

New music building an economic reality with Link's proposal

by Deb Farrell

The funding for SU's music building has finally come through in a special meeting Thursday, the State Board of Higher Education voted unanimously to accept Gov. Arthur Link's proposal to speed the construction of the $3 million building.

Link suggested state laws provide that the Board could authorize SU President L.D. Loftsgard to transfer $585,000 from the agricultural experiment stations and the agricultural extension service at SU to a special music building fund.

These funds, added to the existing construction fund, will trigger the release of the state funds to needed to finance the music building.

The music building is the first of six proposed buildings waiting state funds. A bill passed by the 1979 Legislature last spring allows any money in the state general fund above $148.6 million on June 30, 1979 (the biennium,) to be transferred to the construction fund to finance these buildings.

Now you see it, Now you don't

In early September, the state general fund's balance was reported to be almost $4.1 million over this trigger mark. However, Darrell Ohlhauser, the state's executive budget analyst, discovered a previously overlooked adjustment. This adjustment ultimately transferred $1.9 million of the general fund to the agricultural experiment stations and extension service at SU.

Although the $1.9 million was not needed by the program, a 1977 appropriations act declared this money must be transferred as emergency revenue.

Less building?

The remaining $2.3 million was transferred to the construction fund, but could not be released for the music building until the balance reached $3 million. The next date funds could be added was the next biennium, July 30, 1980.

Dick Crockett, SU legal adviser, indicated in mid-December that a year's delay in the construction of the music building could raise the cost of the building by $500,000—money that the construction fund could not provide according to the legislature's bill. More money would have to be found to build the same building because of inflation, said Crockett, or the University will have to settle for a smaller building at the same cost.

If at first you don't succeed....

Even though many people believed the music building would remain only an idea for another year or so, other people did not. In an official opinion, Attorney General Allen Olson said there were no legal objections to certain special funds being added or detracted from the state's general fund.

Olson's opinion created the possibility of transferring funds from the SU agricultural and experiment stations to the construction fund.

However, Ohlhauser reported to the Legislative Council's Budget Section that including the emergency funds held by the stations in the general fund would not be consistent with the state's accounting procedures.

After Ohlhauser's report, the hopes of the staunchest music building defenders began to wane.

Link to the Rescue

On Dec. 27, Link requested a special meeting of the Board on Jan. 10 to discuss certain proposals involving the SU music building.

"I believe we have found a sound and reasonable approach to the issue which will hasten the commitment of state general funds to this worthwhile project," Link wrote to Geraldine Clapp, chairman of the Board. Link thereafter declined to make any other comments on the subject until the meeting.

Link presented proposals to the Board involving the funding of the music building Thursday morning. He first proposed that the additional funds needed by the construction fund be supplied by the SU experiment station emergency funds. Link also proposed that the Board authorize Loftsgard to grant the money to a special music building fund or to the state general fund that would then forward the money to the building fund.

Finale

Thursday afternoon, the Board decided to instruct Loftsgard to transfer the needed funds. The proposal must now be approved by the State Emergency Commission. Link, the chairman of the Committee, told the Board he would support any transfer request.

It may not be the new music building, however when this house came through campus last month it got many people speculating. Fortunately, appropriations are being approved for a brand music building. (Photo by Mike DeLuca)

Closing procedures for severe weather announced

If the University is taking any action because of bad weather, the announcement will be made by 6 a.m. by Dr. Les Pavek, vice president for Student Affairs; Burt Brandrud, registrar, or another authorized University official.

Such a decision will be relayed immediately to the following radio and television stations: KFNW, KQWB, KFGO, KDSU, WDAY, WDAY-TV, KTHI-TV and KXJB-TV. All subsequent announcements will be made by the same stations.

One of the following typical announcements will be made:

(1) SU will be in full operation. (2) The morning classes at SU are cancelled. Announcements concerning afternoon classes will be made at 11 a.m.

(3) SU classes are cancelled (all personnel will be on regular duty even though classes will not be held).

(4) SU will be closed (personnel will not be expected to be at their posts except as their responsibilities may require they be on duty. When circumstances necessitate that certain persons remain on the job during University closings, all assignments and arrangements are to be made by their immediate supervisor).

