Professors Promoted In Academic Status

Thirty-three faculty members of North Dakota State University have been promoted in academic rank. The promotions, approved by the State Board of Higher Education, will become effective on July 1.

Promoted from the rank of associate professor to full professor were Perry Hemphill, agricultural economics; Dr. Robert H. Johansen, horticulture; Dr. Richard L. Post, entomology; Dr. Bayard P. Sleeper, bacteriology; Dr. Clarence Schilling, mathematics;

Dr. John Shuman, mathematics; Jessie Phillips, English; Dr. Josephine Bartow, home economics; Dr. Mavis Nymon, home economics; S. David Bateman, communications, and Dr. Norbert Dorow, agricultural economics.

Promoted from assistant professor to associate professor were Dr. Armand Bauer, soils; Charles M. Edgerly, dairy; Dr. Verlin Johnson, animal science; Dr. Arnold Schooler, agronomy; Dr. Curtis Amlund, political science; Dr. Robert Burgess, botany; Dr. Richard Shermoen, mathematics; Richard Lyons, English; Dr. Robert Fitch, chemistry and physics; Dr. Carl Slater, chemistry and physics; William Muelhausen, mechanical engineering; Ethel Flaten, home economics; Marjore Lovering, home economics; Dr. Waqar Bhatti, pharmacy; Ronald Anderson, agricultural economics; Dr. Howard Bissonette, plant pathology, and Dr. Lawrence Mitich, agronomy.

Promoted from instructor to assistant professor were Duane O. Erickson, animal science; Eldon Walker, speech and drama, and Robert N. McDougal, mechanical engineering.

Dr. Muriel Vincent, professor and chairman of the department of Pharmacy, was given the additional title of assistant dean of pharmacy.

Mrs. Barbara Weterstrom was promoted to assistant librarian.

In other board action, resignations were accepted from four faculty members. They are Dr. Ray L. McDonald, assistant professor of chemistry, effective at the close of the current academic year; David Noetzel, assistant professor of entomology, effective July 1; Dr. Sol Shulman, assistant professor chemistry, effective at the end of the academic year, and Mildred Hawkins, associate professor of textiles and clothing, effective at the end of the academic year.

Spring Term Enrollment Advances To New High

Enrollment for the spring term at North Dakota State University shows an increase of 464 students compared to spring quarter 1964. The total enrollment is 4,046.

The college of Arts and Science leads the other colleges with a total of 1,459 followed by Engineering with 843. Agriculture has 637; Home Economics, 426; Pharmacy, 410 and Chemistry and Physics, 173.

Student Loans Important To Education

Student loans are of tremendous importance to the educational process at North Dakota State University, according to Wayne Tesmer, NDSU loan officer. Seventeen out of each 100 students enrolled at NDSU this year are borrowers under the National Defense Student Loan Program.

Part-time jobs to supplement money available for college often means a part time academic load for the student.

Robert Mooney, AS 6, deems his loan "absolutely imperative." He said, "Without it, I could not maintain myself as a full time student."

Loans are classified private or public, the most liberal being the National Defense Loan. That's where the problems come in for Tesmer.

"More detailed information regarding the financial situation of the student and his family is needed," said Tesmer. He is in the process of developing a new, more stringent loan application.

These applications would be designed to get more information on the student's ability to pay his education expenses. The new application form would permit loan officers to make a more objective analysis of financial need. Because funds are limited, a better method of evaluation must be devised.

This academic year $415,000 has been loaned to 760 students at NDSU. William J. Promersberger, chairman of the Scholarships, Loans and Awards Committee, said that loans are not large enough, but that due to limited funds the problem is inescapable.

Promersberger says that loans are a necessary part of the educational program, but advocates that the student should try to finance his education as he goes. "It may be quite a problem to start repaying a loan in three or four years when you may also have a family to support." He believes that students would be happier if they could finance their education while they attend school.

"Some students don't seem to realize that loans aren't gifts. They must be repaid," said Tesmer.

Tesmer notes that the loan application procedures at NDSU are presently inadequate. "In all cases loan criteria must be based primarily on the need factor and of course the student must be academically qualified. But need is hard to establish," stated Tesmer.

Rushing Procedures Reviewed

New methods of rushing prospective members of fraternities are now being studied by the Interfraternity Council of North Dakota State University.

The proposed changes are aimed to help the fraternities be more selective in choosing their new members. According to David Bernauer, president of IFC, the primary reason for change is to give the fraternities a better chance to judge the scholastic abilities of potential members. They will then be able to pledge men of a higher scholastic caliber.

Two plans are now being studied in committees of IFC.

Robert Breyer, PH 4, is chairman of the committee on deferred rushing. This rushing program would restrict any freshman from pledging a fraternity until his second quarter of school. At the beginning of their second quarter only freshmen with a satisfactory grade point average would be considered for pledging.

Robert Hendrickson, AS 3, is chairman of the other study committee. This committee is working on a plan to make adjustments in the present fall rushing program.

Some of the ideas already proposed by this committee include: allowing only students who were in the top 50 per cent of their high school graduating class to pledge a fraternity; requiring all pledges to get above a predetermined grade point average or they would have to be depledged.

I'M OVER HERE.

WHERE'S MY PARTNER?

PRESENTING Walter Olson, chairman of Cass County Chapter of March of Dimes, with a check for $1562.45 is Dave Bernauer, president of interfraternity council. This money was collected in a city wide solicitation by the ten social fraternities.

Parnassus Besieged

by Steve A. Ward

Richard Wagner and I did the laundry together for four weeks. I don't know how it started, but somehow I learned that every Saturday at 1 p.m. or so, WDAY carried the matinee from the Metropolitan Opera. Perhaps it was during football season, when there was nothing else to do on Saturday afternoons. I remember listening to La Boheme and liking it, and I remember listening to Salome and feeling my viscera expand when Salome kissed the severed head of John the Baptist.

And I remember the Ring cycle—the entire Ring cycle. Four operas. All four. All.

Feeling, naturally, rather guilty about the emasculate character of my afternoon, listening to opera when I could be out throwing blocks, confetti or cheers at the game, I thought I might at least try to look busy; so I did the week's ironing while listening. When Siegfried yowled after Fafner, and while Willie Waltzer whistled through the secondary, I ironed shirts, eight bars to the sleeve, the way New Orleans cops have eight bars to the beat.

