primaries seem to be efficient enough. This way, the "man of the street" would have a more direct say than they have now.

That depends on how the primary election is run. If there were a limited number of possible candidates, okay. Otherwise the people aren't well enough informed of the qualifications of all the candidates.

For you and your membership to have taken the time and effort to personally sign a letter of thanks with 53 signatures is an act which is conspicuous in its unique display of appreciation for the small efforts which we of KVOX put forth in support of the name change. "A BLUE KEY MEMBER SPEAKS"

CONFESSIONS OF A STUDENT—By Byron Berntson

So the name has been changed. I worked hard for it, and now that it has happened, I should be bubbling over with joy and enthusiasm. But I'm not. I feel out of place in a university. In my mind is an idea of what the real university student should be, and I don't fit the part. There should be more changes than the name alone. Shouldn't change as well? How can I do this?

My idea of a university student is a student who is vitally concerned for his education and its effect on his whole life. I hear people constantly speaking about "getting educated." I know the professors and facilities are here to give me an education, but this almost implies a passive reception of education on my part.

I must actively seek education. My education is my own responsibility, and no one else can do it for me. Regardless of how much my parents, friends and society in general push me, my education is my job. The university student also assumes a questioning attitude toward that which is presented in the classroom. I have blindly accepted everything my professors say as the absolute truth.

Where will this lead me? I will end up with a head crammed full of so-called truth, which has no meaning for me. If I choose to seek an education in this way, it will only further my ignorance. Of course I can still get a college degree which will satisfy society, but what will it mean to me? Now is the time for me to begin asking questions of my professors and discussing points with them after a lecture.

But I know that some of the courses I am taking will have no meaning no matter how hard I work at it. Maybe the professor's lectures are poor, there is no class discussion allowed, the text is poorly written, or the whole course is purposeless. When I sit with the students in the Union, I complain over and over again about the course, but I don't do anything about it.

A university student would be concerned about this situation and see the proper authorities with his constructive criticism. I am going to talk to the chairman of the department or the dean of the school to see if something can be done.

A university student also takes full advantage of the intellectual atmosphere which prevails on and near the university campus. There are many opportunities which I have failed to take advantage of. There is a series of outstanding lyceums on this campus every year. Some of the finest talent from the worlds of music and drama is available to me.

Topics which are of great interest to all students are discussed every week at the YMCA faculty-student noon luncheon. This is a real opportunity for me to hash over ideas with other students and the members of the faculty.

And of course there are many events in the Fargo-Moorhead community which would add immeasurably to my education, such as art shows, concerts, dramatic productions, and speech by well-known personalities. As I see it now, all these things, and many more, should be added to my curriculum as a part of my education.

But what does the future hold for me if I do assume the attitude of a university student? I hope that my life will be more than a nine-to-five job and evenings in front of the TV. Of if I have money, I hope there are more worthwhile ways to spend it than wasting it on social climbing with the country club set. My education has taught me that there are better things in life.

Now, to be a university student!

ARE YOU I?

This airplane is actually a flying classroom. The course taught in it is Air Navigation, under real conditions. The students are young men who have been selected as possible future leaders of the Aerospace Team. Graduation after 32 weeks of training will win each of the students the honored silver wings of an Air Force Navigator and an Officer's Commission.

For certain young men, this training can open the way to a bright career of executive potential. Right now the Air Force is scoring impressive technological advances in the fields of navigation, guidance and tracking, electronics and radar. And here is where its highly trained and experienced Navigators will be expected to take over command positions of increasing responsibility.

To qualify for Navigator training as an Aviation Cadet, you must be between 19 and 26½—single, healthy and intelligent. And you must want to build an exciting, interesting career in the Aerospace Age. If you think you measure up, we'd like to talk to you at the nearest Air Force Recruiting Office. DECK THE HALLS

The time has come to make out our Christmas shopping lists, for Christmas will be upon us quicker than you can say Jack Robinson. (Have you ever wondered, incidentally, about the origin of this interesting phrase "Quicker than you can say Jack Robinson"? Well sir, the original phrase was French—"Plus vite que de dire Jacques Robespierre." Jack Robinson is, as everyone knows, an anglicization of Jacques Robespierre who was, as everyone knows, the famous figure from the French Revolution who, as everyone knows, got murdered in his bath by Danton, Murat, Caligula, and Aaron Burr.