(5) Evening classes are cancelled.

Fundraiser brings in nickels and votes for corrupt politicians

by Steve Sando

The College Republicans were raising money on Wednesday and asking students for two things: their opinion on who is the most corrupt in politics and a nickel to cast a ballot.

In the less than official election, national, state and student candidates as well as elected officials were put to the test.

At the national level, Democratic presidential candidate Ted Kennedy led the list, followed by Jimmy Carter, and Republican presidential hopeful John Connally. 3.63 percent of the students of SU cast ballots in that category.

ND State Tax Commissioner Byron Dorgan headed the list for the State officials. Gov. Arthur Link was a close second with state House Leader Earl Strinden rounding out the list. 2.4 percent of the students participated in that one.

As far as the campus was concerned, Don Pearson,

Mike Hanson and Laura Walke were selected as the top three. 4.15 percent of the students voted in this category on who was most corrupt.

Possibly because of the unlimited number of votes per person policy followed by the College Republicans, more than 800 ballots were cast.

FMCT announces new "snow check" policy

"Snow Checks" will be issued to ticket holders who are unable to attend performances due to inclement weather, it was recently announced by Fargo-Moorhead Community Theatre.

According to Robert Myers, General Manager, snow checks issued for mainstage performances will be valid for admission to any other mainstage presentation of the current season. Those issued for Children's Theatre productions will be valid for children's plays of the current season. Advance reservations, however, are required to insure admission.

Myers noted that the passes will be issued after 3 p.m. the day of the performance, and only to ticket holders living in areas where traveler's advisories have been announced by the National Weather Service.

Patrons must telephone FMCT by 7 p.m. the night of the performance to be eligible for the snow check. The admission tickets must then be submitted by mail or in person in order to receive the snow check.

Further details are available by telephone, 235-6778.

New Nonpartisan League for disillusioned citizens

by John Wittmayer

Are you one of the majority of Americans who did not vote in the last election? Are you dissatisfied with a government which was elected by a minority of the eligible voters?

Nonpartisan League might be an avenue of expression for those who answered "yes" to the above question. The organizers of the new NPL would like it to be a voice for those who are disillusioned with the present political system.

In recent elections, participation by more than 50 percent of eligible voters has been a rare occurrence. In effect, the majority of American voters have indicated "none of the above" as their preferred candidates.

Art Rude, organizing chairman of the new NPL, believes that the nation, and especially North Dakota, can no longer tolerate this rule by minority and special interest groups. He will be in Fargo Sunday, Jan. 13 to organize a League chapter in this area. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in Crest Hall of the Union.

Voter apathy has been most pronounced among younger citizens (18-25), although this same group is often most critical of legislation and elected officials. Rude, 26, feels the League could be a political outlet for this silent generation.

"I see more young people here tonight," Rude said at an organizational meeting in Bottineau, "than I have at any of the meetings I attended while working for the Democratic Party. Young people don't get involved in traditional political parties because they have no real voice in forming the policies of that party.

This would not be the case with the new NPL. All policies will be established at the League convention in February, and every member will have an equal vote in deciding these policies.

As of now, all proposals are merely discussion points, and the only goal of the new NPL is to get more people involved in the governmental process. The need for a populist movement in this state was impressed upon Rude while he was working for the finance committee of the Democratic Party during the last legislative session.

"North Dakota is in a dangerous situation going into the 1980 elections," Rude said. "This will be the first election in which corporate contributions are legal and in which federal public disclosure laws do not apply to North Dakota."

In other words, a coal or oil company could make an anonymous contribution of any size to the campaign of any state official, including the governor, and public service commissioner, key men in regulating the development of industry in this state.

"It would be naive to think that a $10,000 contribution would not mean $10,000 worth of allegiance owed," Rude said. "Interestingly, the defeat of public disclosure in North Dakota was sponsored by both the Republican and Democratic Parties."

To insure that the new NPL does not fall into the hands of the monied interests, $10 has been set as the maximum amount anyone can contribute to the League. Everyone will have an equal amount invested and an equal voice within the organization.

One of the factors that makes people hesitant to join a populist political movement is that it seems a hopelessly large task to redistribute political power.

