

Candidates file for senate positions, Elections to be held Wednesday

by Mary Seltveit-Schieve

The response to fill student government positions has been good, as 47 students have filed for available offices.

The following people have filed for senate positions from the fraternity-sorority system: Noreen Sagmiller, Tim Burns, Marc Kuchne, Carol Griffin and Scott Malmberg.

Representing the Reed-Johnson complex are David Carlson, Mike DeLuca, Alan Carlson, Bill Devine, Wayne Grottman and Lauren Lundquist.

Kursten Lass, Julie Sherman, and Ann Reimers have filed for positions from Dinan, Weible, Burgum and Ceres.

The candidates from the High Rises include Kim Anderson, Carrie Bender, Keith Haider, Edward Wiest, Barb Rice, Greg Denio and Darcy Bosch.

Craig Sinclair, Barry Kartenson, Sandy Neidhardt,

Danny Johnston, Jeff Gehrke, Teresa Joppa, Paul Striegel, Bryon Thom, Jeff Thomas, Steve Plessey, Rick Bellis, Larry Blilie and Don Pearson are applicants for off-campus senate positions.

Jane Yseth and Lori Kyser have filed from University Studies.

Representing Churchill and Stockbridge are Peter Beckel, Dale Reimers, Jim Ferguson and Daniel Ray.

David Anderson is a candidate from married student housing and Donald DeKrey is from the Graver Inn.

Running for other positions are Steve Stahl for the Board of Student Publications, and Carla Peterson, Monica Gustafson, and Doug Dunford for Campus Attractions.

Positions open include one from Reed-Johnson, one from the fraternity-sorority residence system, two from the High Rises, one from Dinan-Weible-Burgum-Ceres, one from the Graver Inn, one from married student housing, one from Churchill-

Stockbridge, seven from off-campus, one from the Graduate School, one from University Studies, one from Campus Attractions and one from the Board of Student Publications.

Campaign expenditure statements must be in by 4 p.m. October 3. If turned in late, there will be a 10 percent vote dockage. If they are not in when the polls close, the votes will be discarded.

Posters and banners must be taken down by midnight October 3. The candidates are responsible for their own posters.

Elections will be held October 4 from 9 to 4 with voting booths in the West Dining Center, Residence Dining Center and the Memorial Union. Students must present an activity card or a new paper-ID plus some form of picture ID (drivers license, meal cards or old SU I.D.'s).

'Aurochs delirium', theme for Bison homecoming

Steven Yie, a freshman majoring in computer science, won $50 when he was chosen the winner of the Homecoming button design contest.

Yie's design was chosen among 41 entries that were turned in for the contest.

The Student Affairs Office announced the winner last Friday and when he was first contacted, Yie said, "I'll be right down to get my money!"

Yie said he was confident about his design winning. In high school he took several art classes and last summer he designed a logo for a Fargo business firm and also completed some art work for Fargo North.

When asked what he would do with the $50, Yie said, "I already spent it on art supplies!"

Judges for the contest were Student Center Program Director Carol Bjorklund, Design Instructor Tom Wagner, and Jeff Thomas of the Homecoming committee.

'Where is the yearbook?' Expected to arrive this week

The 1977-1978 Bison Yearbook is expected by yearbook editors sometime next week, according to co-editors Kim Madsen and Liz Overvold.

The yearbook is due to be delivered from the printers anytime after October 1," said Madsen in a recent interview.

To students familiar with yearbook production, the books are late in arrival due in part to late copy by the past editors of the annual.

"Every editor hopes to get everything done, proofed and back to the printers by the end of May," said Overvold. "It never seems to work quite that way."

Ideally, the books would have been back around the middle of August and could have been distributed by now.

Deadlines were pushed back and not met until the whole thing was late," said Madsen.

Approximately 900 of the 1700 books ordered have been sold already. "Many students are planning to purchase some of the remaining books this fall when they come back to school," said Madsen. "We think all the books will be sold."

