

Talk to computers? Who, me?

(NB)—Voice controlled table-top computers that can do considerable thinking will all come together in the office and engineering workplace in the next few years, according to a speaker at SU.

"Man will be allowed to communicate with his machines just as he does with other men," said R.M. Mueller, executive consultant with Control Data Corporation, St. Paul, and president of the National Association of Computer Engineering. "With it comes the unusual social problem that men and women don't want to be seen talking to machines."

Voice, video and data will be handled simultaneously through cable tv in one table-top unit for both word processing and the 3-D graphics needed by engineers for designing the tools and machines of the future, Mueller said. More than 300 practicing engineers, industrial managers, architects, programmers and educators attended the March 7 and 8 Engineering High Tech Seminar and Exhibit at SU.

"Ease of use is the key to utilizing today's computer technology and voice communication is going to help make things easier," Mueller said. "The touch screens have been around since 1967 but will not survive because they interfere with viewing the monitors. We'll soon be working on only data tablets or table top stations, and within four years much of the communication with

BOSP names Schroeder new Spectrum editor

(NB)—Jodi Schroeder, a sophomore in English and communication, has been named editor of the Spectrum.

Named to the position by the SU Board of Student Publications, Schroeder will serve as editor beginning with this issue through May of 1985. Schroeder is the daughter of Gerald and Sheila Schroeder, Harvey.

She has served on the Spectrum as a copy editor, typographer and writer since last fall. During the summers of 1982 and 1983, she worked at the Harvey Herald largely in the areas of typography, ad building and layout.

Schroeder said she will work towards developing a newspaper with distinctive sections in such areas as entertainment, sports, and editorials in an effort to present readers with a product that can be more easily read.

The board also named Derrick Norwood, senior in psychology, to a second term as business manager. Norwood is the son of G. Joseph and Elaine Norwood, Fargo. His term will be effective with the beginning of fall quarter 1984 next September and continue through May 1985.

The Spectrum is published twice weekly during the academic year at SU and has a circulation of 8,000.

SU debaters defeat UND, MSU contestants at recent tournament

SU debaters finished first and second in two tournaments held last month.

They defeated UND's team and Concordia College's team at a recent Valley Forensics League Tournament held at SU. The team of freshmen Tracy Tool and John Beautels, finished first in the experienced debate division.

Sophomore teammates, Tag Anderson and Mike Borden, finished second. A Concordia team finished third in the event. In the inexperienced division, junior Tammi Mills and freshman Curt Kline, finished first over two UND teams. Tool received the top speaker award in the experienced division.

The debate team also placed in both divisions of the 1984 Spencer Tracy Invitational held in Ripon, Wisconsin. Ten schools from North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois participated in the two-day tournament named in honor of a famous actor and student at Ripon College.

The team of Tracy Tool and John Beautels advanced to the elimination rounds in the Cross Examination Debate Association division with a 4 and 2 preliminary win-loss record.

They were victorious in the quarterfinal round over Macalester College. In the semifinal round they lost on a 2-1 decision to the top team from the University of Illinois. Tool won a speaker award finishing third in the division.

In the Lincoln-Douglas division, Tammi Mills advanced to the elimination rounds with a 4 and 2 preliminary win-loss record. In the semifinals she lost on a 2-1 decision to a student from LaCrosse, WI.

The squad travels to the Pi Kappa Delta Bi-Providence Tournament at the Southwest State University in Marshall, MN., on March 16 and 17 to begin the spring quarter tournament schedule.

Home concert is Sunday

(NB)—The 65-member Gold Star Concert Band returns to campus for its annual Home Concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, in Festival Concert Hall.

The five-state tour of the band included performances in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Maryland, and Ohio under the direction of Orville Eidem, band director and associate professor of music.

The home concert will feature some of the following numbers from the tour program: "Savannah River Holiday Overture" by Ron Nelson; "Festival Variations" by Claude T. Smith;

"Concertino for Tuba and Band" by Jim Curnow with Douglas Neill, Mandan, N.D., soloist; "The Final Covenant" by Fisher Tull;

"Hail to the Spirit of Liberty" by John Philip Sousa; "American Overture for Band" by Joseph Willcox Jenkins;

"Four Scottish Dances" by Malcom Arnold; "Fantasia for Alto Saxophone" by Claude T. Smith with Paul Liversage, Fargo, soloist; "Sarabande and Polka" by Malcolm Arnold, and "America, the Beautiful" by Ward-Dragon.