Whether it was the shirts, which my wife took away from me, the Wagner, which Anna Russel took away from me, or the end of the opera season, or the end of the football season, or the advent of television and the concomitant decline in thought and metabolism whatever it was, I quit listening to opera.

Now the television set has quit watching me. Two weeks ago, Sunday, our Packard-Bell suffered an acute attack of schizophrenia. Showing two pictures simultaneously, it began a plaintive "beep-beep?" and absolutely refused to respond to solicitous inquiries. Euthanasia was the only course open to us.

We mourned a little, but we soon recovered. My wife is trying to learn again how to read, my son has taken to palling around with a beat Panda named either "North Dakota" or "I don't know" and I have gone back to opera.

Last Saturday I turned on the radio, and there was Milton Cross, the man who is to the Met what Mel Allen was to Yankee Stadium — its voice. The opera was Vanessa, the libretto was in English and just brimming with imported Italian pasta and morder Danish pastry, from Gian-Carlo Menotti and Isak Dinesen, and Milton Cross was in good voice, mixing his Italian vowels and New Jersey consonants with judicious abandon.

I marched, of course. I always march during operas, and conduct, too, which makes me an undesirable alien at a live performance; but that's all right, because there are plenty of recordings around.

And I weep. After the tenor hits the B-flat, at the end of each act, and during Texaco commercials, I weep. My measure of the quality of a performance is the quantity of shredded Kleenex on the floor. Joan Sutherland's singing of "Casa diva" from Bellini's Norma is a five-tissue aria.

Next Saturday, Verdi, whose opera Aida is the most produced at the Metropolitan, will be represented by Ernani. You can get fairly good background material on the singers and composer as well as photographs of the production from the magazine Opera News, available at the North Dakota State University library. In addition, you should know something about the story, since the opera will be sung in Italian. Although Milton Cross gives a brief resume of the action before each act, it is sometimes hard to remember where you are. Ernest Newman's books are the best I know particularly if you read music. Cross's Stories of the Great Operas available in paper, is a valuable addition to your library, although it does not include Ernani. The best guide is a translation of the libretto, but this must be ordered at least three weeks ahead of time. Unfortunately, our library has no libretti except for the seldom-produced The Wife of Martin Guerre and Gilbert and Sullivan's work.

With the story, WDAY, plenty of room for marching, a broken pool cue for conducting, a box of cleansing tissue, an emotional nature, a broken television tube, heavy drapes if you can't sing along, and a tolerant roommate, with all these you have the requisites for a pleasant Saturday afternoon.

If the opera is long enough, you may even get your laundry done.

PROMOTIONAL POSTERS for Sharivar being formulated by one of the student committee members.

Sharivar Agenda Planned

A lawn and garden show, an international food festival and a Spectrum-KDSU Radio challenge are in the planning stage for this year's Sharivar according to Wendy Pile, Sharivar special events chairman.

Sharivar, North Dakota State University's all campus open house, is scheduled for May 7-9.

Miss Pile stated that Sharivar is always looking for new events to provide a larger and better program for visitors and to create more interest among University students.

The lawn and garden show is being planned by Gary Lind, EN 3. Lind has approached Fargo businessmen and secured the use of five or six cub tractors. He said, "We are looking into the availability of a garden lot where we can demonstrate the use of small tractors for home gardens and odd jobs around the home. If this is impossible, we may drive them in parade style on campus. They will be on display at the Agriculture Engineering building all three days."

Miss Pile said that an international food festival is also being considered. She continued, "The International Relations Club has approached us with this idea. Members would like to dress in the costumes of their native countries and display their native foods."

Gary Pfeifer, Sharivar co-chairman, said, "Student participation and faculty cooperation are two of Sharivar's largest problems. I believe that these new events will create more interest among students and faculty and partially alleviate these problems."

KDSU Radio has challenged the Spectrum to a go-cart race. Spectrum Editor Lynn Leavens, stated, "We accept their challenge, but we don't have any money to carry it out. We would hold the race during Sharivar and would like to have it on campus, but traffic isn't allowed. I hope something can be worked out so the race doesn't fall through."

Blue Key Cast Selected

Kathy Brademeyer, AS 4, and Tom Norum, CP 2, will lead the cast in this year's Blue Key production, "Annie Get Your Gun."

Miss Brademeyer will play the part of Annie Oakley, the gun-totin' backwoods gal on whose escapades the show is based. Norum will play the part of Frank Butler, a suave sharpshooter who is paired with Annie in the play.

The lead cast includes such characters as Buffalo Bill played by Ron Woitel, PH 4; Sitting Bull by Duane Miller, CP 3; Foster Wilson by Denny Lilleberg, EA 1, and Charley Davenport portrayed by Paul Carlson, PH 1. Dolly and Winnie Tate will be played by Linda Trautman, AS 4, and Beth McLaughlin, AS 1, respectively. Mike Handy, AS 2, Bob Sterton, PH 2, and Jim Manning, PH 2, will play the remaining leads.

Supporting the cast will be the following chorus and dance members: Pam Augspurger, CP 7, Cherre Brenden, AS 3, Marijo Yirchott, AS 2, Sharon Brusven, HE 4, Jackie Wilcox, AS 2, Peggy Berreth, AS 1, Kathy Spitzer, AS 4, Eileen Torgeson, AS 1, Mary Kay Groth, PH 3, Susan

Peterson, AS 1, Sandy Anderson, HE 3, Kathy Platt, AS 2, Jane Bale, HE 1, Judy Klefstad, HE 4, Karen Fausemel, HE 3, Kathy Degen, AS 4, Leo K. Johnson, HE 4, Dave Johnston, AS 2, Dave Bateman, AS 1, Dale Forde, AS 3, Dick Ferrell, PH 1, Jerrold Ulven, EA 1, Denny Anderson, EA 2, Mike Jones, AS 1, Jon Fehr, EA 1, and Richard Forsgren, AS 3.

