Guidelines relating to discrimination in athletics to help SU's program

The new federal guidelines to eliminate sex discrimination from college athletics proposed by Health, Education and Welfare last week may help SU's athletic program, according to SU officials.

"At this point I see that there will be a recognizable gain in women's athletics, but I think it's important to look at whether we at SU are ready for it," said Lynn Dorn, director of women's athletics.

Dorn said the athletic department wants to raise the standards of the women's programs without hurting the men's and with the help of men's athletics.

"We do feel we're making a deliberate and substantial gain in trying to equalize the two programs," she said.

Dr. Ade Sponberg, director of athletics and physical education, agreed that the women's programs are growing.

"We've come along cautiously, but we don't want to pour money into it if it'll hurt the entire program," he said.

The Carter administration said Wednesday that college football teams are unique and don't have to meet the same standards as other sports.

"I would support the exemption of football because it is vital to the entire program, both men's and women's," said Dorn.

Sponberg said without the football exemption the guidelines would severely damage the football program.

"I truly believe that there would be total destruction of college football," he said.

Sponberg said the athletic department is presently waiting for the federal register to see the specific guidelines set by HEW, but said he foresees a change in SU's programs.

"If the quality of our programs has to be reduced because of the guidelines, I see a real change in what we know of as intercollegiate athletics. On the other hand, if exemptions are made I see that as helping to provide for the rest of our program, both men's and women's."

Sponberg said the guidelines would also prompt significant legislation as far as The North Central Conference is concerned.

Dorn said the basic philosophies of AIIW differ from those of NCAA where recruiting procedures are concerned.

"HEW doesn't address the fact that we are two organizations with different policies and rules," she said. Hopefully we won't change our philosophies due to this."

John Giese, president of the Finance Commission said that if football is exempted from the guidelines, "after that it's not too bad," but said that increasing the financing for the women's program at SU would have to be on a gradual basis.

System to report progress at state legislature set

A flow system to report lobbying progress at the legislature was established by the Student Senate at its meeting Sunday night.

Bonita Borner, president of the Congress of Student Organizations, explained that she and Student President Dennis Walsh will act as lobbyists at the legislature in Bismarck. Seven student senators, representing each of North Dakota's districts, will act under them.

With this system, if a problem with a particular Senator or Representative arises at the legislature, Walsh or Borner will contact the Senator in the appropriate district who will then contact the members of that district to put pressure on their Senator or Representative.

The Senate also approved four appointments and granted recognition to two organizations at its meeting

Sunday.

Appointments to Board of Student Publications were Eldon Becker and Nancy Rustad. Appointments to the Campus Attractions Board were James Lodoen and Doug Dunford.

Organizations recognized were Native American Students and Rahjahs.

Bonnie Buckeye resigned as NDSA delegate at the Senate meeting and the Senate elected Teresa Joppa as the new delegate.

The Senate also approved a special election to fill a Senate vacancy in the College of Agriculture. Filing will open Jan. 8, 1979, and close Jan. 12. A candidates meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Jan. 14.

The poster and banner campaign will open Jan. 14 and close at midnight Jan. 17.

Elections will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 18 in Morrill Hall.

Emde heads GRASS, a service of N.D. colleges

by Lori Keller

Hey man, you want a hot tip on GRASS?

GRASS, Government Relations and Student Services, deals with the city and other colleges in the state and North Central Conference, works with Tri-college and dorm concerns and does the public relations for SU's student government, according to Mardi Emde, head of GRASS.

"GRASS is concerned with so many broad things that I can't explain everything under my realm of power," she continued. "It took me three months to get down what I'm supposed to do."

A major part of Emde's time is spent on Inter-Residency Hall Council and student relations.

She currently sends out 18 to 20 letters a week to the colleges in North Dakota and the North Central Conference.

These letters deal with what is happening at SU, particularly in student government.

At the same time, Emde receives the same number of letters in return, informing her of what is happening at each particular college.