Drug traffic officer to speak Thursday

"International Drug Traffic: Can it be Stopped?" is the lecture/discussion at the Moorhead Public Library's Thursday Nite Live! at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Wayne Nicks, agent in charge of the resident office of the Drug Enforcement Administration, will preside.

Nicks, who is responsible for tracking drug traffic throughout North Dakota, western Minnesota, and northern South Dakota, will present an insider's view of international drug trades.

The program is part of a special series of Thursday Nite Live! events in March, designed in conjunction with the Foreign Policy Association's "Great Decisions '84" program. It is free and open to the public.

computers will be done by voice."

Mueller suggested that not only will the final design of aircraft, buildings and machinery be preserved by computers but the entire design process will be stored. By inputting new specifications and parameters, the artificial intelligence and decision-making systems will be able to design entirely new aircraft, buildings and machinery.

"Computer aided design and computer-aided manufacturing systems will even be used in the medical profession," Mueller said. "Engineers and doctors will be brought together for reconstruction surgery of people following automobile and other major accidents that literally destroy human bodies," Mueller said.

All of this rapidly changing and expensive new technology for engineering will provide students with an opportunity to learn through animation and computer graphics. The SU Engineering High Tech Seminar placed particularly strong emphasis on the need for cooperation between industry and business and the educational community.

Dr. Joseph Stanislaw, dean of the SU College of Engineering and Architecture, said that new equipment in the computer and robotics field costs millions of dollars, a lot more than his college can finance through its regular budget.

"With rapidly changing technology providing a revolution in engineering and architectural design, manufacturing, and teaching, we can no longer keep abreast of the times without help," Stanislaw said. "We must be joined by the larger business and industrial community in providing our students and researchers the opportunity to study and work with this technology in an educational setting."

Cooperation, responsibility keys to success

With each new editor, changes are made and new goals are set.

Although not many things have changed so far, as time goes on you will notice small details incorporated to improve the appearance of the Spectrum.

Editorial

One change in the editorial page structure I am considering is running only one editorial a week and possibly have guest editorials in the other issue.

My goal is to produce a professional newspaper twice a week and allow students to gain valuable experience and a little spending money.

I feel the Spectrum is a great place to improve existing journalistic skills and develop new ones. It is a steppingstone for many journalists-to-be. The experience of working on a university newspaper is a very valuable part of a new journalist's resume.

Producing a paper twice a week is a huge job that involves many people. Without everyone's cooperation, that job would be impossible.

Cooperation, a sense of responsibility and professionalism are all qualities the students on the staff need. They don't need to be professional in the sense of business suits, but the manner in which they go about doing their work.

Many of my friends, instructors and classmates can tell you that I often miss classes to finish working on a project or a particular job. This is a personal choice that I would not dream of forcing upon someone else. Completing a job is much more important to me than attending a seminar or starting something completely new and never finishing anything.

Some of my interests include swimming, traveling, reading music, biking and walking. My interest in these is mainly for relaxation I find in them.

Finally, if you have any story, thesis, Who's Who, or editor ideas, please let me know and can discuss them.

At this point in time there are openings for a sports editor, a editor, typographer and numerous writers and photographers. Stop by the Spectrum office and fill out an application if you are interested. Even if you don't get hired right away, there are always openings later on.

City bus service fails student needs

Where can you go to see a current movie, go roller skating, go bowling, and go shopping? The answer is the West Acres area. In this small area we have: West Acres Bowl, West Acres Hotel, Cinema VI, and West Acres shopping center. For many students Friday and Saturday nights are restricted to on-campus activities.

Coming from a big city I am used to a good mass transit system. Here in Fargo we have the MAT system (Metro Area Transit). This transit system is made for the business man. The last route is generally run about 8:30 p.m.