The yearbook will be 264 pages long with nearly all the campus organizations pictured. Only 1500 students out of 7000 undergraduate students though, had pictures taken in March for the annual.

"We're hoping to get quite a few more people in this year's book," said Overvold.

"We also plan to get all the professors in it this year."

Last year, the staff photographers went from department to department and photographed the instructors while at work.

"Some, though," said Madsen, "were still missed."

Students interested in purchasing a yearbook, when the books arrive, may do so at the Activities Desk in the Union. Those students who have already purchased a yearbook will be able to pick up a copy at the same place after showing some form of identification.

Vandalism in Field House results in restricted hours for weight room

by Garvin Osteros

New restrictions implemented this year will mean students accustomed to using the weight room in the New Fieldhouse will have to plan on particular hours to work out.

The change came because of increasing vandalism and theft of equipment in the weight room and Fieldhouse in general.

Tom Barnhart, coordinator of leisure studies and recreational services, says, "This is about the only way the Fieldhouse staff can hope to stop the acts." He indicated that earlier in the summer, padded benches on weight equipment were sliced and some equipment was stolen, including speakers off the wall. The benches have since been reupholstered.

During the weight room's open hours, someone will keep watch on equipment to prevent any further problems.

This has brought criticism from at least one SU student whosays, "the actions taken were out of hand considering the rarity of the problem's occurrence."

"Comparing the repair costs to the wages paid out throughout the year, one can see that the damaged benches could be reupholstered several times during a school year," said Rodney Hagen.

Hagen also said that anyone familiar with weight lifting knows that to properly work out, one has to do it several times a week, and the new hour restrictions will make it an impossibility considering the class and studying schedule most students have.

Barry Bjornson burns the midnight oil in his humble abode in the backyard of FarmHouse. Actually, Barry is reading by lamplight, fed by an electric extension cord. For more ideas on tent life see page 6. (by ggg)

SPECTRUM EDITORIAL

Is there method in the madness of politics and public finance? Too often we hear politicians talking of tax breaks for us, while promising to shift the tax burden to some less deserving sector of the economy (the "other guy" syndrome). Unfortunately, after all the speeches have ended, everyone's been promised the same thing and all anybody ends up with is speeches.

This is not a far-off, Washington-based phenomenon. Take the case of the proposed tuition increase for N.D. schools and Wayne Stenehjem's proposed tuition tax credit.

The tuition increase is proposed for three reasons: 1) tuition at North Dakota's publicly-supported institutions of higher learning is low compared to surrounding states; 2) the percentage of the total cost of education paid by N.D. students is relatively low; 3) McCarney's initiated tax cut would require cutbacks in state spending, including education.

Representative Stenehjem's (R-Grand Forks) bill would provide tax breaks to students and their families to help ease the financial burden of going to college and make college education more affordable to more people. It would allow students or their parents to deduct from their income taxes half the cost of tuition, up to a maximum credit of $250 a year.

Both ideas have noble virtues, but it's a classic case of robbing Peter to pay Paul to make us all seem happier, while serving the interests of the politicians. We students would be charged an extra $100 a year in tuition, get back $250, pocket the healthy difference, proclaim Stenehjem the hero and send him back to Bismarck. In the meantime, the other legislators can go home and tell their non-student constituents they raised tuition to hold down government spending. The public will be happy, the politicians will be happy, the students will be happy, and their parents will be happy.

Whoever said money couldn't buy happiness?

A tale: How to live with a tuition increase

by Mike Jones

This year the homecoming theme is a simple one. "Aurochs delirium" is an Old English phrase which according to Webster's dictionary means bison fever. That's simple enough — if you really know what it means.