Reserved seats for the production go on sale April 15. Tickets may be purchased from Blue Key members, sorority and fraternity members and from members of other campus organizations.

Education Bills Sought; Students Need Tax Cuts

Three of President Johnson's top-priority bills face delays in the United States Congress. They are not faced with strong opposition - it is just that the democratic way takes time.

One of these bills, the school measure or educational bill is of immediate concern to us as students. This educational bill is the one proposed by President Johnson and aimed at those students who can not or could not afford to go to college without this type of assistance. It has already passed the House.

There is another educational bill before Congress at this time. This is the plan proposed by several members of Congress and aimed at helping parents who can finance their children's higher education. Both of these approaches to the high cost of education were reviewed in an editorial last week reprinted from the Washington Daily Post.

The Post viewed the nation's best interests served most clearly through President Johnson's plan.

We agree with the Post; of the two approaches considered the President's is better. However, we feel that there is another segment of the population that could use assistance and neither of the two proposed bills gives it to them.

The part of the population that we are referring to already goes to college or is tentatively planning to go to college; however they do not fit into Johnson's poverty stricken class or into the segment where "helping parents" finance their children's higher education. We are talking about veterans, married students and those other students that some how make it through college by paying their own way. Granted, some of these people receive assistance from their relatives, some even total subsistence; but our proposal, which stems from the Canadian tax system, would help only those students who need it.

The Canadian tax system allows students to deduct their fees, tuitions and books from any wages earned before income-tax is paid. (Parents can not deduct these costs, only students.) By allowing students these deductions the revenue department would give assistance to students who are struggling to make it through college. This may allow these students to take more hours per quarter, work less and get a degree sooner.

We do not advocate the discarding of President Johnson's plan, because there certainly must be needy people who have the intelligence and desire to go to college, but not the money. Rather, we wish someone would think of the students now struggling to stay in college.

Editor Answers Letter - Explains Spectrum Views

Last week the Spectrum in general, and the editor in particular, received criticism for news coverage of Student Senate.

Two young ladies found fault with the reporting and reasoning in the March 24 issue of the Spectrum. No matter how hard we try we can not agree with them.

If the students were presented an incomplete and limited picture by the story on Senate, as the young ladies say, this was not by mistake but on purpose. The editors have an obligation to print what they consider important to the student body as a whole and to cut that which is expendable.

We were accused of omitting a very significant report concerning the spotlight on University Drive, the appointment of a representative to the Tri-College Council and also several points of campus interest concerning class rings, the tennis courts and the swimming pool.

We agree that the aforementioned items are newsworthy and when something concrete is done, like the spotlight becoming a reality, we will cover it.

The girls went on to say, "The student then turned to the editorial page and was confronted with a number of fallacious statements that were in no way supported with facts."

We agree with the girls that it would, indeed, be very difficult to back up false statements with facts. However, the editorial they were referring to was concerned with only one fact - that which is written in the constitution of Student Senate. The rest of the editorial dealt with the possible happenings if Senate persisted in its ways.

The girls were also concerned with the fact that in the editorial we stated that President Schindler called this meeting to have his nine commissioners approved by senate. This bothered them because Schindler opened the meeting saying - "this meeting was called in hopes that the student senators and commissioners might become better acquainted and work together as a unified whole, better expressing the opinions of the students."

We still feel that the main reason Schindler called the meeting was to have his commissioners approved; if the young ladies concerned want to believe the meeting was called for some other reason - they may.

There were a few more things the young ladies were concerned with. But, we will deal with only one more - rights and responsibilities. The Spectrum and the editors know and realize the standards they have to meet. When and if the students of this University disagree with us they have two choices. They can write a letter to the editor or else they can come in and work on the Spectrum and become an editor themselves. Then they may have a say in the policy of this paper.

Honor Course Success Proven

by Tom Saunders

One way to improve teaching standards, then, suggests Mr. Fischer, is through a reliance on student and graduate appraisals. An even better check, he believes, would be the use of outside examiners. This is now being done at the honors course level at Swarthmore, with encouraging results. It accomplishes two things, both of them wholesome: (1) "It provides an objective yardstick of teaching ability . . ." and (2) "It changes the whole relationship between teacher and students. Automatically he becomes their accomplice instead of their adversary . . . They don't regard him as someone who has to be tricked or flattered, or whose crochety notions have to be parroted back at him, as so often happens when an instructor writes and grades the exams himself . . ."

"If innovations of this kind would improve college teaching," writes Mr. Fisher, "what are the chances that they might be introduced on a fairly large scale?" He admits that this poses a problem. "Most students, and many alumni and parents, seem to feel that there is no hope of changing the System. The typical university is too hidebound, too complacent, too deaf to the needs of its students (and their future employers) to pay any attention to such suggestions."

But he does not believe that the situation is hopeless. The above line of reasoning is true, he states, "unless each suggestion is accompanied by a firm tug on the purse strings."

Through the public's control of the purse, he believes, some much needed teaching reforms can be effected. "Every college and university in America is desperately in need of money. So, next time you get an appeal from your alma mater, don't send a check. Send a letter asking what the college is doing to improve its teaching. Does it have any system for appraising teaching ability?"

At a minimum, why aren't its undergraduates being encouraged to publish something like Harvard's 'Confidential Guide to Courses?' Intimate, in a nice way that you aren't about to make any more contributions until you get satisfactory answers."

"If you are a business executive (he suggests) you almost certainly will be asked during the next six months to make a corporate donation . . . You could say no. You could hope that your firm might, however, be willing to finance an experiment with outside examiners—or a salary increase for one faculty member in each department who is voted by the students to be the best teacher."

And he thinks that students themselves could do a great deal to help improve the quality of teaching. "If you are a student," he writes, "you could raise a little more hell . . ."

A few dozen letters to . . . major newspapers, to the foundations whence come those lovely grants, to the legislative appropriations committees—even to the university president—might work wonders . . . The possibilities for non-violent action are infinite—and they could prove a lot more fun than panty raids or beer busts at Fort Lauderdale."

The suggestions he makes, he says, "will not enchant one part of the academic Establishment. Some professors still believe that higher education is an arcane rite which ought to be conducted by (and largely for the benefit of) its own Sanhedrin, without interference from the peasantry. In the old days, when college was the privilege of a small elite, they could get away with this disdainful posture.