If one wants to go to the show it must be the early show. Likewise on Saturday the routes are narrowed even more. The mass transit system fails to meet the needs of the students at SU.

How can the problem of attending off-campus activities be solved? In a smaller city such as Fargo or Moorhead we must rely on a different transit system. Presently Moorhead State University runs a bus to West Acres on weekends at night. This bus is known as "The Fun Bus." From this vicinity we have shopping, movies, bowling, skating, and fine restaurants. This benefits the students in that they are given a great variety of alternatives.

The next question is that of implementation. One suggestion would be to use the bus that Student Senate has provided as an escort service around campus Sunday through Thursday. This mini-bus is unused on Friday and Saturday nights. This would leave a question of drivers. Drivers would be volunteers who are also going out to West Acres for one of the activities. The most important part, that of cost, could be brought to just about nil by charging a minimal cost such as fifty cents to cover the cost of gas and other miscellaneous costs.

Obviously to get this plan implemented it is necessary to speak to the Student Senate. If enough support is shown we can bring a full proposal to the Senate to be ratified.

Remember finals? Let's make it easier

Editor's note: This was received after we published the last issue of winter quarter, but we published it, assuming all students have not yet forgotten the trials and tribulations of finals week.

It's that time of the quarter again and everyone I know is in overdrive. The typewriters are clicking like mad, as the last minute papers are being written. Some students are trying to figure out their grades so they will know if they should go home over quarter break or enlist in the Army. For a lucky few seniors school is over. No more papers or cramming all night for finals. But for the rest of us there are those dreaded finals to deal with.

The majority of us have five finals of which three or more are comprehensive. As usual these tests will take place over a period of four days. For those really lucky students there will be two tests given in one day. For the most part many of us will study like crazy. The schedule for the typical final week is as follows:

1. Get up at six in the morning and cram until the test.
2. Pray on the way over to the test.
3. Take the test.
4. Unwind for two hours of sleep.
5. Study until one or two in the morning.
6. Go to bed.
7. Get up and start all over.

Looking at this I question just what is the purpose of finals? Is it to see how much pressure we can take before cracking? Maybe it's a way in which the faculty can make us suffer.

How about a way in which they can bring our grades down? If you picked any of the above you were wrong. Finals are given to see how much we have learned over the quarter; sounds funny, right? What about all those other tests we've taken? Didn't they tell what we've learned? Maybe those were just for practice. I think it's unfair to the students to be expected to take five major tests in four days. How do they expect us to show what we have really learned? All they see is how well we can cram and do under pressure. For many of us finals will take away that A or B that we worked hard all quarter to get. Some other alternatives for taking finals might be:

1. Excuse those students that have A's from taking the test.
2. Reduce the weight of the final to only 10 percent of the grade.
3. Require that no more than one final be taken a day.
4. Let the students choose if he or she would like to take the final. If they elect not to then let them keep the grade they have.

These are just a few suggestions about how taking finals could be made more fair to students. I feel that if the staff and students would get together and work on it finals wouldn't be so bad.

N.D. Child Abuse Day proclaimed to recognize fund-raising efforts Governor Allen I. Olson proclaimed St. Patrick's Day as North Dakota Child Abuse Day in recognition of a one-day nationwide fund-raising effort by Kappa Delta Sorority.

Members of the SU chapter will be collecting donations noon to 5 p.m., Saturday at West Acres Mall.

They will join thousands of Kappa Delta collegiate and alumnae members across the country in the one-day campaign to benefit local affiliates and chapters of the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, the sorority's newest philanthropy.

A full 80 percent of the funds collected will remain in local community child abuse prevention programs and the remaining 20 percent will go to the NCPCA for nationwide public-awareness programs.

Kappa Delta Sorority began supporting the NCPCA in 1980, and since then has contributed more than $10,000 to support child abuse prevention efforts in 30 states.

Chastity vows clash with desires in Greeley's 'Ascent Into Hell'

Kevin Cassella

Andrew Greeley's "Ascent into Hell" is written in the same vein as his previous books, "The Cardinal Sins" (1981) and "Thy Brother's Wife" (1982)—a sizzling dose of sex combined with a religious vocation.

