Processing delays in aid disbursements mean late checks to receiving students

By Rick Olson

The questions and concerns surrounding student financial aids live

As for the current status of financial aid at SU, Wayne Tesmer, director of financial aid, acknowledged there have been delays.

"There have been processing delays in Guaranteed Student Loans," Tesmer said. "Particularly, the Bank of North Dakota has been hitting some snags."

According to Tesmer, the bank is late in getting the processing started and he anticipates a number of students won't have their checks when it comes time to pay fees.

"It may create some cash-flow problems," he said. "Some of the checks may not get here until November."

It is typical to assume such students will need access to funds to pay fees.

Tesmer commented on the GSL program and a few of the changes which took effect Oct. 1, 1981.

"Prior to this date, anyone could get a GSL without regard to the student's and parent's income," Tesmer said.

Currently, if a student's and parent's combined income is less than $30,000 in 1981, the student is eligible to receive a loan.

If the combined income is more than $30,000 a table must be consulted which takes into account family members, how many are in college, income and other factors.

According to Tesmer, this determines the student's eligibility for GSL.

He also remarked on the appropriations bill on which Congress overrode President Ronald Reagan's veto.

This bill contained appropriations for federal student aid among other items.

The override means "more money will be appropriated for Pell (formerly Basic Grant Program) and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant Program."

"We do not know how much it will affect students at SU," Tesmer said.

The situation of the student who relies totally on a GSL has occurred to Tesmer.

"It cannot be done," Tesmer said. At present the maximum GSL a student may apply for is $2,500.

The financial aids office estimates the cost for a student living on campus for the nine-month term to be $3,700, more if a student lives off-campus.

Either way, according to Tesmer, the student would have to come up with at least an additional $1,200.

In a related area Tesmer told of how the government uses arbitrary figures for the purposes of figuring a Pell Grant.

"For the purpose of a Pell Grant, the cost for on-campus is $2,763. We estimate it to be $3,700 so there is nearly a $1,000 difference."

He said if a student earned more than $2,763 he won't receive a Pell Grant.

He also addressed the questions surrounding students who receive Social Security and Veteran's benefits. "It used to be that Social Security was considered part of the family income"

"VA benefits were handled differently," Tesmer said. These two sources of aid affect primarily the Pell Grant Program. "The amount of the Pell Grant plus the Social Security or VA benefits during the academic year cannot exceed the cost of attendance," Tesmer said.

He said if a veteran is receiving benefits of $4,400 he would not qualify for a Pell.

Tesmer said when a cost figure is set, it is made to be reasonable and fair.

Two changes to take note coming in 1983-84, according to Tesmer, will be changes in student emancipation and the possibility of financial aid forms for the 1983-84 school year not being available until Feb. 1983. The forms will be delayed.

Tesmer said students who declare themselves independent will face different criteria in 1983-84.

Previously, if a student didn't live at home and the parents provided no support and didn't declare the student as a tax deduction, the student

Date rapes occur more frequently than other sexual assaults

By Tammy Rowan

Imagine a woman walking down a deserted street late at night. A man jumps from behind a tree, grabs her and a sexual assault is committed.

This is how most people expect rapes to occur but Carol Grimms, counselor at Fargo Rape and Abuse Center, said most assaults occur at parties or on dates.

"Rape victims assume a tremendous amount of guilt because they think they must have done something to provoke the assault," Grimms said.

Guilt is especially prevalent in victims assaulted on a date because of the trust placed in the assailant. With faith in her own judgment shattered the victim finds it hard to trust anyone for a long period after the incident.

In a new building?

The fire department was called to the new Music Building 8:30 Tuesday night. The alarm sounded when a ceiling light began smoking.

Grimms said many rape victims she has worked with have serious emotional problems following the assault.

Many are wary of going out, refuse to place trust in anyone and sleep with the lights on.

