Eight positions and new building approved at SU

By Kevin Cassella
News Editor

SU's plan to spend $1 million in unspent appropriations for more instructors and a classroom addition met approval of the state Emergency Commission Jan. 5.

Four new computer terminals now at SU

By Kevin Cassella
News Editor

The area which had once been unofficially designated as Gallery 3 has now been converted to space for computer terminals.

Four computer terminals are currently available for student use from 3:30 a.m. to 10:50 p.m. Although the Union is locked at 11, power to the terminals is automatically cut-off ten minutes before closing, according to Bill Blain, director of the Union.

The terminals are located on the third floor of the Family Life Center near the hallway connecting that building with the Union.

The Union's Board of directors had been discussing better utilization of the space and had decided to use the area for a lounge-study area. Blain said he was contacted by student government about 2 years ago about the possibility of locating terminals within the Union.

"The result was creating a cluster of terminals as well as lounge-study areas."

When finished the computer clusters will have what Blain called "high-tech look."

While campus officials were pleased with the decision, one state senator may take the commission to court over its approval of the spending plan.

In a 4 to 1 vote, commission members voted to let SU spend unspent income from this year and unspent appropriations from the 1981-83 biennium on an addition to the electrical engineering building and 19 additional faculty members.

According to President L.D. Loftsgard, "the university plans to proceed immediately with plans for the engineering building addition with the project scheduled for occupancy for the 1984 academic year."

Without the construction project, accreditation for the electrical engineering program could be in jeopardy, Loftsgard said.

In its report, the accreditation committee had recommended that additional classroom space be made available.

Tentatively, administration plans to add eight positions to the College of Engineering, five to computer science, four to the business department and two faculty members will be assigned to support areas, he added.

The board of higher education had already approved the plan for more faculty and the classroom addition and had forwarded it to the Emergency Commission late last year.

Construction for the addition will cost about $350,000 while the additional teachers will cost $650,000.

Some members of an interim legislative budget committee had questioned whether the Emergency Commission could legally approve the expenditures from the unspent appropriations from the previous biennium. They maintain only the Legislature can approve such spending.

State Senator Bryce Streibel (R-Fessenden) is one who says the Legislature is the only body with constitutional authority to grant the spending request, as far as the carry-over funds are concerned.

"I think it's a back-door approach around the Legislature," he said in a telephone interview.

Streibel and others may be taking the Emergency Commission to court over its approval allowing SU to spend the money.

"We haven't foreclosed on the idea," he said adding that one deciding factor may be the amount of funds available for the legal costs.

"We think we have a strong case."

Streibel said he believes the unspent funds revert back to the state's general fund and must be re-appropriated by the Legislature.

Thefts from locked cars continues to increase around SU campus

By Kevin Cassella
News Editor

"The Grinch Who Stole Stereo Equipment" has been held over and is still playing in student parking lots across campus.

The increased number of property thefts from locked cars is a continuation of the spurt faced by campus security shortly before Christmas break, according to Tim Lee, chief of campus security.

Entry to the parked cars is gained by either breaking a window or unlocking the car with a device. Items taken include stereos, equalizers and speakers, Lee said.

Thieves are also entering dorm rooms and office areas taking money and other personal property.

However, "The thefts from vehicles are probably more organized," he added.

Lee said in one week his office received reports of two to three thefts, all with no signs of forced entry.

"Everything a person can do to safeguard their personal property should be done."

Suggestions include hiding valuables, mounting stereos so they're not easily visible and locking car doors.

Lee also said women should carry their purses with them when they leave an office or classroom.

Humor of former Lampoon editor not funny

By Betty Baccus

P.J. O'Rourke, recently an editor of National Lampoon, left no scatological rocks unturned as he lectured on "Modern Manners" in the Old Field House Tuesday night.

nyard humor all the way. His visit coincided with a hype for his book "Modern Manners."

With his sub-title, "Etiquette for Very Rude People," O'Rourke had his say on flatulence, dress, weird and straight sex, exhibitionism, women's rights, murder, drugs, wild parties, campus food, suicide, and well, vomiting.