"No task, not even building the great pyramids, is too large if you break it down to a workable level," Rude said. "Our plan is a simple one. We sell memberships in the League for $10 and ask each member to find two more people interested in joining. Since contributions are limited to $10, the only way we can get more revenue is to get more people involved in government."

He also points out that it worked before. This was basically the plan used by A.C. Townley in organizing the old Nonpartisan League in the early 1900s. This was at a time when North Dakota farmers were being ripped off by out-of-state banks and markets. The NPL took over the machinery of the Republican Party and the State government.

Among the reforms enacted were a state-owned bank and a state-owned mill and elevator. The old league ceased to be an active political force in the 1940s and 50s and merged with the Democratic Party, despite protests from many old-time Leaguers.

Rude feels that many of the conditions that made the old League necessary are reoccurring today. Among the issues to be discussed at the League convention are a revitalization of the state bank, expansion of the mill and elevator and state supported development of alternative energy sources.

One reform that Rude feels very strongly about is an anti-Peter Principle law that would limit the terms of public office holders. This would force the retirement of those who have risen to their level of incompetence, and since all terms would be limited, effective public servants would find more vacancies at the top.

Rude sees the new NPL as more of a public lobby than as a third political party. His strategy is to establish policies, endorse candidates of both parties who back those policies, and monitor their voting records to see if they follow through.

"At this point, running candidates would be a last resort," he said, "but these are just my ideas. Not only the policies, but the strategies and mechanics of the League will be decided by the members at the February convention."

Rude has been the driving force behind the movement, traveling the state recruiting new members and extending invitations to other populist movements. He formerly taught high school chemistry at Bottineau and worked as a press aide for the Democratic Party. He runs a stereo shop in Bottineau and does a disk jockey routine at night clubs and parties.

His enthusiasm has been contagious, attracting new NPL representatives in 11 towns around the state. He has held organizational meetings in Rolette, Bottineau, Minot and Bismarck with 43 members now enrolled in the League.

One new member recruited at the meeting in Bottineau last week was Jerroll P. Erickson, who was a member of the old NPL state executive committee and an NPL legislator from Bottineau County.

"You get more conservative with age," Erickson said. "I used to be a radical, but now I'm just a liberal. I stayed at the Co-op House when I went to NDSU in the late 1930s. In those days we were known as the campus socialists. We kept trying to get the president of the college to speak at the house. When he finally did come, he said it was the first time he had visited a fraternity house and he didn't have to break up a fight."

Erickson feels that the time is right for a revival of the NPL, since high interest rates and inflated energy prices are shaking many North Dakotans out of their complacency.

"There's room for a lot of liberalism in this state," he said. "Everyone from this part of the country was raised with the idea of owning their own home. These high interest rates are going to make that impossible for a lot of people."

Other old Leaguers who have joined the new NPL are Kenneth Ostriem and Oscar B. Thompson of Rollete. All interested persons are urged to attend the organizational meeting Sunday. More information can be obtained by writing: The new NPL, Bottineau, ND 58318, or by calling John Wittmayer, 293-7952.

Record review

by Dave Haakenson

Riding the success of their "Rumours" LP, Fleetwood Mac is now going strong with their latest, "Tusk."

I've always disliked the name of a hit song doubling as the album title, but I like the song "Tusk" anyway.

The University of Southern California Trojan Marching Band is on this track. They were recorded live at Dodger Stadium in New York, adding dimension to the song.

"Tusk," the song, is very bizarre, to say the least. It includes a somewhat African rhythm complete with bongo drums, chanting natives and whispering vocalist. Why the USC band was needed to complete this song is uncertain and only Fleetwood Mac knows for sure.

After "Tusk", it's downhill all the way.

With a $15.98 list price one would think there was something worthwhile to listen to. There isn't.

Since "Rumours" sold millions of copies, Fleetwood Mac and Warner Brothers Records decided to create a double-album of the same music.

Once reason the album is so expensive is its packaging.

Levi's ("Hey Mom! My foot has been seen by teenagers everywhere!"). The photo is raised, meaning you can feel its edges.