"I usually work with the president or secretary of the student government at most colleges," she said. SU is the only college with a position such as hers.

Also under student relations, Emde works with the bulletin boards in the Union and dining centers.

The other major concern of Emde's is Inter-Residency Hall Council.

IRHC is composed of dorm government and food staff representatives.

It deals with student life in dorms and tries to straighten out any problems with the food program.

Emde is currently working with the Moorhead State College IRHC program.

"They have a really strong program and hopefully it will revitalize SU's program," she said.

Last year was the first time Government Relations and Student Services were combined.

The GRASS position is filled by appointment through the executive office and must be approved by the Student Senate.

Emde, a senior in home economics education, was appointed to the position in September.

She said this position is one with a lot of potential and power.

"I make it what I want it to be. There are no strict guidelines."

Her major goal is "to get over the joking aspect of GRASS, so that people will use the services available through the position," Emde continued. "I don't feel the position is being used to its fullest extent."

Mardi Emde

She said she wishes the Student Senators and students would use GRASS. "I am a resource person," she said. "I am here for the students and am available for any student concern."

The major reason GRASS isn't used more is because people don't know what it is, Emde said.

"Nobody can explain it better than me and even I need help."

Along with Emde, three student senators, Greg DeNio, Bonnie Buckeye and Craig Sinclair, help with GRASS.

"They assist me in matters that I can't do alone," she explained. "They make the student services part work."

GRASS is a part of the Student Senate but not a voting member. It is a part of the executive branch.

New officers elected for NDSA

Three resignations and one impeachment resulted from the North Dakota Student Association meeting Saturday in Bismarck.

President John Power, Vice President Rick Bellis, and Treasurer Jane Kostenko resigned their offices and Secretary Kim Sturlaugson was impeached.

New officers elected were Mike Silvernagel, President (UND); Jeff Peterson, Vice President (Minot); Carmaine Ereth, Secretary (Dickinson); Bryon Thom, Treasurer (ND-SU).

No decisions were made concerning legislative strategy or what will be done to fight the proposed tuition increase.

Loftsgard to swap jobs with Steiger president

Tomorrow Pres. L.D. Loftsgard will swap jobs for the day with Steiger Tractor Company President Jack Johnson.

"We've talked about this for a long time," said Loftsgard. "There's been some good natured bantering back and forth about which one of us has the toughest job. Now we'll have an opportunity to look at what it is the other guy is actually doing."

Johnson has headed up Steiger Tractor Company since November 1970 when he left Melroe Manufacturing Company of Gwinner, where he was vice president of engineering and manufacturing.

Raised on a farm near Oakes, N.D., Johnson is a 1959 SU mechanical engineering graduate. Today, Johnson is a member of the board of directors of the SU Development Foundation and the national chairman of the nearly completed $2 million Music Education Center Fund Drive.

Loftsgard has served as president since June of 1968. From Park River, he is the first native North Dakotan to serve as president since the state's land grant university was founded in 1890.

Loftsgard earned a B.S. in agricultural economics at SU in 1954, and a Ph.D. in agricultural economics from Iowa State University in 1958.

SU choir to perform over CBS radio

The SU Concert Choir is one of 10 university choirs selected to perform for a radio series, the CBS Cavalcade of Christmas Music.

The half-hour program featuring the SU Choir will be aired at 10:35 a.m. Christmas Day by KFGO-Radio, 790.

The SU choir was chosen to perform through a taped audition.

Among other schools performing for the program will be the University of Southern California, Princeton University, Kansas State University, the Coast Guard Academy, Memphis State University and Baylor University.

The 49-member SU choir is directed by Dr. Edwin Fissinger, chairman of the Department of Music.

The choir will sing "Alleluia" by Randall Thompson; "Ascendit Deus" by Gallus; "For Now is the Time of Christmas" and "Love Came Down at Christmas" by Fissinger, and "O Magnum Mysterium" by Victoria.