The audience of about 600 students and off-campus patrons, probably half of them women, chuckled a little uncertainly at the unbuttoned humor. But it wasn't until O'Rourke called for questions from the audience that the laughter got really genuine and the speaker revealed a sharp ability to think on his feet as he departed from his bathroom tissue script.

National Lampoon used to use all the cheap shots that the speaker fell back on in his campus presentation. But National Lampoon is more sophisticated than that today, which may be why O'Rourke is no longer the editor. It seemed to me that P.J. has stayed in the '60s. He may not know that there is a new world out there today.

I came to laugh. I went home to rinse my mouth out with Scope.

Jackson spices up presidential campaign

By Dennis Lange
Staff Writer

Rev. Jesse Jackson did some fancy cooking last week.

Preparing to leave for Syria, he said even if he could not secure the release of captured U.S. Navy flier, Lt. Robert Goodman, the publicity surrounding his trip would force the issue of Goodman's captivity "off the back burner and onto the front burner."

Beyond SU

Jackson not only succeeded in bringing home Lt. Goodman, but also spiced up the campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination and turned up the heat under the issue of American policy in Lebanon.

Jackson's standing as a presidential candidate acquired instantaneous credibility and lustre. Next month's primary in New Hampshire (Goodman's home state) should indicate just how strong Jackson's appeal has become.

Jackson has glommed onto an apparent yearning to be a president who leads with style and personal flair.

Frankly, the major problem with Walter Mondale's monotonal can-

CLARIFICATION

The telephone number listed in Tuesday's issue referring to the "He-man Woman Hater's Club" and the owner of that number is in no way affiliated with this group which is purely fictitious. The ad was intended solely as a joke and was meant to be taken in that light. More forethought should have been taken when I placed the ad. In no way was there any intention of injury or embarrassment to the owner of the number. I wish to make here a sincere apology to him.

Bill Whiteman

The Spectrum would like to add its apologies.

It is our policy to not run telephone numbers in ads that would result in unwanted phone calls.

Somehow this one slipped by.

didacy is his perceived lack of verve and imagination. Decent—yes, but as bland as lefse.

Mondale, along with the other Democratic candidates and the whole Reagan administration, was caught standing around flat-footed last week, while Jackson gave them a little exhibition of slam-dunk diplomacy.

Jackson was able to use his personal friendship with Syrian president Hafez-al-Assad and his reputation in the Third World countries. I think it's fair to say that many Third World leaders believe that a black American minister has a more sympathetic understanding of their problems than a gerontal movie actor. Goodman's release signals a Syrian preference for Jackson.

Americans like instant gratification—Jackson gave it to them. Of course, bringing Goodman home was a piece of cake compared to solving the far greater and more complex problem of U.S. policy in Lebanon.

Foreign policy should not be based on instant gratification of the public, but on long-standing principles that are clearly defined by the government and clearly understood by the people.

U.S. policy in Lebanon is not well defined and certainly not well understood. It has not been successful.

U.S. Marines were sent to Lebanon, along with French and Italian contingents, in September of 1982. Euphemistically called "peace-keepers," they were sent to a land where there was no peace to be kept.

The international forces were to help stabilize Lebanon while Christian Falangist President Amin Gemayel established order and Syrian, Israeli and PLO forces were to withdraw.

Lebanon has a long history of civil unrest fueled by religious and secular differences. Not everyone accepts the Gemayel government as legitimate. The presence of U.S. Marines does not legitimize the Gemayel government. For them, the Marines are not peace-keepers but armed enemies.

So far, 258 Americans have not returned safe and sound from Lebanon.

The United States has again dealt itself a no-win hand and it continues to bet on it.

Again the United States has entangled itself by underestimating the costs of military solutions to political problems. U.S. forces in Lebanon can only be effective if opposition forces are cowed into capitulation by the threat of even more American firepower.

Opposition forces have not been cowed and the United States is left with three unpleasant options: military escalation; maintaining a sitting-duck status quo or withdrawing without having accomplished much at the cost of 258 lives.