Inside, we find each disc covered by not one but two protective, heavy-paper jackets. Each jacket features excellent color photos and drawings. This is the best part of the album, but don't buy it for this reason.

Both discs have special labels pressed on the vinyl. This type of packaging is why the album is expensive for the potential buyer.

As for the songs, "Tusk" is the only original one. The rest are "Rumours Two"—very dull.

Don't get me wrong. I liked "Rumours," but that was two years ago. This music just doesn't make it anymore.

Best tracks yet not great: "Angel," "That's Enough For Me," "Not That Funny" and "Tusk."

The songs have boring melodies over used lyrics and are supposed to be Fleetwood Mac's best effort.

The band needs cleaning up. It's time to find a new direction for the group. The course they are now on leads nowhere.

During my four years in college, I've picked up quite a few pet peeves. Most of them aren't important enough to write about but there is one that I think I should say something about. I feel like bitching anyway.

The thing that really bothers me is when people come out of a test swearing up and down that they blew it away. Then after a few minutes they say that if their grade is bad it's because they only studied for an hour for the exam and spent the rest of the night down at Chubs.

All this time I know perfectly well that they'll get a grade in the high nineties. I'll manage to scrape out a B if I'm lucky, and this is after a night of heavy studying supported by massive doses of caffeine. By the time I walk in to take the test, I've got the shakes from too much coffee and too little sleep while the guy next to me has the shakes because of his late night at Chubs.

The next day, when we get the tests back, the guy next to me is still swearing that he got smoked by the exam. While he is saying this, I've got my fingers crossed hoping that I came out of it OK. When the instructor passes the tests back, I find that I've managed to slide through another one without too much damage. The guy next to me is SO surprised when he finds out that he aced it. (I knew it all the time.)

At this point, I begin to wonder if all that studying was really worth it or if I would have been better off doing a few 12 ounce arm curls at Chubs or Ralphs the night before the test instead. Then I remember the one time I tried that and really did get smoked by the test. This gets me more disgusted than ever that the guy sitting next to me can do it and still ace the test.

If I'm lucky I'll make it through the end of the year without committing a justifiable homicide. End of bitching session. There. I've said it. (Right, Julie?)

NEWS BRIEFS

Longshoremen Protest

ILA President Thomas Gleason has announced that in protest of recent intervention in Afghanistan, longshoremen will not handle Soviet ships and cargos. Gleason added that he would respect any requests from the White House. Longshoremen have, in recent weeks, refused to handle any shipment from Iran, in protest of the hostage situation.

Soviets In Kabul

Much of the Soviet presence in Afghan capital of Kabul has disappeared. Observers have suggested that the measure was taken to prevent street clashes. In the past few days, Soviet foot troops have stopped patrolling, and the only military vehicles seen have been Afghan Army ones.

Worker Ruling

An industry spokesman told the US Supreme Court that he feels a worker should have the right to withdraw from worksites that they feel are unsafe. However, a spokesman for the Whirlpool corporation said the worker could be fired for doing it. The Court is hearing an Ohio case about whether the government can forbid retaliation against employees who refuse a task on the ground that it's dangerous.

Carter Holds Meetings

President Carter met in Washington Wednesday with about 40 people who are active in foreign affairs or have served in previous administrations. The White House says it's one of a series of meetings to brief people on the Iran and Afghan situations.

Heating Cost Help

The Social Security administration acknowledged Wednesday that some poor people may receive money to offset winter heating costs, even though they don't get fuel bills.

to the editor:

Optimism at times is an excellent quality, but in certain events it can hide ugly truths. Pessimism, while widely disliked, sees certain events realistically. Unfortunately, undeniable episodes have occurred within the last seven years and have been building up in the last two.

These episodes are: the steady build-up of nuclear and conventional forces by the Soviet Union and her Warsaw Pact nations and the increasing number of nations (many quite important) becoming communistic, either by their own intents or by outside intervention.

These episodes give me a gut feeling that can be best labelled as WAR. Normally I'd call that the attitude of a pessimist and a right-wing war-monger, but I can't help but see that war is where it is all heading. I'll explain further.

To the leaders of the Soviet Union, their purpose is to bring communism to the world by passive or coercive methods. To them, the end justifies the means.