But just what does "Aurochs delirium" stand for? What ideas do people conjure up in their minds when they think of Bison Fever? Is Bison Fever a disease that is rampant in the Middle Ages like the Bubonic Plague? A disease spread by contact with cattle which caused humans to act in strange, bizarre ways? If so, maybe it would explain the way some fans act in the stands. Some of us are occasionally stereotyped as animals.

Bison Fever is just another name for the enthusiasm which spreads in epidemic proportions amongst the population at SU. Most people seem to come down with a case of the bovine infection just before they participate in an athletic contest as spectators.

There is no known cure for this peculiar illness except a separation of oneself from the University. And even that isn't guaranteed to solve the situation.

There are many people who believe in the "starve a cold, feed a fever" concept as a remedy for the "fever."

It is believed by some that consuming vast quantities of distilled spirits may serve to alleviate the symptoms. This is usually only true for a brief period the morning after. Actually this practice tends to strengthen the craze.

If your worries about catching this dreadful disease have increased tenfold by now, don't worry.

Bison fever is actually good for you. It's also extremely contagious. Freshmen catch it very easily after only one game.

In fact I hope everyone here at SU becomes terminally ill with Bison Fever. I hope everyone catches a good dose. Even if you aren't involved in an organization that is involved, may the fever be with you. And not just this fall or during homecoming but all year long — through basketball, wrestling, track, etc.

But I caution you. Don't get carried away with Bison Fever. We all know what happened to the cow presented by the West Fargo Stockyards at the first game. Poor critter was crazy enough to break her neck over the excitement.

My congratulations go to Steve Yie, the winner of the button contest. He got his case of fever early. It's a nice button.

My Home Sweet Tent

Barry claims that his air mattress is more comfortable than a regular bed.

Since alcohol is forbidden inside the FarmHouse, the tent in the back yard is a comfortable spot for a midnight bull session.

The hassles of lumpy beds, noisy roommates and slamming doors aren't bothering Barry Bjornson in his fall quarter housing. He's sleeping in a tent behind the FarmHouse Fraternity.

"It's unique. People think you've got to be crazy to live in a tent. But I'm not really bothering anybody out here, and there aren't any conveniences that I'm missing," said Bjornson, a junior at SU in Agriculture Education.

Originally Bjornson had planned to work in his grain bin construction business during fall quarter, but he cut his leg with a power saw and was unable to work.

"Since I had two weeks to kill while it healed, I decided I might as well come back to school," he explained.

Bjornson found an apartment that he liked, but wasn't able to rent it until October and meanwhile, he needed an alternate form of housing.

On his first night back in Fargo, he put up a tent for a night's sleep and has stayed there since.

Bjornson doesn't have to

"It's easy to clean, just turn it inside out."

stay in the tent. "There are still five beds open in the FarmHouse. I could have stayed out on the farm with Mark, my winter quarter roommate, or stayed with my brother in Fargo. But this is unique," said Bjornson. Bjornson says it's just like having your own room, and besides enjoying the privacy, no one comes in after hours and slams the doors.

"It's just as good as staying indoors, especially when it's hot." During the hot spell the first week of the quarter, several of his brothers in FarmHouse came out with sleeping bags for an overnight visit. "But on cold nights it's tough. Last night I had to sleep with three sleeping bags on," Bjornson said.

The tent has most of the conveniences of home. An extension cord provides power for the study light on his desk and an air mattress makes a comfortable bed. Bjornson showers and eats in the Farm-tain. When cleaning it, Bjornson just throws everything outside and turns the tent inside out.

Tent life is dependent on the weather.

One night, during the rain Bjornson stood up, touched the tent top with his head and water started leaking in.

"Once it started moving in I started moving out," said Bjornson. He spent the next three days in the FarmHouse waiting for the rain to stop.

The tent has plenty of room. It's 10 feet by 8 feet and reaches 6 feet, 6 inches to the center pole.

Since alcohol is forbidden in the FarmHouse, you might find a group out in the tent downing beers on these late evenings.

But remember, if you come to visit Barry, don't knock.