The Rape and Abuse Center totals the number of sexual assaults reported in Fargo-Moorhead each year. A total of 205 last year included rapes, attempted rapes and incest.

For every one assault the center hears about, it is estimated there are 10 that go unreported.

The major reason so few rapes that are reported is because of the victim's fear and guilt.

Reliving the experience is so frightening to the victim that she refrains from telling anyone.

Without talking to a professional counselor the victim may blame herself and emotional trauma worsens.

Other reasons for not reporting the assault are the fear of going to court and of friends, relatives and acquaintances finding out.

Prosecution of the assailant has improved in recent years. Grimms said there is always some sort of sentence if the assailant is convicted.

Many times plea-bargaining is done. The average sentence for a rape assailant is five years.

To prove the defendant guilty a chain of evidence must be given and most times the victim was the only person present, therefore, the only provider of evidence.

Grimms said there is no sure-fire way to prevent rape but certain precautions can be taken.

Such things as always having a ride, avoiding hitchhiking and going places in groups can help but cannot rid cities and college campuses of rape problems.

Farmhouse wins chapter award in international competition

By Tammy Rowan

International Outstanding Chapter Award was given to the SU Farmhouse fraternity.

The winner was chosen from the 26 Farmhouse chapters throughout the United States and Canada.

Judged on 13 written reports and a scrapbook, the chapter received its award at the biennial conclave held in St. Paul, Minn., Jerry Striegel, president of Farmhouse fraternity, said.

The judges were from the International Farmhouse Board, people from industry and from different chapters.

Six five-page reports were submitted before the conclave was held, to be judged by the individual judges.

Each chapter was notified if any of its reports won. Of the six reports, SU Farmhouse won three.

At the conclave presentations of the ideas in each of the three reports had to be given. The scrapbook and the remaining eight reports were also submitted for judging.

Striegel said the chapter is judged on scholastic standing, participation in campus organizations and community services, social activities and spiritual activities.

Each of the 13 reports pertains to different actions or programs in which the chapter has participated. The reports reflect on each of the qualities named above.

"Farmhouse strives to build men in five ways," Striegel said. "These are morally, socially, physically, intellectually and spiritually."

The chapter has one community-service project each month in addition to the daily services it performs.

As a group the men visit a mental or nursing home each quarter and distribute meals once a day to elderly in the community.

Other services include a yearly Rake-a-thon with proceeds going to charities, Dance-a-thons and assisting the Heart Association with its yearly fund drive.

Twenty members from the chapter were present at the biennial conclave when the award was presented.

Forty-five students belong to the chapter with 35 of these staying in the fraternity house.

Striegel said these 45 members help each other to grow by doing things for others and working together.

would then be independent," he said.

The new guidelines call for students under the age of 22 to automatically be declared as a dependent student.

The only exceptions, according to Tesmer, are if a student is an orphan or a ward of the state. If a student is over the age of 22 the previous guidelines will apply.

"By and large, this is welcomed by the financial aids community," Tesmer said.

Tesmer indicated some colleges and universities had about 50 percent of their students declared financially independent.

SU has about 25 percent of its students declared independent.

Tesmer said SU faces a 25-percent cut in allocations from financial aid. "As a result of collections in National Direct Student Loans, the net reduction is around 10 percent."

He also told of problems of some students who had incomplete aid files after April 18.

"As a result, they missed out on the campus-based aid," Tesmer said.

It was recommended that these students apply for a GSL. He said a sizeable number of students had incomplete files.

Tesmer suggested that if a student is timely with her application, is willing to put up with the application process and willing to obtain money from her parents and own funds, she should be able to put enough money together to get through school.

"As for next year, who knows?" he said.

State officials keeping eyes open for drunks

By Rick Olson

The Cass County state's attorney's office will be looking at cases involving persons driving while under the influence of alcohol with a strict view.

Jack Fay, an assistant Cass County state's attorney, feels there have been too many DWIs to ignore. "I think our whole office sees DWI as a serious offense."