A question on that statement might be "Why, then, are the Russians always talking about peace and arms limitations?" Now, that is a fair question, but a rhetorical question would be "Why do the Soviets balk, cheat and fail to comply with treaties they sign with us and other countries?"

To me, the Soviets use anyone and anything to their own purpose and not for the betterment of the world. The Soviets have increased not only quantitatively, but also quality-wise, their nuclear and conventional weapons, way beyond the needs for defense or for a so-called peaceful nation.

The upcoming war will perhaps take place in western Europe in the style of Hitler's Blitzkrieg. Nuclear weapons will be saved for later. This unsound-looking prediction is based on one point—where does the Soviet Union expect the most resistance in its attempt to conquer the world?

Africa, the Middle East, and Asia are steadily falling into line. Even South America is slowly becoming communist. This leaves only one wall until North America is left.

to the editor:

I do not know Gyle Peterson (Into My Head), but our views on Paul Harvey are quite divergent.

While I support the right of everyone to express their own opinion, I do not condone and, in fact, detest character assassination and that was the course chosen by Peterson in his recent crusade against Paul Harvey.

Listening to Paul Harvey is a refreshing experience to

The invasion is not without problems. To maintain a large military machine on the move, a vast supply of oil is needed. Russia, meanwhile, will have to start importing oil in two to three years. The only remaining vast supply of oil is in the Mid-East. There is the problem.

As I said before, optimism is a respected quality, but sometimes we have to be realists, even if it's being pessimistic.

Russia is advancing into the Mid-East and building its armies. The time is now, for not only cool-heads but for wise decisions. We've got to maintain the Arab governments and gain the support of the Arab world, not only for our sake but for theirs.

me. He is one of the very few conservative individuals who have achieved a high status in the news industry.

Paul Harvey has long been an opponent of profligate government spending and deficit spending. He is a proponent of rebuilding our military strength as well as our intelligence-gathering mechanisms and internal security forces (CIA and FBI). The results of the policies of liberals in these areas can be seen in inflation of 13 percent and in Iran and Afghanistan.

Also it is refreshing to hear Paul Harvey saying that, in spite of its faults and problems, America is still the greatest country on earth—a country worth having pride in—instead of the route taken by others like Coleman McCarthy or Ellen Goodman who would encourage us to wallow in remorse over deeds long past and dead.

Let's hope that Peterson received the gift of maturity over Christmas so that we will not be subjected to a repeat of the very poor article on Paul Harvey.

An eagle keeps a watchfull eye on room 107 and the rest of the stuffed animals.

But they're stuffed Animals poised to strike

While going to class you may have noticed a bobcat, a fox, or if you're observant, a fieldmouse or two in the halls.

Don't rush over to Building and Grounds complaining of the rodent infestation because what you probably saw was part of the Stevens Hall stuffed animal collection.

"Virtually all North Dakota species are represented in our exhibit," said Will Bleier, assistant professor of Zoology. Bleier is in charge of the mammals section.

Not only are there animals in the hallway display cases, but there are many species of mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, and fish located in adjacent rooms.

Room 107 houses most of the smaller species. They are stored in large filing cabinets.

One of the more unusual animals in the exhibit is a stuffed Whooping Crane, a very rare bird on the endangered species list.

The animals on display in the museum room and in the outside display cases are part of the university's classroom and research projects, he noted.

The specimens are used to develop an understanding of the way the animal lived, Bleier added.

Of the more than 4,500 North Dakota species the exhibit holds, many are easily identified. However, students looking at the many different species of mice have to rely on something more accurate than just a visual scan of the mammal's hide, especially when most of the mice look alike. For these kinds of cases they use skull character identification.

"The most effective and accurate way to identify the different species is by the skull's characteristics," Bleier said. "A lot can be told by just the skull alone."

By measuring bone lengths and shapes of the skull, the species can be identified with about a 99 percent accuracy rate, he added.

This bobcat makes threatening gestures to students walking through the halls of Stevens.

Most of the mounted animals and birds presently in the exhibit were collected and mounted in the 1910's and 1920's.