Put the Bull where your beer is.

Six stories, one plot: The Romance of Our Age is Technology.

Rendezvous In Spain.

You're a software applications specialist.

When you picked this career, you never dreamed that one day you'd rendezvous in Barcelona, Spain with two Navy destroyers.

But when your company is Texas Instruments and one of your customers is the U. S. Sixth Fleet, you learn to expect the unexpected.

The destroyers are equipped with computers and they need new software fast. You come aboard and sail with the Fleet until your job is completed.

Not a bad assignment for a software specialist named Susie. You're glad you got into technology.

The Incredible Talking Chip.

You're an integrated circuit designer at TI.

You've helped find a way to make chip talk, something no integrated circuit has ever done before.

First application: an electronic aid that helps children learn to spell. The world's first talking textbook.

And that's just the beginning. The talking chip's potential is mind-bending. You're glad you got into technology.

The Salesman's Dream.

You're a TI sales engineer. You've got what is probably one of the most irresistible selling messages in the history of salesmanship.

It goes like this: "Hold this TI-59 Scientific Calculator in your hand. Now, let's compare it to the most popular computer of the 1950s—the IBM 650.

"The 650 weighed almost three tons, required five to 10 tons of air conditioning and 45 square feet of floor space. And it cost $200,000 in 1955 money.

"Now look at the TI-59 Calculator you're holding in the palm of your hand. It has a primary memory capacity more than double that of the 650. It performs its principal functions five to 10 times faster. And it retails for under $300."

With a story like this, the hardest part of your job is holding onto your sample. You're glad you got into technology.

The Joy Of Complication.

You're in semiconductor design at TI. You love it when people at parties ask you what you do. You say, "I make things complicated." (Pause.) "In fact, I got promoted recently for creating some major complications."

What you mean (but seldom explain) is this: the more active element groups (AEGs) you can put on a single chip of silicon, the more the average AEG cost goes down.

In short, you make things cheaper by making them more complicated.

Your work made it possible for a TI consumer product that sold three years ago for about $70 to sell today for $14.95.

Your future looks wonderfully complicated. You're at 30,000 AEGs per chip now and 100,000 is in sight.

You're glad you got into technology.

Outsmarting Smog.

You've always designed airborne radars for TI customers.

Now, all of a sudden you know your next radar design is going to stay at the airport. On the ground.

It's on the ground that traffic controllers at Los Angeles International Airport have a problem. They can "see" incoming and outgoing airplanes on their radar just fine, so long as the airplanes are in the air.

But when the airplanes are on the ground—touching down, taking off, taxiing, parking—they are sometimes impossible to see and control. Ground smog obscures them.

You believe you have an answer to the smog problem. You dig out the plans for an airborne ground-mapping radar you helped design. You adapt the design so the L. A. controllers can use it to see through smog. It works beautifully.

Today your smog-piercing radar is widely known as Airport Surface

Detection Equipment (ASDE). It's standard equipment at L. A. International and at the airport in Geneva, Switzerland. Other airports with smog and snow problems are expected to have it soon.

You're glad you're in technology.

Oil Sleuths International.

You're a geophysicist. A good one. You could be with any of the big oil companies. But you wanted to get with a company whose specialty is the same as yours. Exploration.

That's why you're at TI, in Geophysical Service.

TI explorer ships, TI photo-geologic aircraft and TI truck- and tractor-mounted vibrator systems are working all over the world. They're finding oil. And they're identifying areas where no oil exists, thereby saving huge losses in drilling costs.

Also, TI's worldwide computer network and its Advanced Scientific Computer is making 3-D recording and processing possible. This exclusive exploration technique is the only practical way to unscramble "no-record" areas on land and sea.

You're a happy sleuth. You're in on the biggest hunt in history. And your team is out in front.

You're glad you got into technology.

If you're not in technology yet, think it over. If you are in technology, talk to Texas Instruments.