(The reason people started saying "Quicker than you can say Jacques Robespierre (or Jack Robinson as he is called in English-speaking countries)" is quite an interesting little story. It seems that Robespierre's wife, Georges Sand, got word of the plot to murder her husband in his bath. All she had to do to save his life was call his name and warn him. But, alas, quicker than she could say Jacques Robespierre, she received a telegram from her old friend Frederic Chopin who was down in Majorca setting lyrics to his immortal "Warsaw Concerto." Chopin said he needed Georges Sand's help desperately because he could not find a rhyme for "Warsaw." Naturally, Georges Sand could not refuse such an urgent request.

(Well sir, Georges Sand went traipsing off to Majorca, but before she left she told her little daughter Walter that some bad men were coming to murder daddy in his bath, and she instructed Walter to shout Robespierre's name when the bad men arrived. But Walter, alas, had been sea-bathing that morning on the Riviera, and she had come home loaded with sea shells and salt water taffy, and when the bad men came to murder Robespierre, Walter, alas, was chewing a big wad of salt water taffy and could not get her mouth open in time to shout a warning. Robespierre, alas, was murdered quicker than you could shout Jacques Robespierre (or Jack Robinson as he is called in the English-speaking countries).

(There is, I am pleased to report, one small note of cheer in this grisly tale. When Georges Sand got to Majorca where Chopin was setting lyrics to his immortal "Warsaw Concerto," she was happily able to help him find a rhyme for "Warsaw," as everyone knows who has heard those haunting lyrics:

*In the fair town of Warsaw,
Which Napoleon's horse saw,
Singing cockles and mussels, alive alive o!*

Yes, Virginia, there is...

But I digress.

We were speaking of Christmas gifts. What we all strive to do at Christmas is, of course, to find unusual, offbeat, different gifts for our friends. May I suggest then a carton of Marlboro Cigarettes?

What? You are astonished? You had not thought of Marlboros as unusual, offbeat, different? You had regarded them as familiar, reliable smokes whose excellence varied not one jot or tittle from year to year?

True. All true. But at the same time, Marlboros are unusual, offbeat, different, because every time you try one, it's like the first time. The flavor never pulls, never gets hackneyed. Each Marlboro is a fresh delight, a pristine pleasure, and if you want all your friends to clap their hands and exclaim, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!" you will put them at the very top of your Christmas list.

...AND HE'LL BREAK HIS NECK TO DO IT"

In 1958 when Bill Ebben was only a few months away from his engineering degree at the University of Detroit, he was in touch with 15 prospective employers.

He chose the Michigan Bell Telephone Company because: "This company offered the kind of engineering management opportunity I wanted—and they weren't kidding."

One of Bill's first assignments was a survey of Michigan Bell's big Central District to find out how long available building space could accommodate the switching equipment required by rapid telephone growth. "I wasn't given any instruction," Bill says, "I was just told to do the job."

So Bill did it. His report became the guide for planning and budgeting future construction.

On his next move, Bill proved he could handle supervisory responsibility. He was sent to head up a group of seven engineers to design a new long distance switching center for Saginaw, Michigan—a $4,000,000 engineering project.

Today, Bill is on the staff of Michigan Bell's Program Engineer. He's working on a system for mechanized control of telephone construction costs.

How does Bill feel about his job? "Give a man a tough job and a chance to go somewhere—and he'll break his neck to do it. Of course, I don't think I'm going to be running the business next year—but I'm getting every opportunity to hit the top. You don't worry about opportunity here—you worry about whether you're as big as the job."

If you're a man like Bill Ebben, a man who can size up a job, figure out what needs to be done, and then do it—then you should get in touch with one of the Bell Companies. Visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information.

SU Seniors Receive Commissions

The "Y" Noon Luncheon is starting a new series of discussions and lectures on The Image of the On-going University. The luncheon meets in the small dining room in Ceres Hall every Thursday noon. The new series will begin on Thursday, Jan. 5.

The series will include discussions on the development and purpose of the university. "This, it is hoped, may provide insight into the mission and sense of purpose of student-faculty responsibility to the university," said Leo Johnson, director of the "Y".

Points will be discussed in direct application to NDSU in an effort to discover where NDSU can work best to improve itself.

In the first session, Dr. Hale Aarnes, chairman of education, will speak on the development of the land grant university. The following week Dr. Franz Rathman, organic chemistry, will speak on the themes in the growth of SU.

Later in the quarter Dean Seth Russell, School of Arts and Science, will speak. Speakers from other colleges within the university will also lecture.

A new rule was adopted at Monday's Board meeting concerning basketball. The clock will be stopped for free throws only during the last five minutes of the game. Also, there will be only one time out per quarter for each team. The time outs are not accumulative. This rule was passed to prevent the leading team from stalling throughout the game and it is felt that by not stalling, the game will be more interesting and equal.