"We all feel DWIs are not only on the rise, but on the rise in connection with related accidents, death and injury. It should be regarded as a serious offense," Fay said.

According to Fay, a first DWI offense in North Dakota is considered a Class B misdemeanor. That calls for a maximum penalty of up to 30 days imprisonment, a fine of up to $500 or both.

A second occurrence within a two-year period, according to Fay, is a Class A misdemeanor which is punishable by imprisonment for up to one year, a fine of up to $1,000 or both.

According to Bruce Quick, also an assistant state's attorney, the standard sentence for a first offense handed down in Cass County ranges from a standard fine of $250 to $300, 30 days in jail with 29 days conditionally suspended upon paying the fine, court costs and attending the DWI seminar.

The DWI seminar meets once a week for four weeks and for three hours each session. The offenders are instructed to follow any recommendations made for follow-up treatment, according to Quick.

"Realistically, the case has to be a tough one for a person to receive the maximum sentence," Fay said. "The courts are looking at the problem with a stern eye." However, he said the maximum has been handed down before.

Fay told of a task force which is looking at the problems of DWI. This statewide task force, started by Gov.

Allen Olson, is looking at possibilities for recommending changes in the present DWI laws.

Cass County Court Judge Donald Cooke is a member of the task force as is Quick.

Quick is one of the major forces in regard to DWI, according to Fay. In fact Quick is starting a similar-type task force in the county.

Fay explained what is required of law enforcement officials who suspect a person is driving while under the influence of alcohol.

"First an officer must have a reasonable suspicion to stop a person who he suspects is driving while under the influence of alcohol," he said.

An officer can usually tell this by the way the person is operating his vehicle such as swerving in traffic or observing another event that would indicate an offense had occurred.

To arrest a person for suspicion of DWI as for anything else, the officer must have probable cause to make the arrest.

A 10 or more blood-alcohol content reading is sufficient cause for an arrest as a person is presumed legally intoxicated in North Dakota.

According to Quick the least cost in a DWI case is the fine. The biggest cost is when your insurance triples because you are considered a high risk after a DWI conviction.

Fay complained about the bars in Moorhead that encourage the younger crowd to come over, drink and then drive home drunk. He referred to the specials, such as 3-for-1 and the others.

Both Fay and Quick agree this is a problem in a border community such as Fargo, as 19- and 20-year-olds can legally drink in Minnesota, while in North Dakota, one must wait until he is 21.

In a related area, over the summer Moorhead Mayor Morris Lanning was outspoken about the bars there that offer the cheap booze specials.

His feelings were made known during the public hearings on renewing liquor licenses. All licenses were renewed, however.

Quick commented on the Implied Consent Law. N.D. law states that when a person receives a driver's license, she agrees to take a chemical test at the request of a law enforcement officer upon suspicion of DWI.

The three tests commonly used are breathalyzer, blood tests and urine tests.

After the officer asks a person to take a test explaining its purpose and so forth, if the person refuses to take the test "he will lose his driver's license automatically for a period of six months."

He said there is an administrative review in which a person may get his license back.

Quick also explained the points system used in North Dakota. This system assigns a point value to each particular traffic violation in the state. For DWI 15 points are assessed.

If a person has accumulated 12 points or more, that person's license is suspended for seven days for each point over 11.

The maximum point accumulation a person can have without having his license suspended is 11.

Quick said if a person had a clear record, the 15 points would put him four points over the limit. At the end of 28 days the points would revert back to 11.

Then the points would be reduced by one every three months, all on the condition the offender has no other traffic-related violations.

Fay believes a person can have a good time without getting blotto. "It's not hard to give up the keys or call up a cab. It might cost a buck more to get home," but all indications show it's worth it.

As for statistics of prosecutions made by the office, "I read in 'The Forum' of only 47 cases, but a greater number of them," he said. He believes the enforcement of DWI in Cass County is good.