Narrator for the program is C. H. Logan, SU broadcasting director. Recording engineer was Don Geiken of Mark Custom Records, Fargo.

The selections sung on the CBS program also will be performed at the SU Christmas concert at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 13, in Festival Hall.

The SU music department is in the process of producing a record and several of the Christmas selections will be included. The record is scheduled for release early next fall.

New Title IX guidelines: Good move, but students will have to cough up the money

The new guidelines governing the financing of men's and women's athletics should prove to be a boost to the women's program—at the expense of the men's, and all the other programs financed by the student activity fee.

Issued last week by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Title IX guidelines require colleges to spend as much money on their women's athletic programs as they spend on their men's athletic programs, on a per participant basis. Thus, if a school spends $400,000 on its men's athletic program and has 200 men's intercollegiate varsity athletes, it spends $2,000 per man. It must then also spend $2,000 for each women athlete participating in intercollegiate sports.

With HEW Secretary Joseph Califano hoping to implement these guidelines by September of next year, SU's student Finance Commission will be faced this spring with drastically increasing the women's athletics' 1979-80 budget. The only other alternative is to reduce the expenditure for the men's program to equal that of the women's.

But government rarely reduces its expenditures for any program. Besides, the purpose of the new guidelines is to build up the women's programs, not to tear down the men's programs. Finance Commission will be forced to find the money somewhere else. That somewhere else will be a little shaved off the budgets of the small clubs and alot shaved off the bigger groups—mostly the arts groups (LCT, Fine Arts, Art Gallery) and student services such as the Spectrum, KDSU and Campus Attractions. Experimental and innovative programs like the free bus service will be the first to get the ax.

However, one other alternative exists that undoubtedly will be tried. Owing to the efficiency of the tight-fisted Finance Commission, SU has one of the lowest student activity fees around. Talk has already drifted around the student government offices of raising the $30 quarterly fee to $32. This would provide an additional $42,000, most of which could go to finance women's athletics.

The guidelines are a good thing for intercollegiate athletics and have been a long time in coming, being issued six years after the 1972 education act that mandated equality. Perhaps no longer will we see $150,000 granted to SU's men's athletic program, while only $30,000 is given to the women's program.

But while more money will now be spent to upgrade women's sports to the level they deserve, it is we students who will have to cough up that money.

Every generation has its own heroes. In earlier times it was MacArthur, Eisenhower, and Roosevelt. Or Tarzan, Superman, and the Three Stooges, depending on your caliber of concentration.

Our generation, too, has one and that is Steve Martin. This campus has been hit by Steve Martin mania. Everything has become wild and crazy.

No one has a wild party, a rowdy party or even an all-nighter anymore. It's a wild-and-crazy party. Every person at that party is wild-and-crazy and even the music played is wild-and-crazy.

And so, many activities that previously would be minor law offenses have become "wild-and-crazy" times. Take, for example, a few antics I've heard of that have been "wild-and-crazy."

Taking a road trip across the state of North Dakota to get the mail at the home ranch. No other purpose than that--just to get the mail. Road trips have officially become wild and crazy times.

Stealing Christmas trees. A place on Main Avenue in Fargo found one morning that about 30 Christmas trees were missing. What used to be "Grinch that stole Christmas trees" attitudes have become "wild-and-crazy."

(Besides, isn't that the true Christmas spirit?)

School spirit at the basketball games. Thanks to Steve Martin, SU now has a wild-and-crazy pep band, coach, and very wild-and-crazy cheerleaders. (Who said blondes have more fun?)

Even getting drunk. No one gets totalled, wasted, or even plowed anymore. They, instead, get wild-and-crazy.

But these are only a few possibilities. Just think what we could do with that phrase "wild-and-crazy." "Come to the Wild-and-Crazy Disco for a wild-and-crazy time." This disco, naturally, would have Steve Martin records playing in the background throughout the evening.