The Reagan administration will probably keep the Marines in Lebanon, trying to safeguard them as much as possible from further losses, and then withdraw them as soon as an excuse can be found for doing so.

The release of Goodman provides an opportunity, small to be sure, to begin working on diplomatic solutions in Lebanon. This opportunity should not be squandered.

I JUST GOT LAID OFF FROM THE DAILY PLANET...
THEY SAID THIS WAS A JOB FOR JESSE JACKSON.

Writing, photography workshops begin soon

If you haven't heard about the first Press Olympics, you haven't run into Buster Arcott, the would-be sports reporter and resident jock.

Buster ('Sneakers' to his New Field House buddies) is splitting his infinitives over plans for the Press Olympics workshops. He plans to brush up on both his writing and photography skills and earn credit at the same time.

"This is my chance," Buster said to me. "I need to get my stuff more colorful, know what I mean? I wanna get the sights and sounds and smells of the locker room into my stories."

I was tempted to tell Buster that his material already had a certain bloom, but I restrained myself.

"I know what a round robin wrestling match is," said Buster, "but you need to chalk up the running pattern on this Press Olympics. What's it all about?"

I explained that those students who participated in the educational sessions can put to practice what they learn.

Photography participants will get instructions on how to compete in the photography events during the evening workshops.

Writers will participate in short 15-minute events that test their knowledge of copy editing, writing leads and making ethical/journalistic decision, and other skills.

Longer events will send students out to watch and write about a short basketball game or a scene from a play, or write an editorial, among other events.

"You mean I'll be writing REAL stories?" Buster asked.

"You bet your cleats," I told him.

"Hey, just how do you think I'll be able to compete with all those communications students who work on this every day?" Buster complained.

(Buster's an excitable sort—you have to handle him with kid gloves.)

"That's why there's the educational sessions. There'll be plenty of time in the workshops for you to learn about all kinds of interesting things about writing and photography. Even if you're not going to work on a newspaper or magazine, you'll learn how to write better, more completely and with more style," I told him.

"You mean I might be able to write a better term paper when I'm done?" he asked.

(Sometimes, with Buster, you have to draw a picture.)

"Yup, and the sessions are free. You don't have to spend your entertainment money paying your sister to write your term papers anymore," I said.

Buster was excited when I told him that you get to work in a team, just like in sports events.

"I'll round up Blinky, Shorty, Stretch and Spud. Maybe Spike wants to get into the action, too," he said.

"Just complete that form and get it into the Spectrum office. Then you're all set," I told him.

Hey, when do these sessions start?" Buster asked.

Dave Wallis will present the first photography session at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Union Dacotah Inn. (Sorry Buster, no food will be served.)

Assisting him will be Jerry Richardson and Mark Strand of the SU Communications Office.

"Tell you what, Buster. Come along with me when I visit with Wallis and some of the other Press Olympic trainers. That way you can see how this reporting business is done.

"Geez, that's swell," puffed Buster. "I better get over to the dorm and dust off my camera. I want to try taking a photo to dress up your story."

Cussler's works help readers plunge into story

By Pearce Tefft
Staff Writer

"Vixon 03" by Clive Cussler;
Bantam $3.95

Clive Cussler's work to date have included "Raise the Titanic", "Vixon 03," "Night Probe," "Iceberg" and "The Mediterranean." All deal with a mystery from the past and most of the action takes place underwater.

The first three, including "Vixon 03," have as the central character Dirk Pitt. Pitt, like his creator, is an adventurous underwater expert.

Cussler's knowledge of underwater exploration makes all of his novels enjoyable to read. He knows what he's talking about — a basic rule in writing to be sure.

Review

For example, when Pitt pauses at the sight of an unexpected human skeleton during his first exploration of a submerged aircraft.

Cussler's description of the icy water beginning its death grip on the bones of Pitt grasps the reader.

Pitt later learns the sunken aircraft is code-named "Vixon 03," and the plane was lost over the Pacific in 1954—according to the records. No mention is made of the stainless steel canisters in the hold or why it might be at the bottom of a Colorado lake.