The N.D. State Highway Cass County Sheriff's Office local police departments are possible for such enforcement.

"We only handle the cases that come to us from the state police sheriff's department," Quick said. Otherwise the respective attorneys handle the DWI cases initiated by the respective departments.

"However, if the case involves a person with a repeat DWI within 24 months, we then prosecute it as a Class A misdemeanor," he said.

Counseling available for eating disorders

By Diane Smith

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia have been around since history began, but cases now being reported are steadily increasing.

In the five years Dr. Pat Halvorson has been a counselor at the SU Counseling Center, three have been out working with eating disorder victims.

The main characteristics of anorexia nervosa, according to Halvorson, are self-starvation and weight loss.

Clients with this disorder restrict their food intake and focus on physical measurements and weight.

"The sufferers feel fat when they look in the mirror even after losing an excessive amount of weight," Halvorson said.

Of the victims 50 percent will purge, then force themselves to eat. The remaining 50 percent will have a very restricted diet such as only a salad for the entire day.

Anorexia nervosa "is not only physical. The victim has a feeling of not being able to control his life. Psychological problems are manifested as eating behaviors," Halvorson said.

Bulimia, although a sister to anorexia nervosa, is a disorder in which the victim binges on large amounts of food and then gets rid of it using laxatives or diuretics.

Bulimics have the fear of becoming obese. Halvorson said, "Gaining a few pounds can be traumatic."

These two eating disorders affect females primarily, but it is possible for males to suffer from the disorder. The ratio is 10-to-1.

The onset of anorexia nervosa may occur in children as young as 9 years old but the majority of victims are in their teens.

The late teens and early 20s are generally times when bulimia occurs. Also, in some cases, bulimics may be former anorexia-nervosa victims.

Bulimia is more prevalent on college campuses.

Some research shows the onset of these disorders may be linked with dieting or emotional loss. In stressful times anorexia nervosa and bulimia may become apparent, according to Halvorson.

Some of the symptoms of anorexia nervosa may be severe weight loss, constant talk of food and of weight.

People suffering from this disease can be spotted because of extreme weight loss although not everyone who loses weight is anorexic.

"They focus on the external and food is the focus of their lives."

On the other hand Halvorson said bulimics may be overweight, underweight or average weight.

It is very dangerous to do second guessing in this type of situation.

Sufferers of anorexia nervosa have trouble believing there is a problem, whereas bulimic individuals know something is wrong, but "feel they should be able to recover by themselves," Halvorson said.

There are many theories about these two disorders but unfortunately no real causes have been determined.

"Just about the time you see a pattern, someone comes along that's different."

Theories about family systems, heredity, physiological and cultural reasons have been discussed.

The mortality rate for anorexia nervosa ranges from 6 percent to 25 percent, according to some early research reports. With bulimia not enough figures are known to name a percentage.

Halvorson believes our culture today stresses the importance of thinness too much.

The general image suggested by media advertisements is if you want to be liked, popular or OK, you must be thin.

In treatment counselors try to combat this feeling. The SU Counseling Center works both on an individual and group basis.

A group has existed for two years at SU which helps bulimia and anorexia nervosa sufferers. The group holds weekly meetings and everything is confidential.

This group is also open to MSU and Concordia students.

The Red River Human Services Center and St. Ansgar after-care also have services available for group and individual help.

Treatment really consists of two parts, Halvorson said.

First, the victim must change his eating habits. This can be done through working with the dietitian on campus.

The second part of recovery is to learn new ways of coping with different feelings such as boredom, anger, anxiety and fear. The counselors stress the importance of dealing with relationships to gain control.

Halvorson and Pat Newman, a counselor from MSU, have written a book which will be published next spring, titled "Anorexia Nervosa and Bulimia: A Handbook for Counselors and Therapists."