Of course, the disco could serve a Wild-and-Crazy drink. The recipe for a Wild-and-Crazy drink would be anything the bartender took a mind to mix up. It would never be the same twice, and, more than likely, would get the drinker wild-and-crazy in a hurry.

Why not a class in Wild-and-Crazy? Every quarter, the registrar could spin a wheel and choose a department. That lucky department would then be permitted to offer a class in Wild-and-Crazy. Of course, no one would know which one is the class. Only the true wild-and-crazy people would know it.

How about a Wild-and-Crazy lottery? Tickets for the lottery would be sold for $1 a piece. The wild-and-crazy winner could choose any of his classes to receive an A and get it. How's that for wild and crazy?

Best of all, they need not have a Happy Hour anymore. It'll be Wild-and-Crazy hour.

Holidays, too, could become wild-and-crazy. New Year's Eve would be celebrated as Wild-and-Crazy End/Start of the Year. Wild-and-Crazy End/Start of the Year parties would serve only "wild-and-crazy."

Who knows maybe someday kids will write letters to Steve Martin and pour out their Yuletide requests. Happy Wild-and-Crazy!

NDSU's OWN

Hello, Mike Keller is my name and I have a great gift idea for you for Christmas. I am releasing my own tapes and record featuring Kent Taylor of NDSU singing harmony on many of the songs. All material on the record is my own. Side 1 will be easy listening songs which I have written with titles like: This World Is Going Too Fast, You Gave To Me, Life's A Song, and Reflections. Side 2 will be songs of worship.

Only the cassette will be ready in time for Christmas. If you liked last year's Keller and Taylor coffeehouse, you'll love this collection of songs. Order today! I must have your order by December 17th to insure Christmas delivery for the cassette.

The songs on side two of the record are my own arrangements of the Lord's Prayer, Holy Holy, Hallelujah, Amen, Lamb of God, and Glory to God.

The cassette and 8-track tapes will contain all the music on the record and some old songs like: Five Hundred Miles, Blowin in the Wind, Let it Be Me, I Believe, Today, and others. I have been persuaded to do one or two songs-singing like DONALD DUCK and those have been a RIOT!

Boyle feels designing for FMCT is a lifestyle

by Julie Holgate

"I was looking around backstage when some guy on a ladder asked me if I was here to work. I said 'why not' and by the end of two weeks, I had donated 60 hours to the show."

John Boyle, stage designer at the Fargo Moorhead Community Theatre, tells how he deserted a Music Education major to enter the field of drama.

While accompanying a fellow musician on a play tour, Boyle, a Schenectady, N.Y. native, discovered his interest in theatre.

"I need variety to survive. Theatre never stays the same. A play doesn't change, but each show is different. It's not a job for me and it's not a hobby. It's more a lifestyle. My job demands time, effort and concentration, but it's not dull."

Boyle works with the director of the FMCT, Marty Jonason, and together they discuss the approach to the play.

"He explains his concept of the play and we impart qualities of what is going to be happening on the set," Boyle said.

He then goes to work as designer, carpenter and laborer to create the surroundings that set the mood for the scenes of the play.

In a community theatre such as Fargo's, an overlap of duties must be expected because of the lack of help. It doesn't bother Boyle, though, who is willing to give up some specialization for the small town enthusiasm that Fargo generates.

"I was taken by the commitment, desire and will power of the staff here. We get a lot of cooperation from the people."

"There is more good theatre in the Midwest than where I'm from. The cultural level is higher in Fargo-Moorhead than upstate New York. Back there, everything is at a faster pace, more competitive. It's cutthroat. Here, a whole community works to make itself outstanding."

Boyle feels comfortable in the relaxed and friendly Midwest atmosphere that Fargo offers.

"I like it here. I am especially impressed with the interaction between the three colleges and the community."

"The young people have a different viewpoint of life. The 'don't-want-to-get-to-know-you' attitudes are gone. People are more trusting. Fargo is definitely different, not inferior, just different."