Now there are so many different species in Stevens Hall that storage is one of the major problems faced by the department, Bleier said. "We can't add very many new specimens because there isn't room for them."

However, they do occasionally get a new and better specimen of a particular mammal, bird, reptile, amphibian, or fish through research projects or students as part of classroom assignments.

FMCT ticket office hours have been extended

The ticket office at Fargo-Moorhead Community Theatre has extended its hours and days of operation. Season members will be invited to reserve seating three weeks before productions instead of the customary two-week period.

Also, the ticket office will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays to allow patrons access to reservations on their lunch hours. Previously, opening time was 1 p.m. weekdays.

According to Robert Myers, FMCT general manager, the extended hours are being enforced to allow season members greater opportunity to place reservations. Myers noted that members will now have two full weeks to place reservations before the general public.

Tickets for the upcoming FMCT production of "Vanities" went on sale to season members today and will be available to the general public Jan. 25. In addition, the ticket office will be open to members only tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. "Vanities" opens Jan. 31.

Johansen named juror for FMCT design competition

A world-renowned architect and theater designer, John M. Johansen, will serve as juror for the Architectural Design Competition, being sponsored by Fargo-Moorhead Community Theatre.

Johansen is well known internationally for such designs as the United States Embassy in Dublin, Ireland, and domestic creations related to the live performing arts such as Clowes Memorial Hall of Butler University in Indianapolis and the theater complex of Charles Center in Baltimore.

Johansen graduated from the Harvard Graduate School of Design in 1941. He serves as a visiting critic and lecturer at a number of universities. Johansen will speak at 7:30 p.m., Tues. Jan. 15, in Van Es auditorium on the SU campus.

Other jurors on the panel include Herbert Ketcham, a practicing architect who serves on the faculty of the University of Minnesota, and Robert Feder, immediate past president of FMCT.

The competition is being held to facilitate the submission of a variety of design solutions to certain support space problems currently being faced by FMCT.

Your unexpanded flower-buds fair

Hold for us flavours fine and rare,

Welcome your petals in our home

Though Nature chose you should not bloom.

Cloves are the unexpanded flower-buds of Caryophyllus aromaticus—one of the few spices that is used all over the world. It finds its way into the most exotic of meat dishes and even into desserts, a truly versatile spice.

Cloves are very rich in essential oils; hence, when it is ground, the powder tends to clump together. Dealers, in order to make it acceptable to the customer, adds some free flowing agent and starchy flour to it. Consequently, the clove powder that finds its way to our kitchen is very dilute.

It is for this very reason that experts will advise you to buy spices in their whole form—it saves money and certainly enhances your food better than the powders can.

So buy your cloves and cinnamon whole and when you want to use them just take the required amount and crush it by rolling a rolling pin over it. You can do the same with ginger and garlic pieces.

Clove oil is a good pain killer. If you happen to develop a tooth ache and there's no dentist nearby, just take a clove and bite it with the hurting tooth, your pain will disappear soon and will stay away till you get to your doctor.

Cloves have been used throughout the world, but the East really tops the list. They cure their lamb and pork with it, and flavour their spinach and even their milk shakes with it. I have a few recipes here collected from different parts of the world that have one thing in common - cloves!

LAMB CHOPS * PAKISTAN SYTLE

4-5 lbs lamb chops
2 t salt
2 lg tomatoes
2 t sugar
2 T lemon juice
3 whole allspice (or 1 t powder)

¼ caraway
1 t parsley flakes
1 t red or cayenne pepper
½ c chopped fresh chives
5 whole cloves (crushed)
3 T oil
1 small onion, ringed

Wash lamb chops in hot water, trim excess fat and cut into serving size. Lay in a glass casserole, sprinkle the spices and the lemon juice, chives and the onions. Mix well and set aside for half an hour. Heat a heavy iron skillet and add the oil. Wait till it begins to smoke lightly, add the sugar and let it brown.

Carefully add the lamb chops will all the spices and stir well for about 10 minutes. Add the tomatoes, cut into pieces, cover and simmer for 20-25 minutes, stirring well. Serve hot with rice. Makes 6 servings.