Today education is our largest industry. It affects all of us; it reaches deep into every family's pocketbook; it is infinitely more crucial to the nation's future than ever before. Education, as Talleyrand once said of war, has become too serious to leave to the professionals."

Faculty Urged To Share Value Standards

(I.P.)—In his recently released report "Student Revolt for Freedoms," Dean of Students William R. Butler of Ohio University points out that "A university administration and faculty need to examine critically its philosophy and understanding of the concept, 'in loco parentis.'"

"One matter which college officials must study immediately," Dr. Butler writes, "is the broad question of the relationship between student rights and student responsibilities. The significance of this relationship in fulfilling the educational objectives of the university is important.

"More specifically, how much freedom is necessary in order for us to create and maintain a desirable learning environment? To what degree should students be held responsible for the exercise of their freedoms if they are to become effective members of the academic community?"

"To what extent should students over and under the age of 21 be given the responsibility for their own behavior without supervision? There are undoubtedly as many views of how a university should establish student standards and limits as there are deans employed in the 2,000 colleges and universities in our country.

"I personally would plead for more of our faculty and administrators, as well as parents, to share more frequently with students their own standards, values, and the ways they feel personally about different social, cultural and personal issues. In far too many instances our young men and women are establishing interpersonal relationships of 'immaturity' with their peers rather than identifying with mature and experienced adults.

"There is still time for colleges to take a distinctive stand and 'strike at the very points where the Morals Revolution is taking hold on the college campus.'"

Work Scholarships Initiated

(I.P.)—To help its undergraduate students to meet rising costs of higher education, the University of Rochester this fall will introduce a system of guaranteed student employment called "Work Scholarships." The new program will supplement the University's present scholarship, loan and student employment programs, according to Acting Provost Robert R. France.

Under the Work Scholarship plan, a qualified student in need of substantial financial aid may be awarded a Work Scholarship in conjunction with an outright scholarship and/or a long-term loan up to the amount of his estimated need. The scholarships will be awarded during the spring and summer and will be administered by the Office of Admission and Student Aid.

France explained that a student receiving a full Work Scholarship of $550 will be expected to earn $50 in one or more campus jobs from September to June. (This will involve about 10 to 15 hours of work a week.) In addition, as part of the scholarship, the student will receive a $200 grant-in-aid from the Office of Admission and Student Aid for providing campus services.

Similarly, a student receiving a partial scholarship of $275 will be expected to earn $175 during the academic year and will receive a grant-in-aid of $100. The scholarships will be given in combination with other forms of aid. For example, a student who needs $1,500 in financial aid might receive $500 in outright scholarship, a $450 loan, and a $550 work scholarship.

History Professor Teaching Career Nears Half Century

Forty-two years of watching a fledgling college grow into a university of stature has been the opportunity accorded to Rudolf Ottersen, professor of history at North Dakota State University.

Ottersen accepted his appointment as an instructor of history in the summer of 1923 during the administration of John Lee Coulter. He has served in this capacity under five presidents and has observed many changes which have come about on the campus.

Student enrollment was 656 in 1923. It has increased considerably since that time and even doubled itself during one four-year period in the mid-twenties.

"Those early years were peaceful ones," said Ottersen, "but North Dakota farmers did not enjoy prosperity during this period and this fact was reflected here in the college as the enrollment showed very little increase."

The small enrollment and few faculty members made discipline easy and promoted fellowship. Faculty relationships were perhaps more pleasant in these early years," he said, because we knew every member intimately and became even better acquainted because the faculty played on volleyball and tennis teams and participated in tournaments together."

He mentioned that his salary, after the "purge" in 1937, was $1440 for a nine-month term and added that this was a small sum for a man with a family. "There was a saying on campus that one could tell when payday came as the 'shaggy-haired' faculty men suddenly sported haircuts."

There was no summer school during the 20's. The college operated on a nine-month basis except for the agriculture school.

"Enrollment greatly increased in the winter terms," remarked Ottersen, "and dropped in the fall and spring terms because many students were then at home on the farm to help with the seeding or harvest." Some students, of course, stayed in school in these months and earned part of their expenses by working for the agriculture school.

In order to receive a grant of $25,000 from the Rockefeller Institute, the students and faculty agreed to raise an equal or greater amount. The city of Fargo had donated $22,000, which when added to the $18,000 collected from the students and faculty was still short of the required $50,000. "The additional money," said Ottersen, "was raised by student solicitors traveling throughout North Dakota in 'rented Fords' during the summer months."

The new Y building was completed by 1920. It was constructed on the corner of University and 12th Avenue. It was the first student union and contained pool tables, a lounge and library and was used as the meeting place for various organizations, both religious and non-religious.

There were no dormitories at that time except Ceres Hall for girls. The Y served as a housing agency, aiding students in finding living quarters. "It was also an employment bureau, of a sort, and helped needy students to obtain jobs," he said. Later these duties were taken over by the college.

The Ceres Hall cafeteria closed on Saturday and Sundays. The students were forced to go uptown to eat. "In the early 30's," stated Ottersen, "a lunch room called the 'Dugout' was started in the basement of the Y."

In 1962, Ottersen was given a years leave of absence and spent this year traveling through 20 countries in Europe, from Norway to Rome. He visited universities in each of these countries making a study of their libraries and history departments. "One of the most interesting universities was at Uppsala, Sweden," he remarked, "where they have a very large collection of American history books which are in the English language."

He was also granted a special pass to view the library at the Vatican in Rome, one of the largest libraries in the world. "The card file alone," he said, "was nearly a block long."

The Vatican librarian had been trained in Wisconsin and so there was no language barrier, Ottersen commented. The books of Americana in this library are much greater in number than those found in any library in our country, he continued. Histories of our state were even more numerous than in the library at NDSU.

"The past 42 years have been most interesting and gratifying to me," said Ottersen, "and if I had my life to live over again, I would probably spend it in the same way. NDSU has become one of the 'greats' in my time and I am happy to have had a small part in its growth and developments."

CAMPUS CUTIE this week is Marilyn Walkinshaw, a freshman in Arts and Science from Argusville, N. D.