North Dakota weather doesn't faze him at all.

"I did my graduate work at the University of Minnesota and that was a little colder than New York, but it is no big change to Fargo. Once it hits 25 below, who can tell the difference?"

One thing Boyle does miss about New York is the night life.

"In Fargo, you stay out until 1 a.m., then you're done. In New York, we keep going until after three. And there is not always straight disco. There will be a dance set followed by a stage show."

He has not had a chance to see the rest of North Dakota since his arrival in September because his job takes up so much time. This is the first real test of his ability as a designer, which he admits he was not too sure of.

"I was not confident that I could actually do a good job. I wanted to start in a small area until I really believe and see I can do it. This is a chance to see what I can and can't do."

Boyle and the rest of the FMCT staff are looking forward to this season. Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" is scheduled for January and Aristophanes'

John Boyle makes some final adjustments to the lighting for the upcoming play 'A Christmas Carol.' (Photo by Kendall K. Krebs)

"Lysistrata" will be presented in early February.

The playreading committee tries to keep a balance of modern popular and traditional plays, with audience reaction favorable to both.

Boyle cites community enthusiasm as causing the need for building expansion and technical improvements. He wants to be around to see all happen.

"We're a very ambitious theatre. We keep stretching every year."

Boyle plans to stay for couple more years to build and grow with the community theatre.

"I'll stay while I'm still learning. Then it will be time to move on."

'Alice in Wonderland' to be put on by FMCT classes

From the Lewis Carroll classic brought vividly to life on the FMCT stage, the FMCT Saturday Morning Live acting and technical classes will perform "Alice in Wonderland" Jan. 6 and 7.

FMCT resident costume designer, Dean Mogle, has added to the fantasy with his colorful and expressive costumes. Of the many costumes required, 13 will be three-dimensional.

John Boyle and his SM "Techie" crew will be charge of designing and constructing the ethereal set and lighting. Lin Baesler will serve as the director. Reservations open Dec. 18 after 5 p.m. by calling 235-6778.

'A Christmas Carol' to begin Friday at the FMCT

For the second consecutive year, Martin Jonason of the F-M Community Theatre will portray Ebenezer Scrooge in Dickens' immortal classic "A Christmas Carol." Doug Hamilton directs with setting and lighting by John Boyle and costumes by Dean Mogle

Following each performance of "A Christmas Carol" Santa Claus will be on hand with great local youngsters with small tokens of Christmas cheer!

"A Christmas Carol" runs Dec. 15 at 4 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Dec. 16 at 2 p.m., at 8:15 p.m. and Dec. 17 at 4 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. For more information, phone 235-6778

Five Bison reach double figures as SU downs Sioux Falls 90-60 Saturday

by Michelle Effertz

Three thousand fans watched the Bison handily defeat the Sioux Falls Cougars 90-60 at the SU New Field House Saturday night.

All five starters were in double figures for the Bison. Paul Shogren led the scoring with 20 points. Bruce Shockman and Brady Lipp followed with 12 points apiece. Mark Levenick and John Schmidt each pumped in 10 points.

The Bison led at halftime 49-33. They out-goaled the Cougars shooting 56 percent from the field to Sioux Falls' 42 percent.

SU was also more successful at the charity stripe making 83 percent of their free throws while the Cougars sunk only 63 percent of their attempts.

It was an aggressive game for both teams, as a total of 41 fouls were committed by the two squads. The Bison had 25 to the Cougar's 16. Shogren of the Bison fouled out late in the second half.

Both teams snagged 37 rebounds apiece, another indication of the aggressive play by the two teams.

The Bison upped their record to 6-1 with their fifth win in a row. This is the best start by a SU men's basketball team since 1970. The Cougars drop to 0-5 on the season.

Next game for the Bison is tonight at Concordia in a rematch of their earlier contest which the Bison won by four.