"Ascent into Hell," Father Greeley's third novel, is similar to his others. It is set primarily in modern Chicago with characters from Irish Catholic clergy, their families, parishioners and colleagues. The book's plot centers on a topic familiar to Greeley—conflicts arising as priests, and nuns in this case, attempt to reconcile their vows of chastity with sexual desires.

The main character is Hugh Donlon, promised at birth to the priesthood by his father who made a vow so that God would spare his critically-ill wife.

The story begins during the summer of 1954 when seminarian Donlon suffers only one of many bouts with temptation.

Maria, the object of his desire, is a 17-year-old friend of Donlon's sister who is visiting the Donlon family. The Donlons see her as a threat to their son's vocation and Maria is whisked from his presence. However, Donlon manages to see his "countess" on and off throughout the book.

Without serious second thoughts about this vocation, he becomes a dedicated but miserable priest. For the next seven years, he serves at St. Jarlath's under a psychotic pastor.

While at St. Jarlath's, he becomes involved with a group of dissatisfied parishioners trying to get rid of the pastor. He is also caught necking with one of the women in the parish. The pastor fires Donlon, which marks his slide from the priesthood.

For Greeley, it marks the beginning of multiple sub-plots. Donlon beds a liberated nun, marries and becomes a member of the Chicago Board of Trade. As the story ends, Maria rescues him from the prison sentence for a crime he didn't commit.

The book doesn't affect the reader as much as it could, considering the subject material. Greeley's characters tend to be a little shallow and when their development slackens, he moves the story along with yet another crisis.

Three Faces of Eve is ballet planned for Red River Dance

"The Three Faces of Eve," a full-length contemporary ballet directed and choreographed by Eddie Gasper with original musical composition by David Ferreira, features guest artist Kathryn Gasper in the title role of Eve. This ballet explores the struggle of a woman coping with a multiple personality disorder. The emotional depth and drama of Eve's three separate personalities are portrayed through dance. The concept and choreography of this ballet was created especially for Kathryn Gasper.

"Growing Pains," a full-length ballet portraying the trials and tribulations of a young girl's adolescence is performed to an original musical composition by Henry Gwiazda.

The lively concert tap number, "Uptown/Downtown," will also be included in this spring concert, brought back to the stage by audience demand. A new work, set to the music of "At the Ballet," from the award-winning musical "Chorus Line," provides a concert finale.

The entire production is choreographed and under the direction of Eddie and Kathryn Gasper.

Concert performances are at 8:15 p.m. at Festival Concert Hall, March 29 through April 1. An additional 2:15 matinee performance on April 1 is also scheduled.

MANFRED MANN'S EARTH BAND

SOMEWHERE IN AFRICA

'Afrika': so what and wow

By Chris Reyerson

The first side of Manfred Mann's Earth Band's latest album is nothing but rehashed songs that neither Manfred Mann nor his band had anything to do with, except for the recording of them. It is a waste of album space and not worth reviewing.

The second side of the album gives this record its merit.

Side two of "Somewhere In Afrika" is quite a story.

Most of us are not too familiar with the apartheid caste system of South Africa. We all know it exists, but we never really hear about it. Through his songs, Mann is saying what it is like for the native blacks who suffer under the system.

During the summer of 1982, Mann went to South Africa and traveled among the native people of the country. In doing so, he discovered the apartheid system through those who are oppressed by it. Mann spent the entire summer recording the folk songs and chants of the native people to incorporate into songs of his own.

"Brothers and Sisters Of Africa," the first song of four by Mann, sets the theme of the rest. This driving song, through its lyrics, portrays how the blacks feel about the whites of South Africa. Mann does a good job with his lyrics, showing that the native people of South Africa realize that "the words they (whites) use are just a game" and that it is the black people who hold the key to South Africa.

The second song "To Bantustan?" is more on the line with Mann's funky style of music. The song explains how to rape a man of his pride by stripping him of his freedom, taking away his wife and children and sending them to one of the Bantustan areas where women and children live without their men for months.

Even though this song's music has the typical Mann style, the contempt and anger expressed by the lyrics cannot be hidden. This is the best of Mann's four songs.