Complicating the matter is the presence of a South African terrorist organization led mysteriously by a white Scottish captain. Pitt must rush to put the pieces together or lose the nation's Capitol.

"Vixon 03" is an interesting piece of fiction to place against today's headlines. The sub-plots tend to ponder a bit, but all is justified as the novel races to an exciting climax. Three-and-a-half stars.

Women's track coach has positive attitude about team

By Bamson Fadipe
Staff Writer

Everything appears to be headed in the right direction for Sue Patterson, women's cross country and track coach. The positive attitude she shares with her teams may have something to do with her yearly progression.

During her four years coaching at SU, Patterson has made the team more competitive and one of the most outstanding teams that the Bison have ever produced in the North Central Conference.

Her team finished in sixth place at the national last fall after winning the conference title, dumping its toughest rival South Dakota State University into second place for the first time. According to Patterson the sixth-place team finish was the highest they've ever placed at national.

Patterson feels her team is headed for the NCC title this season.

"We are going for the conference title this year in track because we've got a lot more depth in the talent that we have," she said. "We've always had some good athletes in every event, but we've never had more than one good athlete in each event."

The team finished second place behind SDSU last season in both indoor and outdoor NCC track championships at Brookings, S.D.

Patterson, a native of Minneapolis, received her bachelor's degree in physical education from St. Cloud State University in 1976. She later received her master's degree in athletic administration in 1978 from Mankato State University. Before coming to SU, she coached at Apple Valley, Minn. High School for three years and also served as an assistant coach at Mankato State for one year.

Patterson's main goal is to win both the indoor and outdoor conference titles. She has already recruited eight freshman to start off the season.

Patterson said to win the conference it will take a team that will be able to place an individual very high in each event. Second, third and fourth places are also important, she added.

"We've always placed high in every event but just with one single runner. This year we've got back-up people that are going to come in to take those places."

Patterson and her squad will open its first meet at Mankato State Jan. 21. "It's going to be a good meet because we'll get to meet some of the schools in the conference."

Current Commissioner Halford to retire from NCC this summer

By Michael Morey
Sports Editor

The North Central Conference, of which North Dakota State is a member, will soon have a new face as commissioner.

Commissioner R.D. "Dewey" Halford said this week he will retire June 30.

Halford, 64, submitted a letter of resignation to league officials who met this week in Dallas, site of the annual NCAA convention.

He indicated he will remain as commissioner beyond June 30, if conference officials wish, in order to insure a smoother transition for his successor.

Halford has been commissioner of the NCC since July 1977 when he succeeded Dr. Richard Koppenhaver.

Former athletic director at Morningside College, Halford is the third full-time commissioner in the 61-year history of the league.

Conference president Dr. Dave Forbes of SU says a search and screening committee will be established in a few weeks. He said the committee should be able to begin interviewing candidates for Halford's position this spring.

Other members of the conference are Augustana College, Mankato State, Morningside, Nebraska-Omaha, Northern Colorado, North Dakota, St. Cloud State, South Dakota and South Dakota State.

Teachers to be nominated for Robert Odney Award

By Millie Buekea
Features Editor

Each year instructors squirm in their seats and bite the ends of their pencils just waiting to see if they have been nominated for the coveted Robert Odney Award for Excellence in teaching.

Nominations are now being sought from SU students, faculty and alumni for the 1984 award, which is presented annually to a faculty member teaching at the undergraduate level at SU. Nominations must be submitted by Feb. 3 to Richard Reopelle, Room 203, Sudro Hall. A certificate of recognition and a cash gift are awarded the recipient at an award ceremony April 5.

Suggested criteria for making nominations include the following: In his or her teaching, the faculty member should stimulate the present and continuing interest in the subject matter; present courses so that the components are clear, suitable and well-integrated; demand rigorous thought and generate enthusiastic responses from students and demonstrate distinctive competence in his or her field.

Committee members in addition to Reopelle are Catherine Cater, Gary Clambey, Jennette Dittman, Doris Hertsgaard, Mary Bromel and George LaPalm, and students Brad Johnson and Paul Danielson.