Enrollment Expected To Reach Maximum By Fall

The enrollment in the College of Home Economics is expected to reach 500 during the fall quarter, 1965; a figure which would represent the maximum capacity that could be accommodated with the present facilities and staff of the college.

Such a situation raises two inevitable questions: how can the present program be maintained, and how is the college to expand to meet future needs?

Dean of the fourth largest college in North Dakota State University, Dr. F. Caroline Budewig, said concerning this situation, "We need two-thirds more space than we now have. Further, there are a number of staff members, now teaching part-time, who we would like to advance to full-time capacities." Of the twenty three members of the teaching staff of the college, ten are employed part-time, Dean Budewig noted.

Dean Budewig indicated that there were certain advantages in maintaining a number of staff members on a part-time basis. "A teacher concentrating her abilities on one course tends to be more devoted than a full-time teacher might ordinarily be," she said.

For young women, still in the process of raising a family, part-time employment enables them to maintain a certain contact with their career field. Dean Budewig said, "We feel that since the field of Home Economics is primarily a woman's field, we should take the lead in providing this sort of opportunity to women."

In spite of these advantages, Dean Budewig noted that future needs of the college will demand increased staff capabilities. "Our present staff, although small, is extremely competent, a necessity when number are below the ideal level. An area such as Child Development should have had a full-time specialist long ago; there are other areas, such as food research, in which we need to increase our staff."

The two areas which are most in need of development in the college are research and the graduate program, Dean Budewig noted. "We are not able to attract the grants frequently available to some of the sciences. If possible, we would like to eventually establish a food research program in co-operation with the radiation laboratory on campus."

An increase in the quality of the graduate program would result in improvement in the undergraduate program as well. Dean Budewig said that the present level of the undergraduate program is good, citing the fact that graduates of NDSU have competed favorably in the areas of research, business and advanced studies.

Particular attention was called to the success of two recent graduates, employed by the Columbia Gas Company. The company has donated two large gifts to the college in appreciation of the excellence of the two graduates.

Dean Budewig indicated that the field of Home Economics is expanding, however, demanding increased quality as well as quantity from the University. In the field of business, for example, she said that, "the Home Economist serves in increasing capacities of research. She is the link between the manufacturer and the public, interpreting the activities of the business world to the consumer, and the need of the consumer to the manufacturer."

The other major areas for which Home Economics serves as a preparation, dietetics and teaching, are also increasing in their demands upon the Home Economist. Dean Budewig said, "Home Economics combines the methods and information of the arts and sciences, focusing its efforts on the improvement of home and family living. The opportunities in the field are as limitless as the subject matter of the field itself."

Author Speaks On Agriculture

Author of "The Day of the Bonanza," Dr. Hiram Drache, will be guest speaker at the Agricultural Economics Club Spring Banquet, April 8, at 7 p.m. in the Banquet Room of the Bowler.

Drache will discuss the historical, sociological and economic highlights of the bonanza farming days. His discussion will include the years that the Northern Pacific Railroad went bankrupt and sold some 11 million North Dakota acres to the public for 16 cents an acre.

North Dakota was one frontier not opened by the small farmer; it was the large commercialized farms ranging from 7,000 to 75,000 acres that opened this territory.

The Concordia history professor says his book is an attempt to present factual information about the origin, success and decline of bonanza farming.

Fargo-Moorhead businessmen, representing various agricultural fields, have been invited to the banquet.

Original Intentions Of University Are Reviewed In Retrospect

by Ray Barnhardt

During this, the 75th year of NDAC-SU, it might be interesting, and who knows, maybe even wise, to turn the pages back and reflect upon the original conditions and intentions of the institution.

"The institution belongs to the people of North Dakota who should not therefore be required to pay individually for the advantages it has to offer. Tuition is free to all the students admitted to the regular course. Furnished rooms will cost from $3.00 to $8.00 per month. Washing about 55 cents per dozen. Board $3.00 to $4.50 per week." These figures were taken from the paragraph entitled "Expenses" on page 19 of the North Dakota Agricultural College Propectus, (General Catalog) June, 1891.

One needs to go no further than the above quote to realize that a drastic change has taken place. Can you imagine going to college for $15.55 a month, and this includes clean socks almost every other day. (One could probably wear one pair just on Sundays and stretch their use out over the entire month.)

There was one catch to this apparently inexpensive education however, and if you didn't continue on to the next paragraph in the catalog before you eagerly enrolled, you were in for a surprise.

"Students will be required to do a certain amount of farm work as a part of the regular instruction in the course; the labor performed either on the farm or in the shops will be considered as ranking with, in importance and dignity, the labor performed in the classroom, the study or the laboratory. For this labor, students will receive no compensation."

In those days a student earned his education. The same paragraph goes on, "It is part of the instruction they receive, for which they are no more entitled to pay than they would be for the time required in the preparation for recitation."

Today, students are paid $75-$90 a quarter to serve as lab assistants.

The students in 1891 had a rather busy schedule for a day's work. Classes ran on the half hour, starting at 8:30 a.m. and running through until 12:30 p.m. A first term junior had one hour each of German, physics, horticulture and agricultural engineering in the morning. In the afternoon he had horticulture work, agriculture, mechanical drawing, and of course, good old ROTC. This was the daily routine followed throughout the term.

Increase In Prices Reflect On Student Living Costs

The cost of living has its effect everywhere. The increasing price of food is perhaps most noticeable. This, on the North Dakota State University campus, transmits directly to the students in such things as the recent price increase of some food items offered in the State Room.

Frank Bancroft, director of the University Food Service, states that this price increase is the first in the State Room since he came here in August, 1963. He adds that the increase could not be avoided any longer. "Our food and labor costs have been increasing and thus we had no other choice but to charge more for some food items."

The food service in the Memorial Union operates on a commercial scale because the income is entirely dependent upon the number of people served.

Bancroft says that the Memorial Union food service has spent $16,000 on capital improvements this school year. The State Room has had plate warmers and steam cookers installed for better food preparation and serving.

The Bison Room has installed a new exhaust system above the grills which eliminates much of the accumulation of grease. French fryers have been added in both the State and Bison Rooms. Also a new cash register speeds checking in the Bison Room.