She and Newman felt there was a real need for a book on basics to help with anorexia nervosa and bulimia clients.

The book is aimed at counselors, therapists, professionals and the victims themselves.

Her advice to those who feel they may have one of the disorders or who know of a friend who might is to seek professional help and make an appointment at the Counseling Center. All inquiries are confidential.

Until the causes are discovered for anorexia nervosa and bulimia, education is the best prevention.

Eventually, Halvorson sees classes being taught in the schools about anorexia nervosa and bulimia.

Until then, children must learn to cope with anger and other feelings.

Most importantly, they must be taught to focus on the value of the person inside. "We must focus on the total person."

Volleyball team wins at home over Concordia

SU's volleyball team is picking up where it left off last year. Donna Palivec and her squad are currently 4-2 and they defeated Concordia Tuesday in the first home match of the year 15-10, 15-7 and 15-0.

Last year the Herd finished 41-11, placing second in the Regional 6 tournament at Maryville, Miss., and participated in the AIAW Division II national championships at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Palivec, now in her fifth year as head coach, noted last year's performance as helpful only to her team's desires.

"They know where they've been last year and they're not satisfied with just going to the nationals," she said.

"They want to do better. They have so much pride they don't want to let themselves, their team or their fans down."

Palivec said the Bison are further along at this point than last year and it was apparent in the stomping of Concordia.

The overall hustle and team spirit of the Bison were overwhelming. It looked as though SU played on emotion alone. Palivec said it wasn't really emotion but momentum.

"It's a momentum game. Everything can be in your favor and it'll turn on you," she said.

Nothing turned on the Bison against Concordia. The matches started out well and kept getting better. An estimated 400 people attended the match at the Old Field House.

As each player added her own part to the team, it still ended up as one.

"There's so much interwoven responsibility," Palivec said. "It's so interlocked that all parts of the team must work together or we'll lose."

The Bison are in St. Cloud, Minn., today and tomorrow for the St. Cloud State Invitational.

Palivec picked St. Cloud, Minnesota-Duluth and Northern Iowa as the teams to beat.

The Bison return home on Tuesday to host Minnesota-Morris and next weekend the Herd will host the Tri-College Invitational.

Bison crush Mankato in season match-up

By Kevin Christ

SU's football team picked up its second win in as many outings by defeating the Mavericks of Mankato State 45-17 at Mankato last Saturday.

The Bison compiled 485 yards on total offense, picking up 295 yards on the ground and 190 yards in the air.

Bison quarterback Mark Neller-moe got the ball rolling early for the Herd after a Mankato fumble on the Mavericks' 23.

On the first play of this SU series, Neller-moe swept right bringing the ball down to the Mavericks' 9-yard line.

A pitchout to Jeff Willis sent the ball to the 2 and a Mankato penalty put the ball on the 1 which set up the Bison's first touchdown.

Neller-moe rolled right and found himself in the end zone. Mark Luedtke kicked the extra point for the Herd giving SU a 7-0 advantage.

The Mavericks staged a strong drive late in the first quarter. Mankato running back Larry Brown picked up 30 yards in the game and 27 of those yards came in the Mavericks' final drive of the first quarter.

The Mavericks moved the ball from their own 40-yard line all the way down to SU's 8 when Mankato's quarterback Bill Rosburg fumbled and SU's Steve Krause made the recovery. This saved at least three points for the Bison.

The first quarter ended with the Bison on their own 2-yard line. On second and eight Willis took a pitch from Neller-moe and moved the ball to the 36 for another Bison first down.

Last year Neller-moe wasn't credited as much of a passer with the Bison's strong running game but this year the tide is turning, making SU more of a threat to defenses.

Neller-moe hit Bison speedster Stacy Robinson for a 64-yard touchdown with 14:14 remaining in the first half. Luedtke kicked another SU extra-point and the Herd increased its lead to 14-0.