Along the southern coast of South India lies a fishing state, Kerala. Truly the Keralites have some of the most mouth watering dishes that use an unusual combination and there is an added touch of cloves to it. This is best with some small fish like Smelt.

KERALA FRIED FISH

1 lb cleaned, washed fish
4 T grated coconut
2 lg cloves crushed
1 t salt
½ t red pepper (optional)
1 T lemon juice
1 T sesame seeds
1 T flour
1 T oil or butter

Mix salt, red pepper, cloves, lemon juice and flour. Coat fish evenly with this mixture and fry it in a little oil. Place this on a serving dish.

Heat the butter or oil, quickly add the grated coconut, sesame seeds and remove from heat stirring constantly until the coconut browns lightly.

Top fish with this mixture and serve hot.

U Animal Science Dept. goes on the run

The Animal Science Department turned out in full force Sunday, Dec. 9, to easily win the Faculty-Staff One-Hour Run Championship at the New Field House in running 452 laps.

Finishing second in the competition was the Business Economics team, followed by the Campus Recreation team.

The highest average number of laps was recorded by the Agricultural Engineering team, followed by Student Affairs and Business Economics.

The Sociology Department also competed in the run.

Sponsors of the run were Stan Koska Sporting Goods, On the Run-Runners Shop, Winners' Circle-Runners Shop, Varsity Mart, and the Recreation Department. A spring run is being planned.

7 Bison sporting events to fill calender for next 7 days

by Murray Wolf

Sports fans will be treated to several Bison sporting events in the coming week. Seven contests in four different varsity sports are on tap for the seven days starting today and ending January 17th.

The SU Women's Gymnastics team will host the NDSU Invitational Gymnastics Meet tomorrow at the New Fieldhouse. Action gets underway at 10 a.m. with the Bison squad bringing an 0-1 record into the tournament.

The Bison Men's Basketball team will be on the road for three games in the next few days. They will take their 4-7 overall record and 2-0 conference mark to the University of Nebraska-Omaha tonight, and then move on to Northern Colorado for a second conference game tomorrow. The Bison cagers will wrap up their road trip against Oral Roberts University on the 14th.

The SU Women's Basketball squad, fresh off a 67-56 win over Valley City State last Tuesday, will play two games at home. First they will put their 6-5 overall record on the line against St. Olaf tomorrow at 2 p.m. Then, the women will take on the State School of Science here at home at 7:30 p.m. on the 15th.

After demolishing Moorhead State and Concordia by scores of 52-0 and 37-3 at the All-City Meet at Concordia, the Bison wrestling team takes their 2-0 dual record back home for a match against Montana State on the 15th.

The men's Swimming Team, with an 0-2 record so far, will not be in action again until January 18th when they go against Mankato state. The indoor track season will resume January 26th with competition against South Dakota State and Moorhead State here in Fargo.

SU women cagers down VCSC Vikings 67-56

by Jane Yseth

It was an exciting night for the women cagers as they downed the Valley City State Vikings 67-56 Tuesday evening at the Old Fieldhouse.

The Vikings, who placed second in the SU-MSU Holiday tournament, fell to a quick 12-0 deficit as the Bison burned in six buckets from the field in the opening minutes of the game.

The Bison took charge throughout the first half, displaying an aggressive defense, precise passing and a fast break that couldn't be stopped.

With just two seconds remaining in the first half, Viking Vicki Onerheim fouled SU's Laura Jacobson who dropped two from the charity stripe leaving the Bison at a 39-25 advantage at the half.

The Vikings were determined not to give up easily, though, as they inched up on the Bison during the second half, trailing only 53-48 with nine minutes remaining.

Turnovers, poor shooting and fouls plagued the Bison in the next few minutes. However, they managed to hang onto a 57-52 lead with four minutes remaining.

Time ticked off slowly as fouls followed one after another. SU's Lori Knetter and Valley City State's Vicki Onerheim both retired to the bench early, with five apiece.

SU's scoring attack and strong defense reappeared with three minutes remaining, and they came on strong, leaving the score 67-56 at the final buzzer.

It was a good night for SU's Jacobson as she held the hot hand for the Bison with 27 points and also grabbed rebound honors with 14. SU's Shelley Oistad hit double figures with 20 points and 12 rebounds.