In all of the songs Mann wrote, I heard background chants of "Amandla, Awethu." Amandla is the Zulu word for "power" and Awethu is the word for "is ours." Together, these two words form the black power slogan used by blacks in South Africa wherever there is oppression.

"Koze Kobenini" is an African folk song, which Mann recorded, that has only three short lines, yet it encompasses all that the blacks in South Africa endure. The approximate translation is:

"How long must we wait?"

How long will they keep killing our leaders?"

How long must we suffer?"

It is not hard to hear the patient energy of the song, even though it is not written (or sung) in English.

The final song, "Brother And Sisters Of Azania," is Mann's conclusion to his story. The lyrics are much the same as the first song, except there are some additional verses. "Brothers And Sisters Of Azania" is Mann's way of saying there is hope in the future for the blacks of South Africa. As Mann puts it, "the chains of time will break the man that holds the key, Amandla, Awethu."

My congratulations to Manfred Mann. It is rare for a rock star to be a humanitarian too.

Bison track teams proved talents at NCC meet recently

By Bamson Fadipe

SU men's and women's track teams proved themselves to be the best team in the North Central Conference three weeks ago at University of South Dakota in Vermillion, S.D., as the Bison men scored 100 points to defend its conference title.

The lady Bison also pulled off a big upset when it outscored Mankato State University 119 - 80 to win its first door title.

Mankato State Maverick was the runnerup in the men's division.

The men's track coach Don Larson and Sue Patterson, women's coach, were named the coach of the year.

The women set four new NCC records which one of them is in shot put. Renne Aalund tossed her shot to victory with 45 feet, 11 inches.

SU, MSU ballplayers on Texas tour

By Tom Stock

The SU baseball team left for Texas with some newly acquired talent on its annual southern spring trip. Joining the team this spring will be three transfer students from MSU.

Last year MSU decided it didn't have the funds for a baseball team, so it cut the baseball program. SU took advantage of this by acquiring Kevin Subart, a senior catcher, Brad Schwab, a sophomore shortstop and Steve Larson a sophomore pitcher.

Normally, athletes transferring to different colleges would have to wait a year without participating in athletic events, but since MSU cut its baseball program, Subart, Schwab and Larson will be eligible to participate when the Bison take the field on Sunday, against Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, Texas.

George Ellis, head baseball coach at SU, said these three players will be strong factors for the SU baseball program.

"All three will be starters," Ellis said. "There's no question about that."

Kevin Subart was a two-year starter for MSU. He hit about .270 during his two years with the Dragons. Subart considers himself to be a defensive catcher.

He said he was disturbed that he had to transfer schools during his senior year in college.

"I only knew a few players at SU, but the team seems easy going and friendly."

Subart said he hopes to leave some of his experience with the younger players at SU.

"I'm excited about playing for SU," he said. "If I wasn't, I wouldn't have gone through the hassle to be here."

Brad Schwab, another ex-Dragon baseball player said he was disappointed when MSU cut its baseball program.

Schwab said SU should have a good team this year, with good hitting and solid defense.

Last year Brian Bachmeier was the starting shortstop for SU and he led the Bison in hitting with a batting average of .342.

This year Ellis has moved Bachmeier to second base to make room for Schwab.

"Brad has the qualities to be a great shortstop," Ellis said.

Steve Larson said when MSU cut its baseball program he felt resentment toward the whole school.

"I was planning on going to MSU for four years, but I have to play baseball and SU was my first choice."

Larson said he is glad that SU plays its home games at Jack Williams Stadium, because he played legion baseball for Fargo at Jack Williams.

"Last year Steve lost a 1-0 game to St. Cloud State (University)," Ellis said. "This gives us an idea as to what kind of pitcher he is."

Larson said SU is more team-oriented than MSU and he likes his new teammates.

"The players here are friendly and easy to get along with," he said. "They're the kind of teammates I like to have."

Ellis said he is sorry that MSU had to take the approach they took.

"I feel bad for MSU, but I'm happy to have these people," Ellis said. "They'll make a significant contribution to our program."
