Recognizing Student Distress in Online Classes

 Recognizing Student Distress in Online Classes

As the semester now proceeds in an all online class format, how can you as a faculty member identify possible mental health issues in your students and help them connect to needed resources when you aren't meeting with them in person?

Features and News:

Workshop: Qualtrics Basics and Forms

April 8, 2020 | 1 p.m.
Via Zoom

Join Linda Charlton-Gunderson from the Group Decision Center for a workshop on the basics of creating a form using the Qualtrics software. No matter what your level of experience with Qualtrics is, you will pick up new tips and tricks for creating forms efficiently. Follow along as we prepare a standard "contact us" form from start to finish and learn how to add forms to TYPO3-based websites. Have a sample of the forms you need to create available and we can offer additional assistance as time allows.

NDSU Bookstore's Goal is 100% Course Material Reporting for Summer and Fall Semesters

Did you know - ALL COURSES at NDSU must have course materials on file with the NDSU Bookstore? If students aren't required to purchase any materials, you still need to report that. Currently, only 27 of 97 departments have a 100% completion rate. To ensure NDSU is in compliance with this law, the NDSU Bookstore's goal is a 100% participation in course materials documentation for summer and fall semesters.

Watch for an email from the NDSU Bookstore with a link to the new course materials ordering system. If you have questions about your course materials, contact the NDSU Bookstore for assistance.

K-12 Summer Professional Development Brochure Now Available Online

If you know a K-12 educator or administrator who needs professional development classes this summer, please refer them to the 2020 NDSU K-12 Professional Development brochure. This brochure offers more than 70 high-quality, timely, and relevant classes for K-12 teachers nationwide.

And remember, there is still time to offer an online professional development class this summer.

Caring for Yourself in Uncertain Times

For most of us, what was considered our normal daily way of life has changed dramatically over the past few weeks. Schools have gone to on-line instruction, people are being told to use social distancing and to shelter in place, and restaurants have been forced to close. These changes are bound to lead to a variety of intense feelings for many of us, with those people already suffering from anxiety and other mental health concerns likely to have more difficulties coping during this crisis.

NDSU Bookstore Offers FREE Access to Digital Materials

The NDSU Bookstore's primary responsibility is to ensure students have access to the materials they need to succeed in their courses. During this disruptive time for our campus, we are contributing to the incredible problem-solving we've seen over the past weeks by partnering with our digital course materials provider, VitalSource, and leading publishers, to launch VitalSource Helps. VitalSource Helps is a program that provides FREE access to eBooks to all NDSU students through May 25th. Students may begin accessing these materials today at bookshelf.vitalsource.com.

Instructional Design Team On-going Assistance

As the university continues to deliver courses in an online format, we encourage faculty to continue seeking assistance from the ITS Learning and Applied Innovation's instructional design team.

Also, be sure to review their teaching remotely webpage which includes important information for faculty and instructors teaching remotely.

Qualtrics Assistance - Significant Increase in Support Requests

Thank you for using our Qualtrics services. Due to a recent increase in online survey demand, associated with the COVID-19 interruption to on-campus services, there might be a slight delay in processing your request. However, please know that we are working as quickly as possible to complete all survey requests with the same quality we strive to uphold.

Student Emergency Support

With the rapid changes in the wake of the COVID-19 national emergency, some NDSU students are in need of technology to complete their coursework remotely, resources to meet basic needs, and travel assistance. During these uncertain times, your support is needed to help to equip students with the tools they need to successfully complete the semester.

About the Student Emergency Fund: The Student Emergency Fund has been established to assist students during unforeseen financial emergencies because we know our students are at a greater risk of leaving the university during times of crisis. By providing students with the resources they need during this challenging time, you'll help ensure they are able to stay committed to NDSU and continue their education.

Group Decision Center Temporary Closure

The Group Decision Center will temporarily be closed due to restrictions on gatherings of 10 or more people as well as social distancing guidelines. If you would like to set up an online facilitated meeting or have questions about future meetings, please contact Jerry Olson, manager of the Group Decision Center.