After Robinson's touchdown the next series for Mankato lasted about the length of a shoelace and the Mavericks were forced to punt.

SU fumbled the punt but did manage to recover the ball on its own 42-yard line.

Neller-moe led the Bison down the field and into the end zone as he capped off the 58-yard drive with a 2-yard touchdown run. Luedtke kicked yet another extra point and this put the Herd well ahead 21-0 with 11:11 left in the first half.

Neller-moe is establishing himself quite well in the air. The 5-foot 10-inch 184-pound senior threw for 190 yards giving him a two-game total of 330 yards.

He was also 9 for 17 giving him a 16 for 32 record or a 50 percent completion percentage.

A short kickoff by SU's Marshall Wolowicz was returned by Mankato's Dave Beyer to the Maverick's 34.

A personal foul against the Herd moved the ball up to the 49-yard line.

A 10-play drive and a 1-yard run by Rosburg put the Mavericks on the scoreboard with 7:18 left in the half. Steve Springer kicked the extra point and the score was 21-7 with SU in the driver's seat.

The Bison began the next drive on their own 22-yard line. SU kept pushing until the Herd was on the Maverick 6. The Bison fumbled the ball and Mankato recovered it in the end zone stopping the Herd's drive with 1:05 to play in the first half.

The Mavericks had time for two plays before the first half was over. The Bison were still on top 21-7.

On the first series of the third quarter Mankato drove 68 yards in nine plays. Beyer topped off the drive blasting into the end zone, off tackle, from the 1-yard line. Springer kicked the extra point narrowing SU's lead to 21-14.

The next series for SU began on the Bison's 28-yard line. On third and four Neller-moe ran a keeper around the right end which was good for 48 yards.

With the ball now on the Mavericks' 16 Bison leading rusher Dan Harris went around the left end for another SU first down on the Maverick 6.

Hank Klos carried the ball to the 2 and Harris powered into the end zone capping the six-play 72-yard drive. Luedtke kicked the extra point and the Bison now led 28-14.

With 6:08 left in the third quarter play was suspended due to lightning. When play was resumed Mankato still had the ball, but the Mavericks were unable to develop anything so the ball was punted to SU's 16-yard line.

Three plays later Neller-moe fumbled the ball and the Mavericks recovered on the Bison 6.

SU's defense, led by Steve Garske, Pete Boldon and Tom Shockman, held the Mavericks and Mankato had to settle for a Springer 20-yard field goal with 1:24 left in the third quarter.

In the last series of the third quarter Neller-moe fumbled the ball again. This time SU was able to recover the ball. The third quarter ended with SU ahead, 28-17.

On the same series but in the fourth quarter Neller-moe completed a 26-yard pass to Luedtke which put the ball on the Maverick 4. Harris carried the ball in from the 4 and Luedtke kicked the extra point to put the Bison further ahead 35-17 with 13:28 left in the game.

Wolowicz kicked off out of bounds and the Bison were assessed a 5-yard penalty. The second Wolowicz kick was returned by Coleman at the 20.

He ran the ball to the 43 and fumbled, but the Herd recovered setting Luedtke up for a 45-yard field goal, the longest of his career.

The Bison widened the margin 38-17 with 12:06 left in the game.

On Mankato's next series quarterback Doug Hushka intercepted his first pass of the year giving the ball. The Bison failed to gain the ball and Mankato took over on its own 19-yard line.

The Maverick's possession of the ball didn't last too long as reserve linebacker Eric Brustoff intercepted his first pass of the year giving the Bison the ball on the Maverick 33.

Charles Barkwell finished the drive for SU scoring on another touchdown run. Luedtke kicked another extra point finishing the evening's scoring with the Bison out in front, 45-17.

Harris led all rushers picking up 85 yards while Neller-moe was second with 83 and Willis was third with 66 yards.

Harris is averaging 103 yards a game while Willis is a close second with a 96.5 average. Neller-moe is averaging 89 yards.
