

Fifth Floor

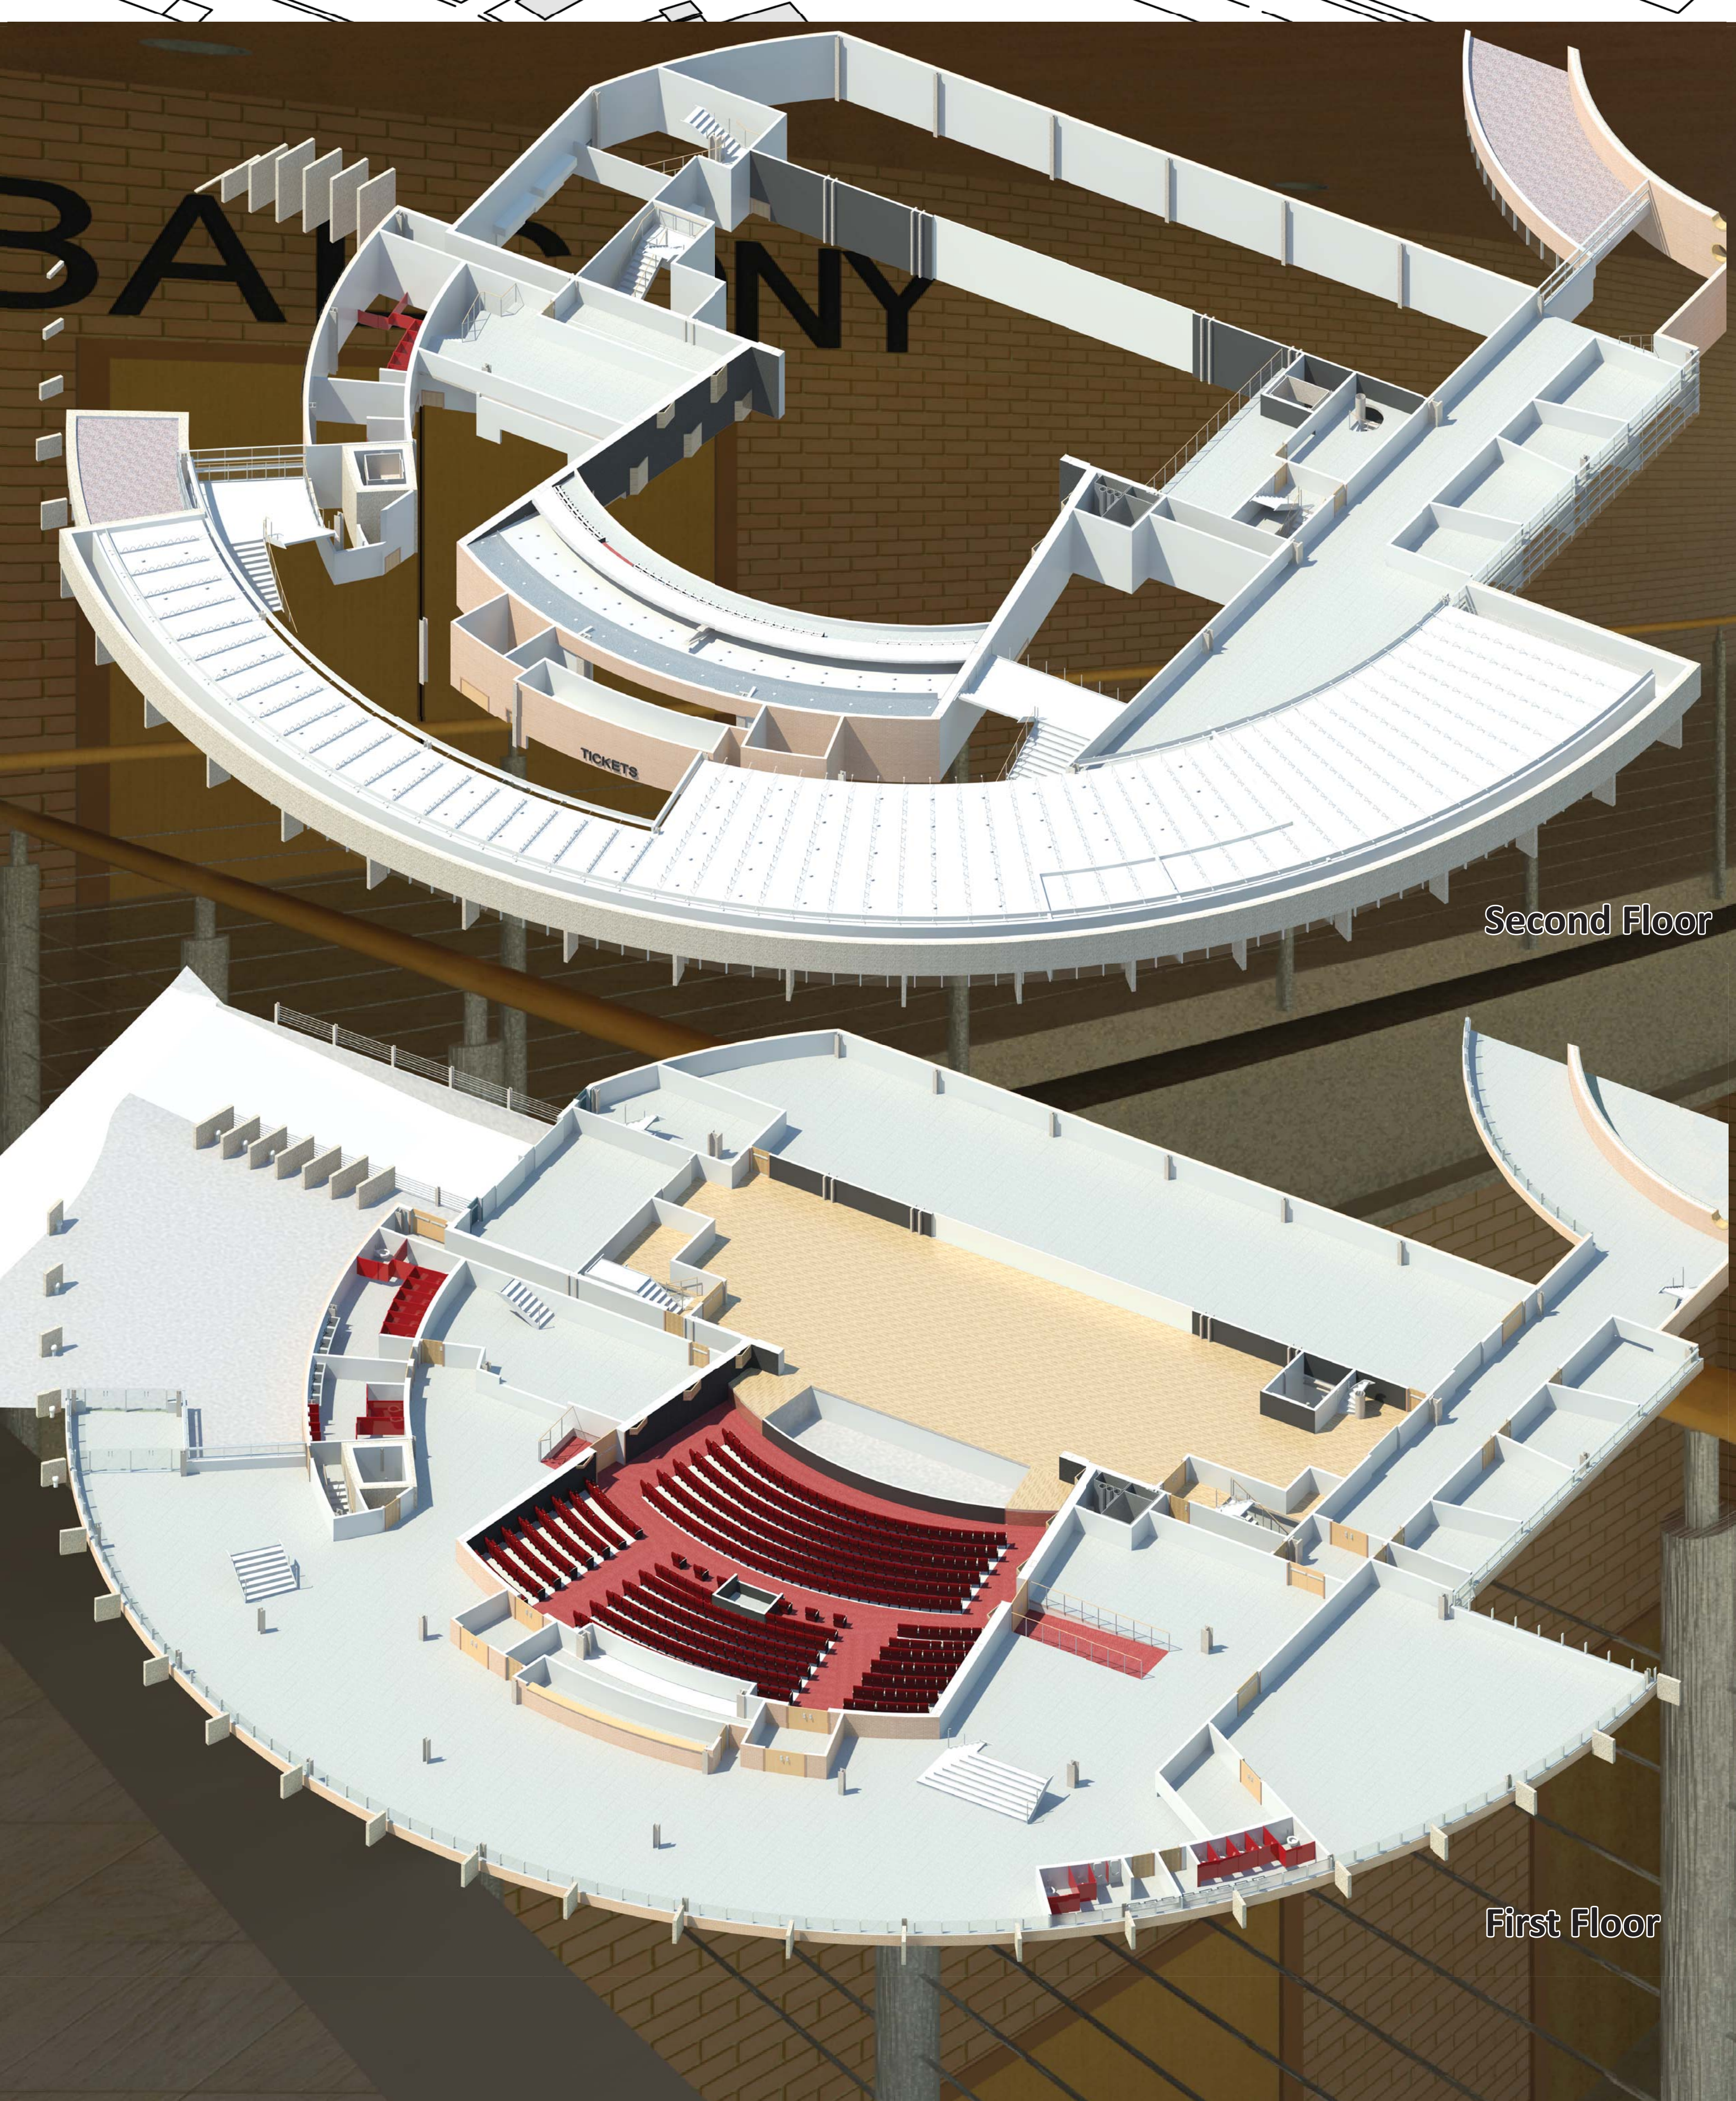

Fourth Floor

Third Floor

ART IN

Theater is a direct correlation between the arts, architecture, and the human body; making a direct connection between culture and the built form. Grand Forks, North Dakota has an ever expanding culture of fine arts; anchored in a strong educational foundation. This education is all encompassing and includes school day, weekend, and even summer programs. A new theater space in the school district provides a place to educate and share fine art and culture. The new theater provides room for future growth and flexibility to accommodate different performing arts. The theater provides a window for the community to experience performances as well as be educated through them. The space provides an opportunity for educators and professional performers to pass the best knowledge on to future generations of arts enthusiasts.

Second Floor

First Floor

John Holten
Arch 772 Design Thesis, Spring 2010
Department of Architecture and Landscape Architecture
North Dakota State University
Revit Architecture 2010

Mark Barnhouse
Department of Architecture and Landscape Architecture
North Dakota State University
Revit Architecture 2010

ARCHITECTURE