There are thirty-seven teams participating in intra-mural basketball and they are divided into the following six brackets.

BRACKET I

Bison Grapplers Lose To Moorhead For First '60 Loss

Wrestlers at North Dakota State University met their toughest opponent of the young season last Tuesday night when they lost to the Moorhead State College wrestling team 20-10.

The wrestling match followed the Bison-Moorhead State basketball game in the NDSU Fieldhouse.

The Bison were undefeated before the MS match as they posted their second 1960 victory last week, beating Valley City State Teachers 26-10.

In the Moorhead State match these are the results for the Bison according to weight categories: 123—Bob Holmes—tied, 130—Glenn Holte—pinned, 137—Gary Yost—was decided, 147—Einar Bredeson—was decided, 157—Frank Johnson—won by decision, 167—Dennis Whitson—was decided, 177—Paul Habighorst—was decided, and heavyweight—Dave Schindler—was decided.

This weekend the NDSU squad will travel to Omaha for a quadrangular meet against Omaha U, Graceland College and Northwest Missouri.

BISON BITS

By Sherry Bassin

The North Dakota State University Bison hosted the Moorhead State College Dragons last Tuesday and dropped a 71-63 decision to their inter-city rivals.

The lead changed hands a number of times until finally the Dragons opened a nine point lead and the Bison really never threatened again.

Wayne Langen who was dressed for only the second time this year picked up 20 points while brother Lynden netted 12.

The Bison played the game without the service of All-American Marv Bachmeier who was out with tonsillitis. It was the first time since Bachmeier's varsity debut that he hasn't suited up for a Bison encounter.

There is no doubt that the Bison didn't deserve to beat the Dragons but then again they lost the game for themselves. It was mistakes, that they will learn to overcome with experience, that beat them.

Before the season started, it was known that the Bison had a potential winner but were lacking one commodity—experience.

Everyone was aware of the fact that coach B. C. "Charlie" Bentson was working with talented but relatively inexperienced performers at the vital front line positions.

The Bison are slowly finding this commodity of experience. They look better every time out and last week they were beginning to look and play like a team.

The front line of the Langen brothers and Roger Erickson must rate as one of the best forward units that has suited up for the Buffaloes in quite some time.

Add this front line to a healthy trio of guards in the name of Bachmeier, Lehr and Babby and the score keeper will have a very busy night.

We haven't won too many contests thus far but if this team continues to improve at the rate they have been, then all I can say is "opposition get out of the way because we're going to trample you."

I HAVE ALWAYS HAD an abiding hatred for the bottom crust of rye bread. There is no particular reason for making this point, except that whenever I think of Fort Lauderdale, I think of rye bread. There is no particular reason for that either, but I have been thinking of Fort Lauderdale. Fort Lauderdale is "where the boys are." Right now, that is. Most of the time, serenity reigns in Fort Lauderdale. (The Chamber of Commerce will hate me; they say it never rains in Fort Lauderdale.) But, for two weeks, twenty thousand collegians descend on this peaceful community and take it apart, peace by peace. They call it Spring Vacation, but it's more like amateur night at Cape Canaveral. They capture Florida and throw the Keys away. But I shouldn't joke—not while people are holding mass prayer meetings for an early hurricane season.

This is "where the boys are." And girls, too. Such girls, it makes you dizzy to look at them. If you look long enough, you reach an advanced stage of dizziness called aphrodisiac. It's like being in love. That's what happened to me, and it will happen to you, too. Everywhere you turn—beaches full of them, motels and hotels full of them, cars full of them, pools full of them, bathing suits full of them. Ah, bathing suits . . . when the man said, "It's the little things in life that count," he must have been thinking of bathing suits. But mostly, it's the girls.

Girls in love, girls in trouble, bright girls with a future, not-so-bright girls with a past, rich girls in the lap of luxury, poor girls in any lap that'll have them, girls of every size and discretion. It isn't any wonder that this is "where the boys are." And the things that happen are wacky and wild and wicked and warmly wonderful "where the boys are." Someone should make a movie about it. Hey, someone did! M-G-M calls it "Where The Boys Are," starring Dolores Hart, George Hamilton, Yvette Mimieux, Jim Hutton, Barbara Nichols, Paula Prentiss, with Frank Gorshin and introducing popular recording star Connie Francis in her first screen role. You'll want to see all the things that happen "Where The Boys Are."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents "WHERE THE BOYS ARE" A Euterpe production in CinemaScope and METROCOLOR. Screenplay by George Wells, based on the novel by Glendon Swarthout. Directed by Henry Levin. Produced by Joe Pasternak.