The dishroom conditions have been greatly improved so that workers no longer find it a "sweat shop."

Some profit has to be set aside to replace equipment as it wears out. Formerly, according to Bancroft, disproportionate amounts of profit went "upstairs" to activities without a reasonable amount being kept in the food area for improvements.

According to Bancroft, any other profit stays in the Memorial Union. The money helps finance the Student Union Activity Board and Union activities and the building itself.

Bancroft continued, "We are doing our best to give the best food and service and still keep the cost down."

"The part-time use of Meinecke Lounge as a faculty coffee break area has been successful and gratifying," Bancroft stated. "With faculty co-operation the honor system has also been a success."

The Dacotah Inn is fulfilling its intended purpose, providing a dining room for students, faculty and staff, and visiting guests. "The noon lunches are very well attended and we are encouraged by the increase in guests for evening business," states Bancroft.

"The Inn's noon buffet on Wednesday is exceptionally popular," Bancroft said. "We are considering broadening this to two days a week next year."

Nothing can take the press out of Lee-Prest slacks

Not that it's on his mind right now. And it needn't be. Those Lee-Prest Leesures can't help but stay crisp and neat. No matter what you put them through. They have a new permanent press. So the crease stays in. The wrinkles stay out. Permanently. And that's without ironing. No touch-ups, either. They're made from Lee's special blend of 50% polyester and 50% combed cotton. For wash and wear... with conviction.

Incidentally, that permanent press is the only change we've made in Leesures. They still have that lean, honest look... smart, tailored fit. New Lee-Prest Leesures. Test their permanent press yourself. It isn't necessary, but it's a great way to spend an evening. From $5.98 to $7.98.

Summer Session

New Orientation Testing Program Set

Summer session dates for the 1965 school year at North Dakota State University have been announced by Burton Brandrud, director of admissions and records.

The first session is scheduled to start June 9 and will run through July 15. The second term will begin July 16 and end Aug.

20. Students enrolling in full-quarter courses will begin on June 9 and complete the full term on Aug. 20.

A new student orientation and testing program is to be conducted this year, according to Brandrud. The testing program beginning at 8:30 a.m., June 8, in the university library, will be required of all students enrolling for the first time.

Students planning to enroll in the fall may take the tests on June 8 and be excused from placement testing when they register. Students taking this placement testing will not be required to report on campus until Sept. 1 for the fall session.

Brandrud emphasized that not only freshman students but also former NDSU students not enrolled in spring quarter, must contact the Admissions Office well in advance of summer quarter registration, indicating their intent to register. This procedure will enable Admissions personnel to prepare IBM registration packets for each summer enrollee before he arrives on campus.

Students who fail to make these previous arrangements must have to register as much as two days late.

Studies will be offered in agriculture, education, engineering, the fine arts, home economics, the humanities, languages, pharmacy, social sciences and science. A complete listing of classes is available at the Admissions Office.

Among the many cultural and recreational campus activities planned during the 1965 summer session are eight nights of theatre-in-the-round, featuring two outstanding plays; four performances of the F-M Symphony Orchestra and eight evenings of top film fare selected from classical and foreign productions.

Student Accepted To Study Abroad

Kim Bennett, HE 2, has been accepted by the Commission on Ecumenical Mission and Relations of the United Presbyterian Church as a participant in their 1965-66 Junior Year Abroad program. She will study at the University of the Philippines.

The Junior Year Abroad program is an overseas study plan which is now entering its eleventh year of operation. Currently there are forty students studying under the program in Asia, Africa, the Middle East, Europe and Latin America.

The University of the Philippines is located on the new campus at Diliman at the edge of the capital, Manila. The academic year runs from mid-June until the end of March.

Speaker Stresses Policy Alterations

Change does not necessarily mean progress. We are not being consistent with policies when we promote socialism at home and fight Communism abroad," said James Blythe, chairman of the Midwest Federation of College Young Republicans.

Blythe gave the keynote address to the North Dakota Federation of College Republican Clubs at their annual convention held in the Memorial Union at North Dakota State University on March 26 - 27.

Blythe told the convention delegates, "Republicans should: cut out petty bickering at all levels of the party, analyze the defeat of '64 objectively and not emotionally, start today and not tomorrow to become active opposition to the Lyndon-Bird administration, create a good image of the Republican Party in the minds of Americans and unify together to strengthen the party."

Don Holand, senate majority leader in the state legislature gave his ideas of an ideal citizen at the banquet Friday night. Some of these ideas are: "Inform yourself, think clearly, learn how to read a newspaper, be on guard against self-interest groups, do not hesitate to change your views, be tolerant of others ideas, be loathe to impure motives with personal attachment and recognize that difference of opinion in a democracy is wholesome."

The College Young Republicans passed the following resolutions:

1. That the Democratic tax package is inequitable and that a tax bill more suitable to the various economic elements of North Dakota be enacted.
2. That it was the duty of the United States to use whatever forces necessary to first contain, then systematically dissolve concentrations of communist supported guerrillas in South Viet Nam.
3. That the North Dakota teachers salaries be made comparable with other areas.
4. That the Garrison Diversion project be enacted and completed as soon as possible.
5. That the enforcement of reapportionment of the state legislature by the Supreme Court, through the use or threat of the use of computers and other means, oversteps the defined separation of executive and judicial powers.

Building Appropriations Set; Fieldhouse Chances Are Slim

The chances that North Dakota State University will get a new fieldhouse this year are slim," stated Representative David Montplasier at a meeting of the NDSU Young Democrats' Club, March 25.

Montplasier stated that the legislature does not appropriate money for specific buildings, but designates it for building construction for all state supported colleges and universities. The Board of Higher Education determines which building requests have priority. The legislature appropriated $2 million for construction this year and several institutions have applied for major construction allotments.

Montplasier termed the last legislative session "successful." He noted that during the 1963 session none of the 11 education bills introduced in the house were passed. "In 1964, two bills out of twenty introduced were lost," Montplasier said.

Significant legislation passed this year include a bill which provides for a professional practice board for teachers. Its purpose is to help maintain a high standard in teaching practices.