Barb Woken added 21 points for the Vikings, followed by Dawn Goter with 15.

Both SU and Valley City State were even up from the field with 38 percent, but the Bison gained at the charity stripe with 63 percent compared with the Vikings' 33 percent.

The win bumps the Bisons' season win-loss tally to 6-5 while the Vikings drop to 8-4.

Coach Kathy Bourdon's gymnasts take to the mats this weekend, playing host to visiting teams in the NDSU Invitational women's gymnastics meet. Athletes from Concordia, ND, Mayville State, Valley State, South Dakota State, Minot State, and SU will be on hand for the competition scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. tomorrow in the New Field House. Kathy Sprattler, assistant coach for the Bison, expects her team to show improvement over past performances. "We had a lot of injuries in December, but look much longer now," she said. "The girls are working on new stunts and they're looking pretty good." Sprattler sees Concordia, Valley City, and SDSU as the toughest competition and is happy to have the SU squad at full strength. Sophomore Lora Elliot is out for her first meet of the year, having been sidelined with a wrist injury prior to the season opener. Elliot is expected to do well in balance beam competition, as are freshman Michell Randol and sophomore Kathy Daire. Sprattler also says to look for solid performances from Diare and Lynn Williams, junior, in floor exercise, and Becky Westgate, freshman, in the bars and vault events.

Bison cagers tied for first place going into weekend's contests

Coach Erv Inniger's varsity basketball squad, though winning only four of seven games over the Christmas break to bring their record to six wins and seven losses, are tied, surprisingly, for first place in the North Central Conference, along with Northern Colorado. The team began its working vacation with a tough 66-70 loss to the highly ranked Division II Puget Sound Loggers at home, on December 17th. The Mount Marty College Lancers of Yankton, South Dakota visited Fargo on December 22, but received a rude greeting from the Bison as they were soundly surmounted, 99-84. Jeff Askew and Mike Driscoll each turned in 18 points in the winning effort.

On December 27, the Bison traveled to Sioux Falls, only to lose another close contest 85-88, to the Augustana Vikings in the opening round of the NCC tournament.

On the following day, the Morningside College Chiefs added comic relief to SU's disappointing play as the Bison walked off the arena court with a 78-50 victory.

On the final day of the tournament, Coach Inniger's crew battled the Sioux of UND but lost 81-77. Jeff Askew scored 18 points and Greg Monson captured 11 rebounds in that frustrating contest. (Only 408 people attended this game!)

Luckily for the Bison, these above mentioned tournament losses do not count as conference games, but the following two games played just last weekend do.

Last Friday, the University of South Dakota Coyotes visited the campus and were turned back 80-69. (The Coyotes then traveled to Grand Forks where they edged the Sioux, 62-57.)

Saturday brought the Chiefs of Morningside College to Fargo for a rematch, but the Bison held them off, 68-54 to bring the SU conference record to 2-0 and to tie for Frigidaire League lead.

Tonight the Bison hoopsters take on the Mavericks of Nebraska-Omaha in Omaha. The Mavs are the defending conference champions and much stronger than their 6-7 overall record might indicate. They boast a 69-68 win at Iowa State. Their conference record is 0-2, but the losses were at the hands of two credible NCC teams—South Dakota State and Augustana.

Tomorrow, the Bison travel further south to Greeley, Colorado to do battle with the Northern Colorado bears who are 4-5 but 2-0 in the NCC. Last weekend they whipped Augustana and South Dakota State while on the road.

On Monday, the Bison travel to Tulsa, Oklahoma to test their skills against a perennial offensive steamroller, Oral Roberts University.

Jeff Askew will return to the starting unit at guard, complimenting Mike Driscoll in reward for averaging 15.5 points per game in the team's last six contests. The Milwaukee native is ranked fifth in scoring at 18.5 points, eighth in free throw shooting at .818 and second in steals in NCC play.

His partner at guard, Mike Driscoll, is ranked ninth in scoring at 16.5 points per game, sixth in field goal shooting at .684 and seventh in assists in conference play.

SU center Greg Monson is tied for the sixth spot in rebounding in the NCC with an average of 7.5 rebounds per game.
