ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY

The Department of Education was established late in 1907 or early 1908 “in conformity with the Nelson law, passed by congress in 1907, to the end that graduates of colleges who are otherwise prepared for teaching science, agriculture, domestic science, manual training, and the like may have pedagogical training...” (Catalogue, North Dakota Agricultural College, 1908-1909, p. 96). In 1917 the School of Education was established. In addition to the School of Education, the Department of Household

Management and Home Economics Education was created in 1922-1923; later the Department of Home Economics Education. In 1939, under the Division of Education, the Department of Education and Psychology was established. By 1955 the Department was part of the School of Applied Arts and Sciences. In 1963 the Institute of Education was created, specifically for teacher education and no longer affiliated with psychology. By 1980 the School of Education was re-established, with the purpose of coordinating all teacher education programs in the various colleges of the University. Agricultural Education was offered through the College of Agriculture through 1985, as of the 1986/88 catalog, it was offered through the School of Education. With the establishment of the College of Human Development and Education in 1992, the School of Education became part of the College and the Department of Home Economics Educations ceased to exist.