A bill specifying that all teachers in North Dakota must have a four year degree also passed. North Dakota and Nebraska were the only states not having this law last year.

Montplasier was asked about the tuition increase slated for state universities. He stated that "the fee increase was determined somewhat by what large universities in surrounding states were charging their resident students. It didn't take into account the lower tuition of border colleges like Moorhead State College."

NDSU Wins Track Meet

Two record breaking performances by Bison trackmen helped North Dakota State University win the University of North Dakota Invitational Track Meet Friday. The Herd edged runner-up UND, 61-57. Moorhead State College took third position with 23 points followed by Concordia with 22, Northern State College 21, and Huron College 8.

NDSU's Bruce Airheart ran the 440 in :50.9 clipping .2 second off his record time set last year. The record time came after Airheart was tripped and fouled by Tony Jones in the first heat.

Lowell Linderman continued his record breaking performances by pole vaulting 13-7½ breaking the UND Fieldhouse record of 13-3.

Assistant Track Coach, Pat Novacek, commented, "We were well pleased with the performance of our men at Grand Forks. Our sophomores Rog Olson and Allan Heifner are coming along real well. Olson placing third in the mile and Heifner second in the half mile."

Another sophomore, Dave McDowell, drew praise from Novacek for running a leg of the winning mile-relay team and placing third in the 440. "Brian McLaren and Roger Grooters also did a good job for us—winning first in the 880 and mile run," Novacek added.

Other point getters were: Ron Evenson—second in the 60 yard dash, Tom Holmgren—second in the shot-put, Lanny Oxtan—third in the broad jump and fourth in the triple jump.

The Bison thinclads compete in two more meets this week.

New Sport Conditions Bison Athletes

Handball, a comparatively new sport, has been one of the main off-season conditioners for North Dakota State University's champion football players.

Many athletes began using the self-administered handball program during January when a segment of the men's locker room was converted into a court.

Darrell Mudra, NDSU Athletic Director, expressed satisfaction in the sport, "The game is an excellent conditioner, it improves timing, stamina and greatly increases the player's ability to use both hands effectively."

"Football players are not the only ones who use the field-house court," Mudra emphasized. "My staff of coaches often skips lunch to play." Coach Buck Nystrom, assistant football coach added, "It's too bad we don't have the facilities to make the game available for all students and start an intramural handball program."

Handball's newness to NDSU seems paralleled only by its newness to the United States. According to Encyclopedia Britannica the game developed in Ireland in the tenth century but didn't move to America until 1850.

Although President Abraham Lincoln brought the game into national prominence by playing it while in office, the game didn't earn nation-wide acceptance. Not until the National Handball Association was formed in 1951, did the sport become a national pastime.

"Organized intercollegiate handball competition began in 1954 and is now played extensively in our larger universities," stated Nystrom. He continued, "YMCA recreation programs are probably where most U. S. handball is played."

Mott Enters National Bowling Tourney

Dave Mott, senior captain of the Bison bowling team, will represent North Dakota State University in the National Intercollegiate Bowling Championship April 25-26 in St. Paul, Minnesota. Mott averaged 208 pins a game in winning the all-events title of the region ten American College's Unions competition held in Mankato.

ACU competition involves over 13,000 bowlers from 185 colleges and universities in the nation. The schools are divided into 15 regions. North Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota compose region ten.

Mott totaled 1876 pins to win the region championship and advanced to the finals. All-events winners are determined by combined scores in the singles, doubles and team competition. NDSU won the team event in region ten with 2865 pins, while Bison bowlers, Bob Frissell and Mike Fink, won first and third in the singles. Frissell totaled 690 pins in the winning effort.

Bison bowlers finished fourth in the Tri-state Bowling Conference according to the final standings released April 1. University of Minnesota bowlers captured first place with a 37-11 season record, followed by Mankato State College 31-17, Wisconsin State University, 29-19 and the Bison, 28-20.

Roger Werhle, Bison bowling coach, explained that NDSU missed a chance to finish higher in the conference by dropping three matches with the University of Minnesota, Morris branch, in the last meet of the season. The Morris branch finished eighth in the conference while Bison bowlers dropped from a tie for second to fourth place in the final standings.

Mott led the Bison bowlers with a 188 pin average over 48 conference matches. Jack Con-naughton of Wisconsin State led conference bowlers with a 194 average. Bison bowlers, Mott and Otteson, finished fifth and tenth in the individual standings.

Mike Megarry of the University of Minnesota posted the highest game in the conference history when he bowled a 298. Megarry averaged 187 for the season.

Bison Win Pair

Gary Pender and Bill Sturdevant pitched North Dakota State University's baseball team to a pair of opening round victories against Offut Air Force Base Sunday.

The Bison took advantage of an eight-run second inning to crush the airmen 11-1 in the first game. Frank Hentges and Ray Ellinsrud backed up Gary Pender's strong pitching performance with one double and two singles each. Offut scored their only run-off relief for Gene Bakum in the seventh inning.

Russ Auen and Bill Sturdevant combined a three-hit pitching performance with a four-run inning to beat Offut in the second game. John Renhowe had three hits and Hentges had two to lead the Bison's hitting attack.

The Bison's next game will be played April 9 against the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis.

Jones

THESE TWO ATHLETES will be matched against each other for the second time at the Alex Nemzek Fieldhouse Tuesday night. Meet time is 6:30. Airheart was victorious in their first meeting.

Airheart Vs. Jones Tuesday

Two of the areas' finest dashmen, Bruce Airheart of North Dakota State University and Tony Jones of Moorhead State College, have started a two man duel that should become even more interesting as track season progresses this year.

Jones, a native of Barataria, Trinidad, transferred to MSC this quarter from a Negro college in Virginia. He has won the 60 yard dash in every meet he has entered since coming to MSC. He also established an Alex Nemzek Fieldhouse record in the 440 with a time of :51.8.

It will probably be late spring, however, before we see Jones at his best. The 100 and 220 yard dashes, which are not run in indoor meets, are his best distances. Tony has recorded times of :09.4 in the 100 and :20.4 in the 220. Jones has also run the quarter mile in :47.

Bruce Airheart, who recently set a record in the 440 at the University of North Dakota Fieldhouse, has shown track observers he still retains his record breaking speed of last year. Bruce has run a :49.7 quarter mile indoors earlier this season and has turned in several times in the 440 under 48 seconds in outdoor competition.

Last year Airheart was recorded as one of the top 15 in the nation with a 220 yard dash time of :20.9. His best time in the quarter mile is :47.4.

So far this season Jones and Airheart have met only once against each other in the first heat of the 440 last Friday at UND. On the second turn, after they had covered approximately 150 yards, Jones left his hand, cut in on Airheart and tripped him. Jones, although he went on to win the heat, was disqualified. Airheart was then given a chance to run again in another heat in which he broke the UND Fieldhouse 440 yard record.

Airheart and Jones will meet for the second time next Tuesday night at the Alex Nemzek Fieldhouse. Look for Airheart to be in the lead.

TRACK TEAM SHOULD BE STRONGER OUTDOORS

State College of Iowa's decisive win in the North Central Conference Indoor Track Meet does not rule out the possibility of NDSU winning the outdoor contest.

In outdoor meets two sprints, the 100 and 220 yard dashes, are added. The Bison, who have a host of fine sprinters, including three who run the 440 under 50 seconds, should gain on the other NCC teams in these events.

How the addition of the two field events, the discus and the javelin, will affect the Bison is unknown. Most conference schools don't have an exceptional performer in these events and often, the contestants available will be some football player having had previous experience.

AROUND CAMPUS

Two former NDSU basketball players, Wayne and Lynden Langen, will be back on their old home court this Saturday. The brothers will be playing for Kennedy, Minn. in an amateur basketball tournament to be held in the NDSU Fieldhouse.

Dick Barnes, a mainstay on the South Dakota State University pitching staff, was a teammate of NDSU's ace pitcher, Gary Pender, when both played for Breckenridge-Wahpeton in the Midwest Collegiate League last summer.

Four NDSU coeds attended the National Physical Education Convention in St. Louis, Missouri last week. They were Geraldine Morgan, Norma Klever, Connie Buhr and Karen Thorfinnson.

Director Of Union Submits Resignation

James Thomas, director of the Memorial Union and an assistant dean of students, has submitted his resignation to be effective July 1, 1965, according to the president's office.

"In the past two years that Thomas has been Memorial Union director he has endeavored to progress in the Memorial Union's efforts to meet the needs of the students," says President H. R. Albrecht.

Assistant Memorial Union Director Andrew Bushko adds, "Perhaps the biggest jobs taken on by Thomas have been the building and remodeling additions to the Memorial Union and the re-establishing of Student Union Activity Board as an effective organizing body on campus." Bushko said that Thomas has worked toward the centralization of student activities in conjunction with his job for the dean of students' office.

Dean of Students Daniel Leasure stated that although no final decisions have been reached, Thomas has tentative plans for accepting a similar position at Georgia Tech. At present the State Board of Higher Education is reviewing Thomas' resignation and will not make its decision public until the middle of the week.

A replacement for the director has not yet been chosen. The possibilities will be screened by the Administration and the Memorial Union board. The board is largely an advisory board which takes an active interest in detailed running of the Union and recommending applicants for the position of director. The board is made up of 12 members and two ex-officio members.

Thomas was unavailable for comment at press time.

Lecture To Feature Research

Research papers will be presented by three graduate students attending North Dakota State University during a Sigma Xi public lecture, Tuesday, April 13, at 7 p.m. in the Prairie Room, Memorial Union.

Duane Erickson will discuss "Chemical Constituents of the Rumen" relating to research conducted by Erickson and Dr. William Dinusson, professor of animal science.

Val Tareski will explain "Application of Logic Circuit in Basic Research" on studies directed by Tareski and Dr. Louis Van Slyck, professor of electrical engineering.

Vernon Young will discuss "Lipids of Durum Wheat" concerning research performed by Young and Dr. Kenneth Gillis, professor of cereal technology.

Sigma Xi, a national honorary science and research organization, promotes basic and applied scientific research.

Preceding the public lecture, a Sigma Xi dinner will be held at 6 p.m. in the Prairie Room. Reservations may be made with Dr. Kenneth Larson, department of agronomy.

Dean Announces Honor List

Dean Caroline Budewig of the College of Home Economics at North Dakota State University has announced the names of 49 students who earned grade averages of "B-plus" or better during the Winter Quarter.

Included on the list are eight who compiled straight "A" averages. They are Kathryn Wilson, HE 1, Cheryl Grangaard, HE 2, Carmen Johnson, HE 2, Judith Garaas, HE 4, Sharon Schlafmann, HE 4 and Dorothy Toy, HE 4.

Others on the Winter Quarter Dean's List in Home Economics are:

FRESHMEN: Shirley Anderson, Glenda Berg, Sharon Braaten, Meryl Edwards, Arla Johnson, Linda Larson, Karen Mumm, Janet Olsen, Denise Shelton, Candis Cowles and Diane Offerdahl. Patrice Keifer was added to the fall quarter dean's list at mid-quarter after making up two incomplete grades.

SOPHOMORES: LaVonne Garad, Ann Kapaun, Jacqueline Wilcox and Darlene Vinje.

JUNIORS: Donna Blumhardt, Mary Darkenwald, Elaine Krick, Susan LaMarre, Patricia Larson, Sheryl Qualey, Wendy Pile, Frances Larson and Patricia Taylor.

Area Conference Slated For April

North Dakota State University will hold its second annual Research Conference April 23-24.

Principal focus of the two-day conference will be on regional research needs and ways in which area researchers can make a greater contribution to national and regional research efforts.

Water, wildlife and recreation, urban and rural life and community action and industrial developments will be emphasized by a series of nationally known speakers. North Dakota Governor William Guy will open the conference at a dinner on April 23.

The conference is being planned to stimulate interest among area college and university faculty members in taking part in sponsored scientific research, and to develop research projects keyed to the needs of the region.

Faculty members at neighboring institutions have been invited to take part in the conference, as have representatives of business, industry and government with interests relating to the topics to be discussed. Some 250 persons took part in the conference last year. Early indications are that attendance this year will be 400.
